On last Saturday night, July 19, we closed a very interesting meeting for this charge—Percy's Creek station, Woodville district, Mississippi Conference. The meeting was continued for eight consecutive days, with an increase in the numbers of our congregations from beginning to end, and the meeting grew in interest from the first service until the final amen. Our altar was crowded nightly with anxious penitents inquiring the way of salvation, and eight out of the number realized the truth of the text, "That being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." The persons converted were all young people from the age of twelve to twenty years; and it is from this field we are to recruit our armies to do battle for God and his church.

During the meeting we had nine accessions to the church, with more to follow. The church has been vastly benefitted, and more thoroughly equipped for successful work in the Master's vineyard.

On Monday, July 13, during the progress of our meeting, Bro. McDonald held our third Quarterly Conference, and the reports indicated a healthy condition of the charge, spiritually and financially. The pastors' and presiding elder's salaries have been met in full to date, and all the collections ordered by the Annual Conference have been provided for, and every dollar will be paid. A praying charge is generally a paying church, for it requires a certain degree of piety to stimulate the membership of a charge to be cheerful and liberal contributors to the cause of God.

I am greatly indebted to President H. Walter Featherstun, of McGehee College, for faithful services rendered at my meeting. He preached to the edification and satisfaction of my people, and in the demonstration and power of the Spirit. I would say here that the female college over which Bro. Featherstun presides is the institution of learning for the education of the daughters of South Mississippi and that portion of Louisiana adjacent to said college. The college, for its next session, which begins early in September, will be as thoroughly equipped for good, efficient work as any female college in Mississippi. Mrs. Featherstun, who presides over the art department, is efficient and thorough in all the phases of that branch of college education. The college is a Christian school, to all intents and purposes, and some of the purest Christian characters have been formed and molded under the training of said school. Give us schools that are decidedly Christian for the training and education of our daughters.

W. W. HURST.

PATTERSON AND MORGAN CITY.

Our third quarterly meeting is over. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. A. Miller, has filled all his appointments, and he has done good and faithful work, acceptable to God and the people. The third quarter has been a season of much religious interest among us. The services have been kept up almost every day. During the quarter seventy-four persons have been taken into the church, eighteen infant children have been baptized, and four adult persons. During the year to date, eighty-three names have been added to the roll of members. Twenty-nine children have been baptized, and five adults.

In June we held a ten days' meeting at Patterson. Rev. R. M. Blocker was with us seven days, and did all the preaching. On the sixth day and the seventh there was a religious interest in the community, such as probably has not been known here since the days of Robert H. Read and M. A. Cravens. This hopeful state of things met a sudden collapse by the unexpected departure of the principal worker, Bro. Blocker, who was called to see his sick daughter at Mansfield. Rev. H. H. Ahrens came and preached three excellent sermons; but the downward trend of the meeting could not be arrested. Though all that we hoped for was not realized, yet much good was done. Nineteen members were added to the church, all of whom were adult persons, and most of them heads of families.

B. F. ALEXANDER.

RAYMOND, MISS.

We were so sorry to note, after reaching the parsonage at Steens Creek, on our way to Harrisville to assist Bro. Robinson in a series of meetings, that we found his dear companion very sick, indeed, with typhoid-malarial fever. She was too sick for her beloved husband to leave her to attend the meeting. So Bro. Robinson sent his son Frank, as pilot, and wife and myself followed him until we reached Harrisville, about eleven o'clock Saturday, and preached to a good Saturday congregation; also preached Saturday night and Sunday morning to the largest congregation I have preached to in about two years. You can not imagine how glad I was to see Bro. R. S. Galo walking up the aisle Sunday night in company with his loving Christian wife. Bro. Galo and myself continued the meeting two days longer, with a result of only eight accessions. But the church was seemingly greatly revived, and many conversions. Indeed, we were glad to be there. We returned to the parsonage and found Sister Robinson still very low; perhaps no better. She has been very sick nineteen days.

Brethren, let us pray for Bro. Robinson in this sad time of bereavement, and that his dear companion may be restored to her wonted health, God willing.

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

PERIODICALS.

—THE SOUTHERN CULTIVATOR holds its own, and gives its readers much to read and think of during this sultry month. Atlanta, Ga., Price, $1.

—THE PREACHERS' MAGAZINE, for July, is filled with good things—sermons, sketches, homilletics, etc. W. B. Ketcham, New York. Price, $1.50.

—MUSICAL HERALD will prove interesting to those who love talks about music and musical people. New England Conservatory, Boston. Price, $1.

—THE AFRICAN is the only magazine in English that is exclusively devoted to all Africa. It is published by Dr. C. E. Welch, Vineland, N. J., at $1 a year.

—OUR DAY has articles from Cyrus Hamlin, W. F. Crafts, J. E. Rankin; but Joseph Cook is the chief man. Our Day Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $2.50.

—SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, BUILDERS' EDITION. This is a monthly of great value to builders and those interested in the construction of houses. Munn and Co., New York. Price, $2.50.

—MAGAZINE OF ART, for August, has much in pictures and words to interest the lovers of art. This is the best of its kind that we see. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $3.50.

—LADIES' HOME JOURNAL is a marvel in its make-up. The home-keepers will be pleased with this monthly, with its varied and sprightly contents, and only one dollar a year. Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

—THE HOME MAKER is another good one of a somewhat different character, and edited by Jennie June. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, $2.

—THE QUIVER. We have often spoken in commendation of this monthly. The August number is not a whit behind any of its predecessors in literary merit. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

—THE GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS has a varied table of contents this month, devoting considerable space to mission work in the United States, Japan, China, Russia. This monthly is published by Hunt and Eaton, New York. Price, $1.50.

—THE CENTURY, for July, has a table of contents from which every class of readers may take and find mental food and refreshment. July, with its heat and dust, may be made bearable if you have the Century for company. Century Company, New York. Price, $4.

—MISSIONARY REVIEW. This splendid missionary monthly is always full of the best literature on that important subject. If every preacher and official in the church would read this periodical, the missionary status of our church would soon change. Funk and Wagnalls, New York. Price, $2.

—POPULAR SCIENCE MONTHLY, for August, has a varied bill of fare for lovers of science to digest during this long month. Prof. Huxley and Mr. Gladstone both appear in this number, and there are several other famous men on the program. D. Appleton and Co., New York. Price, $5.

—THE FORUM, for July, sustains the reputation it has established. This number opens with The Character and Policy of Emperor William II., and this is followed by interesting articles from able pens. This monthly is now sought and read by the best thinkers in the land. Forum Publishing Company, New York. Price, $5.

—The twenty-first Summer number of THE SCHOOL JOURNAL (N. Y.) exhibits an enterprise in the matter of educational journalism that deserves congratulation. The increased interest of the public concerning education finds expression here. Better methods of teaching are pointed out, the teachers are urged to make professional advancement, educational ideas are discussed in a forcible and dignified manner. This number has numerous advertisements, which of themselves show there is a strong current of progress entering the school-room. The Journal deserves high praise; it is evidently a powerful factor among the educational forces of the country. Published by E. L. Kellogg and Co., Chicago and New York. Price, $2.50.

Preach, pray and do you whole duty, and leave your salary to God and the people. If you must starve, starve like a hero, a saint, a martyr. Don't go through the world grumbling, doubting, disbelieving. Do God's work, and look to him for your wages, temporal and spiritual.—Western North Carolina Methodist.

The Lesson Story.

BY CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, D.D., LL.D.

Shortly after you turn westward from the broad plain which runs north and south along the east sides of Mounts Gerizim and Ebal into the pleasant side valley which separates these two heights, and leads on to Nablus, the ancient Sheehem, a low heap of stones and rubbish, surrounding a breast-high circle of rough old wall, is seen on the left, a little lower than the pathway. It is Jacob's well—the only spot of which we can feel sure that it brings before us the very footprints of our blessed Lord. We know that he moved about in other localities, but we can not get close to him in any of them; whereas at Jacob's well we are certain that we tread the very ground on which he stood nearly nineteen hundred years ago.

Our Lord was on his way north from Judea, and, having turned into the little valley of Sheohem, had sent his disciples up to the city to "buy food," though few Jews would have done so, as it was a Samaritan place, and "food" bought in it was defiled by the fact of its passing through Samaritan hands, or having grown on Samaritan soil. From this feeling, indeed, it was only when "he must needs go" through the hated district, that a Jew entered it at all; and even when he did so he carried a "wallet" or "basket" containing food which was Levitically "clean," to avoid eating anything belonging to Samaris. But Jesus had taught his followers greater charity, and was about to give them still another lesson in the same direction.

Sitting down by the well, wearied with his journey, to wait till they returned, a Samaritan woman, from the village of Sychar, now Askar, on the eastern spur of Ebal, just round the corner of the valley, came to draw water. It was about noon, and the heat was great, so that to drink clear cold water would be most refreshing. "Give me to drink," said Jesus to the woman, who saw in his dress, or heard in his accent, that he was a Jew. Such a request from one of his nation astonished her. "How is it," said she, "that thou, being a Jew, askest drink of me, who am a Samaritan woman?" "For," adds St. John, "Jews have no dealings with Samaritans." "If thou knewest the gift of God," replied Jesus, "and who it is that saith to thee, 'Give me to drink,' thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given the living water." The well yielded only well-water; and the water of running streams, which was called "living water," no doubt from its motion, was thought much better.

The woman, fancying he spoke of giving her water of this more highly esteemed kind, forthwith rejoined, "Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep; from whence then hast thou that living water? Art thou greater than our father Jacob, who gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his sons, and his cattle?"

The conversation had served its purpose; for Christ was now able to tell her of water which he could give of which no one who drank would ever thirst again, since it would become in him a well of water springing up unto eternal life. He spoke, of course, of the great spiritual truths he could teach her, but she was too dull in such matters to catch his meaning. "Sir," said she with a touching simplicity, "give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come all the way hither to draw." "Go, call thy husband, and come hither," said Jesus. "I have no husband," replied she. "True," continued Christ, "thou hast had five, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: this hast thou said truly." Wives are often divorced repeatedly even now for the slightest causes, but how could the speaker have known all about her? "Sir," said she, "I perceive that thou art a prophet. Our fathers worshipped on that great mountain, Gerizim, and we worship on it still. We think it far holier than any place else; but you say that the temple in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship."

Never was speech more fruitful in the reply it drew forth; for the words of Christ in answer to hers sounded the knell of merely local worship, and, with it, of all human priesthood and ritual systems. "Woman," said he, "believe me, the hour cometh, when neither on this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall ye worship the father. Ye worship that which ye know not" (for you have not the teaching among you of the long line of God's prophets, but only of the books of Moses, and thus can not know God in the fullness of his self-revelations): "we (Jews) worship that which we know; for salvation is from the Jews (the Messiah, who brings salvation, is from the Jews, not from the Samaritans). But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth: for such doth the Father seek to be his worshippers. God is a spirit: and they that worship him must worship in spirit and truth."

True worship was thus declared to be not any multiplication of mechanical acts of reverence—either rites, ceremonies, precision in fixed times, limitation to fixed places, formal utterances or postures, or any mere outward acts of what kind soever—but a principle in our higher spiritual nature controlling our thoughts, affections, emotions, and acts—the sincere expression of a sincere conviction, the life of God in the soul of man. The woman could only answer that these were deep things, but the Messiah, when he came, would declare all. "Woman," said Christ, "I that speak unto thee am he."—Sunday-school Times.

Official statistics show that the annual death rate in the United States in every thousand persons is less than in any other country, being only 18 in 1000, while in Italy, for instance, it is 30.

No one can overestimate the influence exerted in this direction by such valuable remedial agents as Mansfield's Magic Arnica Liniment, which is acknowledged by even the most conservative physicians as a thoroughly reliable panacea against pain, available in a convenient form.

It is a handy remedy to have in the house, and no family should be without it, for there is not an hour nor a day, but pain, or disease of some sort, may come when least expected. Only those who have passed through a trying experience of this character can fully estimate the value of having an efficient remedial agent at hand in such an emergency.

This valuable medicament is as quick in its effects upon animals as upon man, and there is hardly a trouble that afflicts our dumb and serviceable neighbors, that is not responsive to this wonderful preparation. It will cure pain of any kind in a horse as quickly as in a man. Try it and see. If your druggist is out of it, send to the Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Louisiana Notes.

The business men of Shreveport have organized a branch of the Merchants' Mercantile Agency of Chicago.

The police jury, of Ascension parish, have appropriated $500 for the Interstate Mississippi River and Levee Association.

Work has commenced on the piers of the Houston, Central Arkansas and Northern railroad bridge, which is to cross Red river just above Alexandria.

Gen. J. B. Gordon, general of the Association of Confederate Veterans, has appointed Col. C. Moorman an adjutant general, with headquarters at New Orleans.

The Caucasian has this:

An exhaustive trial of Marston's gin attachment this morning at the Shreveport Gin Factory, in the roughest, dirtiest, dustiest cotton, full of whole bulls, stamps it a perfect success. The sample made to-day will class low middling and had it been ginned on an ordinary gin it would not be classed above low ordinary. It can be seen any day at the gin factory.

The Webster Signal has this significant paragraph:

It is reported here that there is a certain individual traveling over the parish selling jewelry to negroes, and taking their notes in payment with the promise that these notes will not be taken up in case the debtors vote for the Lottery. This report comes to us from responsible parties, and we have no inclination to doubt it.

Plaquemine forges to the front as the leading newspaper town of the State outside of New Orleans, with a roster of two dailies and four weeklies. The Home Journal launched a small daily edition this week; the Brusly Light has moved from Brusly Landing to Plaquemine, and will shed the beams of its Daily Light on that enterprising place, and a stock company of colored men recently established there the weekly Iberville Pilot.—Donaldsonville Chief.

Superintendent Symthe, of the United States Mint in this city, has received an order for $100,000 coined into dimes, and he began the coining of these little shiners last week. This is the first coining of dimes here since 1855. The superintendent expects to turn out 100,000 dimes a day. It is said that it takes ten times as much labor to coin a dollar's worth of dimes as it takes to coin a dollar.

The contractors on the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf railroad are making rapid progress. Grading to Red river will be completed by Aug. 15. All the material necessary to complete the road to Alexandria is lying ready for the construction train, which is now busily engaged laying rails. The location of the line to Marble City, in Winn parish, will be completed within two weeks, when the work northward will proceed.

We, the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

The Water Valley Progress says:

There are 815 registered voters in Water Valley alone, which ought to give us a population of over 4,000.

Nine years ago Franklin county was $4,000 in debt. To-day there is $5,000 in the treasury, with no outstanding obligations.

The assessment rolls of Attala county show a valuation of $867,524 in personal property. This is an increase of $40,564 over last year.

The Board of Mississippi Levee Commissioners, at their recent meeting in Greenville, reduced the tax on cotton from $2 to $1.50 per bale.

Profs. Boyd and Caldwell have been induced to move their school from Plattsburg to Louisville, the county seat of Winston, where preparations have been made for a large school. Louisville is fortunate.—College Notes in Lexington Bulletin.

We see from the Clarion-Ledger that our good friend, H. H. Hines, of Jackson, has been raising some good-sized tomatoes, one dozen of which weighed eighteen pounds and ten ounces. Good for Altch.

The Water Valley Progress says:

Vigorous efforts are being made for a new tabernacle, enlarged and improved, at the camp ground, and the indications are that one of the most successful meetings will be held there some time in September.

The Meridian Fair will be held on October 19 to 24, inclusive. The grounds are to be improved, the stand is to be improved, and gambling is to be prohibited, and this, the second, is to be better than the first annual fair.

Hon. Frederic Speed, of Vicksburg, is being urged by his friends upon the attention of President Harrison as a man well qualified to fill the position of United States Circuit Judge of Mississippi, in place of Judge Hill, who, after many years of honorable service, is about to retire.

The registration books of the voters of Madison county closed finally on July 4, showing a total registration of 1,532 voters. Of this number 1,200 are whites, and 332 are colored, and under the new Constitution, at least one-half of the negroes registered will fail to qualify.

A dispatch from Jackson says:

The dismantling of the Presbyterian Church, a substantial brick edifice built in 1848, will begin to-morrow, to make room for a commodious and handsome building to be erected on the same site. The last services were held in the old church to-day by Rev. Dr. John Hunter, who has officiated there as pastor for over thirty-three successive years. It was a sad event to many, and brought up hallowed recollections among the worshippers.

Some beautiful samples of iron ore have been exhibited at Natchez that were brought from Brandywine, Claiborne county, Miss. Parties who have examined it pronounce it the same as the Alabama ore, and as rich in iron. It is said to have been found in paying quantities, the stratum being some twenty feet thick and a mile in width. Specimens of lead ore were also exhibited that came from the same locality.

The Democrat-Star notes these facts of church progress in Scranton:

The Presbyterian Church at this place, Mr. J. L. Ostrom builder, is nearing completion, so far as the present contract goes. The Baptist Church has its frame up and weather-boarded, and if the workmen progress as well as they have been, it will soon be finished.

Rev. D. O. Byers preached Sunday afternoon in the Methodist Church to quite a good congregation. After preaching, it was also arranged that a meeting of the members be held, to hear and discuss the report of the building and finance committees, and discuss plans for raising additional funds for completing the new church edifice, upon which considerable progress has been made.

The First Sunday-School in Mississippi.

At our District Conference it was said that the first Sunday-school organized in Mississippi was organized in Natchez sixty-one years ago; but in 1822 I attended a Sunday-school fifteen miles east of Natchez, when about seven years of age, taught by a man and his lady, by the name of John T. Miller. There was about twenty or twenty-five scholars in attendance. The gentleman owned a plantation and taught in his own house. I do not know how long it lasted; but, at least, one year. I could not testify as to what denomination the teachers were. They were New Yorkers.

JOHN G. GUICE.

McNair, Miss.

In the midst of the Frith of Forth, as you sail in the Atlantic steamer towards the port of Glasgow, you are struck with a regular pyramidal elevation, rising abruptly out of the waters, and very properly called Sugar Loaf Mountain. There it has stood during all the historic ages. The waves have surged about it. At times, in raging tempests, they have seemed to cover it; but there it stands, as perfect in form to-day as when God called it up from the depths below. The waves have but beaten themselves to pieces against its sides, simply smoothing them and rendering them more regular and beautiful. So Christ's true church, made up of sincere believers, has stood since he planted it upon a rock. The "gates of hell" have raged against it in vain; they have constantly fallen back into destruction, leaving her beautiful proportions unmarred, only brightened by the contact. "Heaven and earth shall pass away," our Lord declared when upon the earth, "but my words shall not pass away."—Zion's Herald.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

There is no more useful or elegant article than Ayer's Hair Vigor—the most popular and economical hair-dressing in the market. It causes the hair to grow abundantly and retain the beauty and texture of youth; prevents baldness, heals troublesome humors of the scalp and keeps it clean, cool, and healthy. Both ladies and gentlemen everywhere prefer Ayer's Hair Vigor to any other dressing for the hair. Mrs. Lydia O. E. Pitts-ton, Mo., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time, and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and falling hair, so that I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor, my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor to any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair."

THE LAST DAYS!

A Text-Book on the Second Coming of Christ and Events which shall be Hereafter.

Compiled by JOHN E. RODD, New Orleans.

This is a most captivating and wonderfully instructive little work on this glorious coming event. This event is of such great moment that it is mentioned 318 times in the New Testament, or once in every 25 verses. It seems to have fallen to Mr. Rodd's good fortune to classify these passages under proper headings and in an intelligent manner, and in doing so he has done a great service to the Christian world.

This book contains but fourteen short chapters, and they are all Scripture quotations, prefaced by a few lines, only, of introductory remarks; but, as a convenient TEXT BOOK upon this subject, its value and usefulness can hardly be overestimated.

52 pages; paper cover; only 5 cents each; 50 cents per dozen, post paid.

Missionary Troubles in China.

The note of our correspondent from China, in another column, refers briefly to the recent outbreak in Middle China against the missionaries and foreigners generally. The papers referred to by our correspondent contain full accounts of the riots. It seems that the immediate cause of the outbreak was this: A missionary had picked up four little orphans in the country and was carrying them in baskets. A street lounger, finding out what was in the baskets, raised the cry that the missionaries were taking the children to put out their eyes, and forthwith the attack was made upon the church. Only the ladies of the mission were present, their husbands being absent at different stations. The two ladies had much difficulty in escaping the fury of the mob, but finally succeeded by the help of friendly natives. Two gentlemen who came to the rescue were killed and their bodies left in the streets. These were not missionaries. This occurred at Wusuch, thirty miles above Kiukiang, on the Yangtze. At Kiukiang a threatening mob was promptly dispersed by the resolute determination of the foreign residents, and no serious damage was done. At Soochow, where one of our missions is located, things appeared to be very threatening, but every precaution having been taken to preserve the lives of the missionaries and to protect their property, when the rioters began their operations the officials began to make arrests and to inflict prompt punishment upon the leaders of the riot, and that had the effect to cool the frenzy of the mob before any serious damage was done. At Nanking, Hankow and Shanghai such vigorous preparations for defense had been made that no disturbance occurred. The government issued an imperial decree to the civil and military officials to punish all leaders of riots and all writers manufacturing rumors to mislead the people, and to devise measures for the protection of the lives and property of the merchants and missionaries. It is thought that this decree and the bold and resolute measures taken by foreign residents to protect themselves will have the effect to quiet the public mind.

Our readers will see that our missionaries stand in need of our sympathies and prayers, and we trust that earnest supplications will ascend everywhere in their behalf.

As to the origin of these troubles, see the article in another column taken from the North China Daily News, of June 12.

Rosedale, La.

A run into the Gros Tete country and a whole week's preaching, consisting of two services daily, was one of the writer's late experiences. We were loth to go, as it would deprive us of a much-coveted trip to the spot where the tides of Southern Methodism roll annually to meet those of the no less restless gulf; but it was a plain choice between duty and pleasure, and we remembered Jonah and went. A quick trip over the T. and P. brought us to Rosedale, our objective point, twenty-five miles north of Plaquemine on this line of road, and twenty miles northeast of Baton Rouge on the Central Louisiana, which we learn is soon to be completed to Lafayette and the rail system of that region. Here Norwood, the irrepressible, met us, and later we enjoyed all varieties of welcome from this most hospitable land. How those primeval shades did caress us as though they had long waited for the privilege, and the country flowers smile up at us from lane and lawn, and the great waving landscapes of field and forest break forth into laughter at our approach! And the people whom we never saw before and may never see again, but shall never forget, how they did open their hearts and take us in as though we had been in the true apostolical succession (if I am quite certain what that phrase means) or even a messenger from the skies! They (the people) represent all races and conditions, particularly the sturdy American, who is somewhat in the majority, the genial Frenchman, the solid German, and the volatile Acadian; while at the base of this little continent of races roll the black waters of Africa. Religious heterogeneity is even more pronounced, and there are Roman Catholics, Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Methodists, Hebrews and Baptists in about this ratio of relative strength. A few years ago the Methodists could have occupied the second place if they had met an emergency promptly; but there was bad management or neglect, and it will take them twenty years to recover the ground lost. Among other things, occasional overflows which have interfered with the farming interests of the country also have been very destructive to its prospects of evangelization; but this evil, it is now thought, has been successfully met, and there is great hopefulness as to the future. The writer never preached to so many apparently eager hearers representing such a medley of religious faiths, and though no special effort was made to secure conversions, it was the general verdict that much good was done. The attendance increased steadily to the close, and the last service was by far the largest of the series. It is said by those who have lived here for many years that this is the first revival meeting held in the neighborhood for a quarter of a century; and if this be true, it will account both for our weakness and the general state of languor on religious subjects. On Sunday we understood that there was more than one gambling party in progress in the little village while worship was proceeding at the church. A Methodist church-building at this point is a consummation devoutly to be wished, and the writer had assurances from a leading member that a subscription paper would be at once prepared and circulated. On this subject we may remark that it may be well to accept such hearty hospitality as the Presbyterians offer in the way of sanctuary, but a Methodism too much shaded will perish. The Church to which we belong is unique in that it has no doctrine of election to insure its future under adverse conditions, and no doctrine of immersion, like a stormy Jordan, to render its past secure. There is nothing for Methodists like Methodism, and nothing for the world like a gospel that leaves the sinner nothing to stand upon. We do not say this to reflect upon anybody, and shall cherish no brighter memories of Rosedale and vicinity than a noble Presbyterian family and their princely hospitality extending through several days. The Lottery has some white friends here, but they are few and will be fewer. The people seem to be alarmed at the probable wholesale purchase of the black vote, but the arm of the briber may be stricken with paralysis before that time arrives.

We have said nothing about the pastor of the work, who is indescribable as well as irrepressible, and will be heard from at Conference; and what he said about the writer of these lines for your columns we have pocketed as a memento of the trip. Returning by Baton Rouge, we visited Bro. Parker, and that portion of the track of the cyclone, or tornado, to speak more properly, where it ground the penitentiary walls to wreck, and then soared up into the air on clouds of pulverized debris and splintered wreck. The hungry monster seems literally to have chewed up the great walls of masonry, which at this point are exceptionally thick, and spat them out again as disdaining such diet, and did more damage in an awful instant than the tooth of time could have effected in centuries. What it did we saw plainly, but how it wrought that ruin no one seemed to be able to tell us except at the peril of swift contradiction. Its jerky vortex swinging from earth to sky is said to have moved at such inconceivable speed, and in such a brief and cloud-enveloped space, that it was actually gone before the vision could be concentrated upon it or the witness could collect his thoughts.

Its trailing wing swept Sister Parker's front yard of evergreens and other ornamentation, heaping them in piles on the front porch, and left the household astonished at both the majesty and goodness of him who makes the storm his chariot and who "rideth upon the wings of the wind." It was such a circling fury as this that tore the scalp of Horeb and hurled down his rocky breastworks when Elijah was encaverned there, and it was out of just such a whirlwind, the steeds of electricity having been checked in their flight by a hand of omnipotence, that God spoke to his servant Job and demanded of him a reason.

But to return to Baton Rouge. The people seemed proud of their only cyclone, and spoke with such eloquence on the subject as to impress a stranger that they held this as a new evidence of the speed and progressiveness of the State capital. It is well to be on the safe side of such a portent. J. M. B.

Conference Claimants of the Mississippi Conference.

Does anyone doubt the willingness of our people to provide for the superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of our deceased brethren? Yet out of an assessment of $4,000, only a trifle over eighty per cent. was collected, while the assessment for Bishops was paid in full.

This was not because the amount asked was less, nor was it because it is a more popular collection, but largely, if not entirely, because it was in the hands of a man who had but one collection to take. The demand made was specific, and, being appreciated, received a liberal response from the people.

Would there be objectors to an increase of assessment for the Conference Fund? Possibly a very few; but the great body of the church, resting in the love of God and enjoying daily communion with God, desires to lift every claimant above want and, as soon as possible, to provide sufficient funds to enable our aged brethren to rest from their labors as victors crowned, only waiting the King's command, "Come up higher."

The largest amount now paid one claimant is $115. It ought to be, at least, $250. We believe that if the assessment be raised to $6,000, and put into the hands of the presiding elders, that in 1892 we will be able to reach the above-named figures.

Is there anyone who would object to paying our claimants quarterly? Do not our Bishops urge and our presiding elders insist that as far as possible settlements be made in every charge, at least, once a quarter? If this manner of payment is best for the pastor in charge and best for the interests of our Zion, would not the same arrangement be best for our Conference claimants? This we propose to do in the Mississippi Conference. We will settle at Conference as usual, and then make the allowances for another year based on our expectancies from the assessments, and pay one-fourth of the allowance on April 1, 1892, and so on once a quarter, making final settlement at Conference. If at the end of any quarter there be not enough funds on hand to pay in full, then the amount on hand will be divided pro rata.

During the interim of Conferences the affairs of the Joint Board of Finance will be managed by an executive committee. The chairman will call a meeting of the Board whenever it is necessary.

We present this plan as one likely to afford permanent relief to our Conference claimants and to bring us up to a point when, as a church, we can say, "Ample provision is made for our worn-out servants."

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Dr. Hunnicutt Speaks.

Leaving your city and people oppressed with heat at 7:30 in the evening, it was surprising to find on reaching Atlanta at twelve, the next day, that fires had there been necessary for comfort that morning. We were meeting northern weather. The heat of the summer seems to have passed with June.

The crops between Montgomery and Atlanta demonstrated the impoverishment of the lands. The exhausted soil cries out for fertilizers. When will the farmers learn that the earth needs to be fed as well as the horse that plows it? Withdrawing all and returning none will bankrupt the richest land.

Rains had been general, and we had no dust. The absence of fences around the fields was a notable feature. But for the abandonment of fencing, half these lands would not pay for cultivation at all. It would be almost worth them to fence them. Wherever as much as one-fourth of the land is in cultivation it is better to fence the stock than the fields. One mischievous mule left to roam at large will require the building of five thousand dollars' worth of extra fencing. Fence the stock, and not the crops, is now the plan.

While in Atlanta I called to see Bro. T. B. Holloman, who has been suffering from serious illness. I found him, I hope, convalescent. He is in the hands of the kindest friends in the hospitable home of Dr. B. H. Catchings.

The Southern Teachers' Convention, on Lookout Mountain, near Chattanooga, was one of the important assemblies of this year of multitudinous public meetings. The place selected for the meeting is certainly one of the most picturesque on the continent. It was an admirable feat of engineering to construct a railway wending and zizzaging up the mountain until passengers are landed in front of a grand hotel on the top of the mountain, 1,800 feet above the river, which meanders near its base below. The scenes presented to one looking from the cars on the ascent are varied and beautiful indeed, while the panoramic view from the mountain-top gives one such an impression of vastness, height, and the endless, billowy landscape of mountains and valleys that stretch in all directions, as can never be forgotten.

Hundreds of teachers from all parts of the South gathered here for conference, many of whom, after the convention had closed, went on to the National Teachers' Association, which met this year at Toronto. Interesting papers on subjects connected with education were read and discussed, much to the edification of the hearers.

Just before the close of the convention some strong anti-Lottery resolutions were introduced, and, strange to say, were opposed by several who, while they declared themselves opposed to the Lottery, held that it is a political question and one to be settled by Louisiana alone. How can a question be practically political when no political party has espoused it? If every question is political which requires legislation, then the right to preach the gospel is a political question. This plea is a shallow dodge of the friends of the Lottery. But I maintain that the Lottery is emphatically an educational question. First, because it is educating more people than any school or college in the land—educating them in vice, educating them in the art of getting a living without labor, by the use of a scheme for getting other people's money without giving an equivalent. In the second place, it is an educational question because it proposes to give largely of its ill-gotten gains for the support of education in Louisiana. It is, therefore, a question in which all educators are deeply interested, and it was a serious blunder of the convention at Chattanooga that it passed the resolutions by only a small majority, thirty-three only being present and voting. So far is this Lottery from being confined to Louisiana that its agents are to be found in every State and in almost every city in the Union. If it should be rechartered, it would, like a mighty and deadly cancer, speedily strike its poisonous roots into every part of these United States. It is, therefore, the interest and the duty of the whole nation to rise up, if necessary, and crush the monster forever out of existence. Fealty to God and faithfulness to man demand this of Louisiana and of all her sister States.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Millsaps College.

PARTIAL DESCRIPTION OF THE PLAN ADOPTED BY THE BUILDING COMMITTEE.

The Building Committee of Millsaps College, as announced in Saturday's Clarion-Ledger, has adopted the plan submitted by Messrs. Hunt & Lamm, of Chattanooga, Tenn., a perspective view of which can be seen at the Capital State Bank. It is admitted to be a very handsome design by everyone that has felt enough interest in the matter to look at it.

The building will be of brick, three stories, and basement, high, with a square tower extending as high again, the usual monotony of such extensive roofs being broken with numerous dormer windows and gables, which present a very pleasing effect.

The basement plan consists of furnace-rooms, coal, work-room, chemical laboratory, closets, etc., with numerous passages for ventilating purposes.

The first or entrance floor contains two offices for the president, 18x16 feet; a library, 24x25 feet; preparatory room, 24x43, divided by sliding doors, and the chapel 40x68; two stories high in middle, with gallery 19x40 at the rear end. At the other end of the chapel is a large stage with dressing rooms at each end. A commodious hall runs through the first floor from west to east, also from the south to the main hall.

On the second floor, which is divided into three main sections by halls and corridors, are the rooms for recitations of mathematics 24x25, mental and moral philosophy 18x30, chemistry 43x28, and the gallery and rotunda of the chapel.

The third floor will have only one hall which will run north and south. This floor is devoted to a Latin and Greek room 24x25, English 24x29, two or three other smaller recitation rooms, and two rooms 40x29 for use of literary societies. The whole arrangement of the building is admirable; it is convenient, airy, well lighted, heated and ventilated.

The site has been located about half way between the Hemingway residence and Potter's Hill, and will front the I. C. railroad, looking west. The view from that point is one of the finest in the neighborhood of Jackson, and from a sanitary point is unequalled, the drainage being complete in every direction.

It is contemplated that in the not far distant future the street car line will be extended up State street to the Lunatic Asylum, thence west to West street and down West to Capitol. By this extension visitors to Jackson could see every State institution for five cents. Taking a car at the depot the passenger making the round trip would pass the Governor's mansion, State House, the Deaf and Dumb Institute, the Blind Institute, Jackson College (for colored pupils), Lunatic Asylum, Millsaps College, city cemetery, State Penitentiary and Graded School, besides a large number of the most handsome private residences in the State.—Clarion-Ledger.

Notes.

Why are some Christians like the Dead Sea?

Is not Christian work a test of Christian character?

Too many church people bear the cross as an ornament rather than as a badge of principle.

A covetous spirit asks, "Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence and given to the poor?"

"It is with missionary work as with everything else. Those who know most are most interested and give liberally."

The plan of attempting to raise a half-million dollars for missionary work through Christian Endeavor Societies, each member giving two cents a week, is meeting with great success. Already one hundred and fifty societies report 5,000 names, which means $5,000. Is there a reader of this paper who can not do that much?

Some people are entirely too smart for this world, and they ought, for their own good, to be transplanted to the moon. A case in point is the St. Louis judge who has decided that "the law which does not allow anyone to sell liquor within a strip of ground eight hundred feet wide which surrounds a park, does not exclude the sale of liquor within the park!" That judge is too smart for this country.

We call attention to our school advertisements. You will find schools in many sections of the country advertised. Some of them we know from personal knowledge, others we know from the knowledge of friends. If you have sons or daughters to educate, and can't find the school you want advertised in our paper, you had better move to some other country. Methodists should patronize Methodist schools, and, other things being equal, they should patronize those nearest them.

"None are so blind as those who will not see." Almost every day somebody rises up and, with a great blare of trumpets, puts his little lever under the Bible and upsets the whole thing, and it falls with a crash that echoes around the world. No man can tell how often this has been done, and yet the Bible has the most remarkable power of reproduction of anything on earth. We have just read that it is now translated into sixty-six of the languages and dialects of Africa. Upset, burned, buried, torn to shreds, despised, it still holds its grasp upon the human heart, and that proves its divine origin.

We commend the following from the Christian at Work to the young men, especially young preachers, who smoke:

Among the practical questions of the day coming to the front, that of the tobacco habit is unquestionably one. Last of the colleges to investigate the effects of tobacco smoking is Amherst. The result of the investigation is on a line with those recently collected at Yale University. It is found that the non-smokers at Amherst are of greater weight than the smokers; they are superior in chest girth to the smokers, and their lung capacity is higher. The non-smokers are more athletic than the smokers, and more successful in athletic sports. The non-smokers at Amherst, as at Yale, have also an advantage over the smokers in mental power and in scholarship. The facts recently collected in American colleges concerning the physiological and psychical effects of the tobacco-smoking habit, are instructive to the young men who go to college, and also to those who do not, and suggest the query whether the real issue before long will not be between chewing and smoking, or between the cigar and the deadly cigarette, but whether it will or not involve the entire abrogation of the tobacco habit. Wait and see.

Long ago the Hebrew Psalmist described the good man as "one who sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not." He does not try to wriggle out of a bad bargain. He keeps his word to his own cost. If he has promised to pay on a certain day, he does it. If he has been providentially hindered and can not, he goes to his creditor, and offers all the reparation in his power. He does not hide from him through false shame or send lying excuses.—Mid-Continent.

The above language has the curious property of saying two opposite things at the same time. It is not only a description of the good man, but it is a faithful delineation of the bad man. The description "between the lines" is the bad man, and he "sweareth to his hurt and changeth." He tries to wriggle out of his bad bargains. He does not keep his word to his cost. He promises to pay and don't do it. He hides himself and sends lying excuses. If he sees his creditor coming, he crosses over to the other side of the street or dodges around the corner. By his actions, as well as his words, he will put Falstaff to the blush on the score of lying. And, what is worse, this man is not a rare sight. The fact is, he is very numerous.

Personal and Otherwise.

We regret to state that Mrs. Key, wife of Bishop Key, died at Eureka Springs, Ark., July 25. She had been afflicted with heart disease. Bishop Key has the sympathy and prayers of the whole church in this sad bereavement.

The five Texas Conferences have 999 churches, valued at $1,473,802, and 366 parsonages, valued at $298,527.

Bishop Galloway called on us Monday, en route home from the Seashore District Conference. He had a good working time at Bay St. Louis.

Surely the world is getting close together. A letter posted at Kobe, Japan, July 3, was opened in this office at ten o'clock A. M., July 23. How is that for rapid transit?

The Life of Miss Clara Chrisman and the Memoir of Dr. Marshall can be obtained from W. D. Dominick, 336 West Capitol street, Jackson, Miss. The first is priced at one dollar, and the other ten cents per copy.

Bro. John F. Foster wishes the secretary of the Louisiana Conference Sunday-school Board of last year to communicate with him at Gibsland, La. Will that ex-official attend to this matter? It is of importance to the present secretary.

Bro. B. F. Lewis writes that he meant to say that Capitol Street Sunday-school raised more money for the Scarritt Training-school than any other Sunday-school in the Church, South. We are glad to make the correction, and thus give the credit where it belongs.

Rev. W. T. Barnett writes from Wall Hill, Miss., July 22, 1891: "The Rev. J. H. Brooks, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been very low, but now he is improving slowly. We ask prayer of the church for this man of God, that he may be restored to his loved ones and the church."

A brother at the Seashore Camp Meeting showed the resolution of his heart when he said: "I never intend to put a blister plaster on my back to accommodate the devil."

At another time and place a good woman showed her knowledge of the "fitness of things," where in answer to a question about the sermon, she said: "It was truly apostolic. He took a text and went everywhere preaching the gospel."

A CHILD'S LAUGHTER.

BY A. C. SWINBURNE.

All the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells on earth may spring,
All the winds on earth may bring
All sweet sounds together;
Sweeter far than all things heard,
Hand of harper, tone of bird,
Sound of woods at sundawn stirred,
Welling water's winsome word,
Wind in warm wan weather.

One thing yet there is that none
Hearing ere its chime be done
Knows not well the sweetest one
Heard of men beneath the sun,
Hoped in heaven hereafter;
Soft and strong and loud and light,
Very sound of very light
Heard from morning's rosiest height,
When the soul of all delight
Fills a child's clear laughter,

Golden bells of welcome rolled
Never forth such notes, nor told
Hours so blithe in tones so bold,
As the radiant mouth of gold
Here that rings forth heaven.
If the golden-crested wren
Were a nightingale—why, then,
Something seen and heard of men
Might be half as sweet as when Laugh's a child of seven.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen a letter from this part of the country in the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write and see if it is put in print. My papa is a subscriber to the ADVOCATE, and has been ever since I can remember. I am thirteen years old. I can speak French; but I am not going to school now. Mr. Editor, I saw a letter from a little girl in the ADVOCATE, where she said their superintendent had gone back on them. We have no Sunday-school now, either. Our superintendent has gone back on us. Please pray for him, and, perhaps, he will come and take his place. Our preacher is Bro. J. W. Tinnin. We all like him so much. I do hope he will be sent to us again next year. I hope my letter will not be sent to the waste-basket. I will close with best wishes to the editor.

Your little friend,
LUCY POWE.
Winchester, Miss.

Poetic Justice.

"Father, what is poetic justice?" asked Fred Stanley at the tea-table.

"Bless the boy! What put that into his head?" said mother.

"Why, there was something about it in our reading lesson to-day, and when I asked Miss Thompson what it meant, she said we should see how many of us could find out for ourselves and give her an illustration of it to-morrow; but I don't know how to find out unless you tell me, father."

Mr. Stanley looked thoughtful for a moment, and then smiled as if struck by some amusing recollection.

"Poetic justice," he said, "is a kind of justice that reaches us through the unforeseen consequences of our unjust acts. I will tell you a little story, Fred, that, I think, will furnish the illustration you are after.

"I recall a summer afternoon, a good many years ago, when I was not as large as I am now. Two other boys and myself went blackberrying in a big meadow several miles from home. On our way to the meadow, as we paddled along the dusty highway, we met a stray dog. He was a friendless, forlorn-looking creature, and seemed delighted to make up with us, and when we gave him some scraps of bread and meat from our lunch basket he capered for joy, and trotted along at our side, as if to say, 'Now, boys, I'm one of you.' We named him Rover, and, boy-like, tried to find out how much he knew, and what he could do in the way of tricks; and we soon discovered that he would 'fetch and carry' beautifully. No matter how big the stick or stone, nor how far away we threw it, he would reach it and drag it back to us. Fences, ditches and brambles he seemed to regard only as so many obstacles thrown in his way to try his pluck and endurance, and he overcame them all.

"At length we reached the meadow and scattered out in quest of blackberries. In my wanderings I discovered a hornets' nest, the largest I ever saw—and I have seen a good many. It was built in a cluster of blackberry vines and hung low, almost touching the ground. Moreover, it was at the foot of a little hill, and as I scampered up the latter I was met at the summit by Rover, frisking about with a stick in his mouth. I don't know why the dog and the hornets' nest should have connected themselves in my mind, but they did, and a wicked thought was born of the union.

"'Rob! Will!' I called to the other boys. 'Come here; we'll have some fun.'

"They came promptly and I explained my villainous project. I pointed out the hornets' nest and proposed we roll a stone down upon it and send Rover after the stone. 'And, oh cracky, won't it be fun to see how astonished he'll be when the hornets come out,' I cried, in conclusion. They agreed that it would be awfully funny. We selected a good-sized, round stone, called Rover's special attention to it, and started it down the hill. When it had a fair start we turned the dog loose, and the poor fellow, never suspecting our treachery, darted after the stone with a joyous bark. We had taken good aim, and as the ground was smooth the stone went true to its mark and crashed into the hornets' nest just as Rover sprang upon it. In less than a minute the furious insects had swarmed out and settled upon the poor animal. His surprise and dismay fulfilled our anticipations, and we had just begun to double ourselves up in paroxysms of laughter when, with frenzied yelps of agony, he came tearing up the hill toward us, followed closely by all the hornets.

"'Run!' I shouted, and we did run; but the maddened dog ran faster, and dashed into our midst with piteous appeals for help. The hornets settled, like a black, avenging cloud, all over us, and the scene that followed baffles my power of description. We ran, we scratched, we rolled on the ground, and we howled with agony, till the meadow was, for the time being, turned into a pandemonium.

"I have never known just how long the torture lasted, but I remember it was poor Rover who rose to the emergency, and with superior instinct showed us a way to rid ourselves of our vindictive assailants. As soon as he realized that we, too, were in distress and could give no assistance, he ran blindly to a stream that flowed through the meadow not far away, and plunging in, dived clear beneath the surface. We followed him, and only ventured to crawl out from the friendly element when we were assured that the enemy had withdrawn. Then we sat on the bank of the stream and looked at each other dolefully through our swollen, purple eyelids, while the water dripped from our clothing and a hundred stinging wounds reminded us what excessively funny fun we had been having with Rover.

"The poor dog, innocent and free from guile himself, judged us accordingly, and, creeping up to me, licked my hand in silent sympathy. Then some dormant sense of justice asserted itself within me.

"'Boys,' I said, 'we've had an awful time, but, I tell you what, it served us right.'

"Neither of them contradicted me, and, rising stiffly, we went slowly homeward with Rover at our heels.

"That, my boy," said Mr. Stanley in conclusion, "is a good instance of poetic justice."—N. Y. Herald.

Household.

For Invalids.

As regards invalids, in very few of even the largest and best houses, is such a thing thought of as setting apart one room in the house as a sick-room. Such a room as this, I need hardly suggest, ought to be in the quietest part of the house, and well aloft. It ought to be large, well and scientifically ventilated, with as cheerful an outlook as possible, and with as much furniture as necessary, and no more. No; this is seldom considered, and so, when some dear one is laid low, he or she is placed in an ordinary bedroom, so filled with furniture, so adorned with drapery and curtains, as to reduce the patient's chances of recovery to a minimum. Again, when some one falls sick, the doctor is always appealed to as to what the food should be. The doctor is, to be sure, the best judge, but everyone ought to know a little about invalid dieting. Now, broadly speaking, we divide food for invalids into low diet, middle diet, and full diet. Low Diet.—This consists of the nutritious teas, such as beef-tea, mutton-tea, or chicken-tea—all of which possess much the same nutritive value; but change is pleasant and wholesome—broth, barley-water, and thirst-allaying drinks. Middle Diet.—For this we add puddings, eggs, and perhaps biscuits, bread, or toast, to the low diet. Full Diet.—By this the physician means a fair and digestible allowance of solid and nutritious food, the plainer the better; chops and steaks, underdone and not fat; chicken, game, boiled whitefish—not the oleaginous sort, such as salmon—eggs, bread, puddings, potatoes (well mashed, and in great moderation), but only the lightest of vegetables, such as marrows or cauliflower.—Cassell's Family Magazine.

FAITH IN THE FAMILY.—One of the most intelligent women, the mother of a large family of children, was eminently a woman of faith. She never heard the trampling of her boys feet in the house, or listened to their noisy shouting in their play, or watched their unconscious slumbers, without an inward, earnest prayer to God for wisdom to train them. She mingled prayer with counsel and restraint, and the counsel was the wiser, and the restraint was the stronger, for this alliance of the human and Divine elements in her instruction and discipline. And at length when her children had become men and women, accustomed to the hard strife of the world, her name was the dearest name they could speak; and she who had "fed their bodies from her own spirit's life," who had taught their feet to walk, their tongues to speak and pray, and illuminated their consciousness with the great light of righteousness and duty, held their reverence and love, increased a thousand-fold by the remembrance of an early education that had its inspiration in the faith of God, and its fruit in the noble lives of upright men and women.—Anon.

Everybody likes to get the most for the money. This desire is quickest accommodated by an investment of 20c in a bottle of Wolff's Acme Blacking. Ask some of your neighbors if they have not found more profit, comfort and pleasure in a bottle of Wolff's Acme Blacking than in any other article they could obtain for a like amount. It is profitable because it preserves leather; it is comfort and pleasure-giving because it is easily applied, and requires but one application a month on ladies' shoes and one a week on men's shoes.

THE PIN MONEY QUESTION.—He was a young man who had been married a few years. In answer to a question about pin money, he said: "I get my wages every Saturday night. I carry the money home and give every cent of it to my wife. If I want any, I ask her for it. She buys what we want, and she puts in the bank what we can spare. It is as much her interest as it is mine to save all we can. If she is fit to be my wife and bring up the children, she is fit to be trusted with the money, and I never ask her what she does with it." Another man who receives monthly wages, said: "When I am paid, I hand over to my wife as much money as she earned before we were married, and that was four dollars a week." There is peace in both these houses. There is no need of comment.—Woman's Journal.

Permanent Value of the High-Altitude Cure.

The acclimation of consumptives to the climate of Colorado, and the return of cured patients from high altitudes, were discussed at last year's meeting of the American Climatological Association, in Pueblo, Col. Dr. H. O. Dodge regarded the acclimation of the individual as consisting in overcoming the conditions of altitude and low density of atmosphere that prevail in mountain regions, and in acquiring the ability to do full labor or take continuous exercise without detriment to the system. The diminished heat at the high altitude, together with the increased tissue-changes consequent on the accelerated circulation and respiration, create an increased demand for food; hence the Coloradan mountaineer is blessed with a keen appetite and vigorous digestion, and, while his store of adipose is usually small, his muscular powers are, as a rule, high. The cool nights promote refreshing sleep, and the dry atmosphere enables one to withstand without inconvenience changes of temperature that in more humid regions would be detrimental or dangerous. The aggregate of persons who become acclimated in Colorado, and thereby cured, may be divided into three classes, viz.: first, a few who are absolutely cured, and who may go to any part of the world, or engage in any business, and enjoy an immunity from consumption; those who may go to lower and less favorable climates during certain selected seasons; and those who can not with safety make any change of climate. According to Dr. Dodge's observation and recollection, the first class includes about nine per cent. of the patients; the second class, including the first, about fifty per cent.; and the third class about fifty per cent. Concerning the safety of a return from the high altitudes after having enjoyed an arrest of the disease, Dr. Frederick I. Knight, of Boston, thought that those who show a strong hereditary tendency to the disease had better be encouraged to remain in the climate where the arrest has taken place. But a patient who has no inherent tendency to this form of disease in himself, but has been the victim, as it were, of external circumstances, may be allowed to try a return under different conditions.—Popular Science.

The Earth Still Growing.

On clear nights, when the limpid atmosphere permits us to observe to the best advantage the innumerable splendors of the sky, we have often seen a luminous speck suddenly appear in the depths of space, and rapidly tracing a path of light, disappear as suddenly as it flashed into view. Perhaps we have had the good fortune to witness a shower of meteors, and these apparitions have been well calculated to arouse our curiosity and stimulate the imagination. It is well known that falling stars, as they are called, are not the only foreign substances which intrude themselves into our atmosphere. In addition to the meteoric stones which reach the surface of the globe, large quantities of cosmic dust become incorporated with our planet. The track which the earth follows through the heaven is to some extent filled with this powder of worlds, which is constantly sifting down upon the surface of the earth. What is the effect of these meteoric stones and this cosmic dust in increasing the mass of the earth? Of course the earth, constantly bombarded by celestial projectiles, is slightly augmenting all the while in volume and weight. One astronomer has estimated at 146,000,000,000 the number of projectiles, big and little, which annually reach the surface of the earth. Supposing that each meteoric stone has a volume of a cubic millimetre, or about a third of an inch in all its dimensions, and a density seven times as great as that of water, our globe would thus be annually increased by a volume of 146 cubic metres and a weight of over 2,500,000 pounds. In one hundred centuries the augmentation of the size of the earth would thus be equal to 1,460,000 cubic metres, and the increase in the weight would amount to over 255,500,000,000 pounds. If this cosmic dust were spread uniformly over the entire surface of the planet, it would constitute in thirty-five thousand years a bed of about a third of an inch in thickness. But these figures probably fall far short of the reality.—Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.

A Life Saved
READ THE TWO STATEMENTS.
An Extraordinary Case!

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Nov. 2d, 1890.
Last April I was attacked with Chagres Fever in Spanish Honduras and was given up to die by two physicians. During that spell and since have used a pound of quinine and quantities of other medicines without any benefit. For three to four days out of every week I have been down and have suffered untold agonies. Between these spells I could scarcely walk more than two blocks at a time. I did not expect to live through the coming winter. Ten days ago I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. I have had no fever since. All the symptoms have entirely disappeared. I have no pain or trouble of any kind. Am gaining strength very fast. Can walk miles at a time. My sudden and rapid improvement is simply wonderful. Germetuer has been a God-send to me. I cannot say too much in its praise. Any who wish to do so may call on me. DANIEL PAPPON, 481 Jersey Street.

NEW ORLEANS, June 1, 1891.
My improvement continued, and soon after writing the above statement I was able to go to work and have been working ever since. My health is now perfect. I never felt better in my life. I give this testimony gladly, because I know that Germetuer saved my life.
DANIEL PAPPON.

Chagres Fever is known to be not only a most dangerous form of sickness, but also very difficult to cure. Germetuer has been tried on a number of cases. In every known instance it has cured quickly and completely. It has a similar record as a remedy for Swamp Fever and Malarial troubles of all kinds. Properly used, it is the quickest and most unfailing remedy for Fevers of all kinds, Dyspepsia, Debility, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Diarrhœa, Dysentery and all diseases of the Blood and Skin.
These claims are sustained by evidences by thousands of the best people in the country, and the evidences multiply in our midst every day.
For sale by druggists and country merchants and at the Germetuer office, 201 Canal St., New Orleans. For full information, circulars, etc., call on or address Kit Williams, Agent, 201 Canal St. $1 bottle; six bottles for $5.

OBITUARIES.

SMITH—The earthly home of our friend, Eugene E. Smith, was made sad by the death of his wife, HATTIEBEL CHRISTIAN SMITH, daughter of J. M. and Sarah Abney. She was born Dec. 25, 1869; joined the M. E. Church, South, in the Autumn of 1882, and was married to Mr. E. E. Smith, Dec. 26, 1888. She died at the home of her father, Covington, La., July 13, 1891.

Oh, how sad to have to part with one we loved so dearly! Everybody loved HATTIE, as she was familiarly called. She was a good, obedient daughter, a loving sister, a fond mother, and, as a wife, she was all that the name implies. While she was in health she would often say, "Husband, why don't you pray and make preparation to meet God?" and she was never too sick or too tired to thank the Lord for past blessings, and ask Him to continue His merciful kindness to herself and family. She was faithful and true in all the relations of life—a gentle, sweet-spirited Christian, modest and unassuming. She leaves a father, three brothers, five sisters, one little boy, her only child, and husband and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Yet we weep not as those without hope, for we have the assurance that she is at rest. She was perfectly calm, and a smile of peace and resignation was on her face to the very last, and even in death she was beautiful. She spoke to those around her bedside about dying, asked them to meet her in heaven, and turned to her husband and asked him to come and bring Frank, her little boy. She says, "You can, and I believe you will," and with that she told each one good-by. Her spirit passed over the river to join her mother and sister who had preceded her only a short while. May her goodly influence live and be the golden cord that will draw the husband, child and all the loved ones nearer to that home of eternal rest! Farewell, Sister Hattie, for a little while, for we know if we are faithful, "we will meet you in the city of the New Jerusalem." J. C. CAMPBELL, Pastor.

REED—Died in Pleasant Hill, La., July 10, 1891, MARIELOU, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Reed.

Mariclou was a good, obedient daughter, a loving and devoted sister, a true friend. Of a genial, sunny temperament, those who knew and loved her best miss the kindly glance of her brown eyes, the tender touch of her vanished hand, and the gentle intonation of the voice that is still.

She was converted and united with the Rapid Church just one year ago. Her Christian life was a consistent and beautiful one; and when some anxious friend, hearing the echo of the Conqueror's footsteps drawing nearer and nearer, asked her, "Darling, do you fear death?" she answered, "Why do you cry? I'm all right." To another she said, "I'll hear Jesus to-day!" She was right. On that, her seventeenth birthday, her pure spirit grew tired of this world of change and sorrow; then death came and gently drew the curtain round her fast, long sleep. She was young to die, but a beautiful life ends not in death.

Many and beautiful were the floral tributes laid upon the casket which contained the shell from which the pure soul of Mariclou had taken its upward flight; but of them all, none were so beautiful, perhaps, as those placed there by the loving hands of her schoolmates. When loving hands had performed all that could be done, as though loath to leave her there, her dear girl friends sang, "God be with you till we meet again;" then, placing a beautiful anchor on her new-made grave, they sadly turned away. FRIEND.

BOLES—WILLIAM E. BOLES was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., May 1, 1851; died in Woodville, Wilkinson county, Miss., on or about Feb. 15, 1891.

He was serving his county as a juror; was taken very sick with pneumonia. After a painful illness of two weeks he passed over the river, to rest on the other shore.

Bro. Boles was a good man; was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for a long time. Very few knew what he had done in this life for his friends and for those in distress. He was a very quiet man; he had always rather follow than to lead in anything—willing to be taught. It was the privilege of the writer, who was the pastor for two years, to talk with him about his soul's welfare. At the close of a meeting at the church a few months before his death, he said that he was feeling better than ever before. The church never made a call for money that found him unwilling to respond. He loved to help his preacher. He was never married, but had the care of a sister, with a large family on hand, for a long time, to which he was faithful. He worked very hard, made money and spent it, helping others. It was often said of him that he was as honest as the days are long, and it has been truthfully said of him that he spent his life in working for others. The writer visited him the day he died, and with almost the expression of an angel in his face he said he was trusting it all in the hands of the good Lord. He leaves one brother and sister to mourn. God grant they may meet him in a better world. Truly a good man has gone. W. M. SULLIVAN.

LENGSFIELD—Mrs. E. H. LENGSFIELD was born in Bedford, Ky., Dec. 11, 1818. Her maiden name was Jackson. Her parents moved to Tennessee when she was quite young. Here she grew up to womanhood. Afterwards she moved to Mississippi, and lived at Greenville, where she died July 7, 1891, in the seventy-third year of her age.

She was converted in early life, but did not join the church until after her marriage. Here as a quiet, consistent, beautiful Christian life. No word of complaint ever escaped her lips, and no word of censure was ever heard to fall from her against a fellow-creature. She was always disposed to put the best construction upon the conduct of those who seemed to have mistreated her. The insincerity and unfaithfulness of her servants did not cause her to depart from this rule. A true mother, a devoted, loving Christian, it was but natural that she should be loved, and the sweet aroma of her life will sweeten and cheer the lives of those who knew her best. She leaves two daughters and a son behind, and it is the prayer of many hearts that they may meet their mother again. They do not mourn as those who have no hope. T. W. LEWIS.

MARTIN—Dr. JOSEPH A. MARTIN, of Banner, Miss., was born in Arkansas, Dec. 5, 1832. He moved to Mississippi with his mother when quite young, and settled near Coffeeville. He worked and educated himself, and began the practice of medicine when about twenty-one years old. He was married to Miss Virginia Elenor Ederington, May 10, 1866; professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1874, and was a consistent member until he was translated to the church triumphant, April 15, 1891.

Dr. Martin was an affectionate husband and father, a good physician, and friend to the poor. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and also a strong member of the alliance. He manifested a great deal of interest in the welfare of our country. The church and community sustain a great loss by the death of Dr. Martin; but while we lose his services, he gains an eternal reward. His sickness was protracted for several weeks, and his suffering great; but he bore it patiently without a murmur, and told us, a few hours before he died, his hope of heaven. May the good Lord bless and take care of his family until they all meet in heaven! J. M. MASSEY.

NEAL—Mrs. MARY M. NEAL (nee McLean) died in peace, aged seventy-three years and one day, near New Iberia, La., July 16, 1891.

Mrs. Neal was the widow of N. S. Neal, and leaves bereaved a large family of children and grandchildren, to whom she was doubly endeared by her spotless life and unfailing piety. She had been an invalid for ten years, and for six months previous to her death was bedridden, and suffered extremely. She became a member of the Presbyterian Church in her girlhood, but came under the writer's pastoral care during her last illness. Her fortitude in suffering was invincible, her patience endured to the end, and her faith never failed or faltered. Perfectly resigned to the divine will, she rejoiced in the prospect of her release, and departed in hope of the glory of God.

F. S. PARKER.

MARK—THOMAS DICK, son of W. B. Mark, M. D., and Harriet Baker, was born in Claiborne parish, La., March 6, 1883, and died in Winnfield, Winn parish, La., May 26, 1891.

A little over eight years, he gladdened the hearts and home of his parents with his presence, which was like a ray of sunshine in the path of life, and then he who has said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," called him from his bed of pain to enjoy the blessedness of his own glorious presence forever.

J. D. HARPER.

PRISOCK—NANCY C. PRISOCK, daughter of Rev. John Crowson, and wife of G. S. Prisock, was born in Green county, Ala., in 1828, and died at her home in Lauderdale county, Miss., May 4, 1891, aged sixty-three years.

Sister Prisock professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, when a girl, of which she lived a faithful member till death. She leaves a husband and five children, who are all consistent members of the church. May the consolations of our holy religion comfort them!

HER PASTOR.

EVANS—SYLVANUS EVANS died in Enterprise, Miss., July 6, 1891, aged eighteen months.

Little Vane gladdened the hearts of his parents in life and in death. With holy resignation the young father and mother have handed their jewel back to God. A few days before his death he was made the happy owner of a gold dollar. This goes into the foreign mission field. May it be the means, under God, of perpetuating his life-work! PASTOR.

Let's reason together. Here's a firm, one of the largest the country over, the world over; it has grown, step by step, through the years to greatness—and it sells patent medicine!—ugh!

"That's enough!"—

Wait a little—

This firm pays the newspapers good money (expensive work, this advertising!) to tell the people that they have faith in what they sell, so much faith that if they can't benefit or cure they don't want your money. Their guarantee is not indefinite and relative, but definite and absolute—if the medicine doesn't help, your money is "on call."

Suppose every sick man and every feeble woman tried these medicines and found them worthless, who would be the loser, you or they?

The medicines are Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," for blood diseases, and his "Favorite Prescription," for woman's peculiar ills. If they help toward health, they cost $1.00 a bottle each! If they don't, they cost nothing!

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Centenary Female College.

The following are some extracts from letters endorsing Centenary Female College:

"There is no college to which I would commit my daughter with more confidence than to Centenary. Your curriculum is thorough, your faculty complete, and, above all, the home comforts given our daughters there commend the college to the young ladies themselves."—Rev. Sam P. Jones (Evangelist).

"In Centenary, our daughters of the South will find one of the best colleges in America. I have been among you, and remained with you, and I know whereof I affirm."—T. T. Fishburn (Banker), Roanoke, Va.

"The place may justly be called a well-appointed home for those sheltered within its walls. The rule of work is thoroughness. Having been a patron of the college, I can cordially testify of its high character."—Mrs. M. E. Riggs, McLendon, Texas.

"Indeed, it is the ideal college within the range of my observation."—John B. Boyd, (Merchant), Sonoraville, Ga."

"It is just such an institution as all sensible parents desire for the education of their daughters."—Henderson H. Henson (Pres. Bank), Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Home comforts unexcelled by any school of my knowledge."—Rev. J. A. Jones, Vicksburg, Miss: (Pastor Pres. Church.)

A Splendid Institution.

In writing of Prof. Hinemon's school, Rev. Boone Keeton, A. M., says: "Thorough instruction, a high grade curriculum, gentle but firm discipline, and a dignified Christian spirit are marked features of Hinemon University School—features that should be well considered by those who wish the best education for themselves or their children. I most heartily recommend this school."

R. S. WOODWARD, P. E.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years ought to know salt from sugar. Read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most 40 years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours truly,

L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

An earthquake shock was felt in Evansville, Ind., on July 26. Serious panics occurred in several churches.

Dallas, Texas, was the scene of a great fire on July 25, which entailed a loss of a quarter of a million dollars.

A monument to Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson was unveiled at Lexington, Va., last week. Gen. Juhal A. Early delivered the oration on the occasion.

A Texas cattleman says the outlook at present is that the supply of cattle from that State will fall short 1,000,000 head as compared with the number last year.

The wealth of the United States amounts to $62.500,000,000, distributed among 13,000,000 families. There are 135,000 families which have an average wealth of $186,000.

Governor Hogg, of Texas, has appointed special attorneys to prosecute violations of the Sunday law, and it will be rigidly enforced in every city and town in the State.

The greatest strike in gold ore which has been made in California in recent years had just occurred in San Bernadino county. The vein of gold is six inches wide, and the rock assays $20,000 to the ton.

A popular uprising and protest of all religious denominations in St. Paul, last week, prevented a prize fight, for which extensive preparations had been made. Thousands of the rough element from all sections of the Union who anticipated witnessing the contest returned home disappointed.

The first high-power gun of 12-inch caliber built in this country was fired, on July 25, at the United States proving grounds on Sandy Hook point. The results, as expressed by the ordnance officers present, were satisfactory from every standpoint. The gun, which is a steel breech-loading rifle, threw a thousand-pound shot a distance of twelve miles.

The threatened revolution in Tennessee has been dispelled by a compromise. The convicts have been returned to the mines. No further trouble is expected, the free miners having agreed to wait the action of the extra session of the Legislature, which is to be called at an early date by Governor Buchanan, who, it is said, will recommend an amendment to the convict lease system.

St. Paul has been made the headquarters of a national movement by the united Farmers' Alliances of the country to corner the entire wheat crop of the United States. A circular which has been sent to the secretaries of every Alliance in the wheat-growing States estimates the wheat crop of 1891 in the United States at 500,000,000 bushels, and states that four-fifths of this wheat can be held back by the farmers until prices have gone upward.

FOREIGN.

The Emperor of Germany personally conducted the religious services held on board his yacht, on last Sunday.

The House of Commons has voted the sum of $300,000 as salaries and expenses for the relief of the suffering poor of Ireland.

A frightful collision of excursion trains occurred at St. Maude, France, on July 26, in which fifty persons were killed and many injured.

The Grand Duke Alexis banqueted the officers of the visiting French squadron on board the Russian flagship Asia. The utmost cordiality prevailed, and the assemblage was brilliant in the extreme.

The French Labor Commission will appoint special committees to consider State regulations regarding the hours of labor and the State employment of labor and laws relating to combinations of employers and employees.

The Pope has approved the exhibition of the "holy coat" at Treves, and has sanctioned the forgiveness of sins of pilgrims who journey thither. Three steamers, each with 900 pilgrims aboard, have arrived from America.

A majority of the military exiles will accept the amnesty granted by the government and return to Spain. Senor Korilla, the exiled republican leader, with a few other prominent political exiles, refuses to accept the amnesty.

It is announced that the Italian deficit for 1890-91 is about 78,500,000 lires, notwithstanding all the economies introduced. To further diminish the expenses, as already announced, a reduction will be made in the salaries of various diplomatic and consular offices.

The Australian Colonies were admitted into the International Postal Union at the Postal Congress held at Vienna. The only civilized countries now remaining outside of the union are Cape Colony and the South African Republic, which will probably come in at the next quinquennial congress.

Prof. Koch has resigned all the public offices held by him. This step is associated with supposed disappointment over the unsatisfactory results of the discovery of "tuberculin." The Academic Senate will bestow an honorary office on him, permitting him to lecture whenever he chooses.

President Carnot has intimated that the French government will return the Russian and other flags which were captured by the French troops (during the Crimean war) from the Russian Church at Eupatoria, in the Crimea, and which have since been deposited in the church of Notre Dame at Paris.

A Boulangist demonstration was held in Paris on July 26, and was attended by 4,000 persons. A resolution was put demanding that the French government recall Ambassador Berlet from Berlin, and the Germans in France be treated as the Germans treat the Frenchmen in Alsace-Lorraine. The resolution was drowned in an uproar. A free fight ensued. A crowd of anarchists entered the meeting hall and put the Boulangists to rout.

CAMP MEETING.

The St. Tammany Camp Meeting, near Covington and Ahlin Springs, will commence Sept. 18. H. W. WALLACE.

See advertisement of Wesleyan Female Institute, Staunton, Virginia, in a climate far famed for its health. This school is conducted by twenty-five teachers and officers, and enjoys a national reputation, and was filled the last session with pupils from twenty States. Its graduates are its brightest ornaments, and are sought far and wide as teachers. Parents who are seeking a good school, with thorough teaching and no extravagance, will write for a catalogue to Rev. Dr. W. A. Harris, president, Staunton, Virginia.

With the most skillful teachers and all the advantages of a carefully regulated and refined home, the New England Conservatory of Music, founded by the late Dr. Eben Tourjee, is undoubtedly the most liberally equipped, and best in the country. Its graduates are found in all the principal cities and towns of the Union, filling positions as teachers in institutions of learning, and vocalists and organists in churches. Mr. Carl Faelten, the Director, is well known at home and abroad as an accomplished musician and teacher, and under his care the coming year promises to be one of the most successful in its history.

Sugar Is Down.

The Christian and His Graces—No. 7.

BY AN OLD MINISTER.

"And to patience, godliness"—that is, as we understand it—godlikeness. This godlikeness was the original prerogative and glory of man. It is true the angels are called "this holy angels;" but it is nowhere said they were created in the likeness and image of God. Man was made after the most exalted, glorious and perfect model in the universe. If it had been possible to consult us, we could have asked nothing nobler or better than it pleased God to bestow when he made us like himself: This "likeness and image" was lost by transgression. It is the glorious purpose and function of the redemptive scheme to rehabilitate us with this lost likeness and image; to make us "partakers of the divine nature," and conform us to "the image of his Son." Infinite purity, absolute holiness is the sublime and blessed characteristic of God. The heavenly ministers, in their song, forever sing: "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts: the whole earth is full of his glory. Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come." The inspired Word says to us, "Be ye holy, for I am holy." The holy, the pure in heart shall see God. They that are born of God have the likeness and image of their divine Parent—likeness to God.

It would appear from the fact that we are to "add godliness" to the other graces, that it is an essential stone in the perfect arch of holy character; that these more active graces, that have to do with external activities, would be incomplete without it. It also appears that this adding is a work in which our wills and sanctified agency are to take a part, and, as elsewhere, be "workers together with God." We must have this element of character. It supposes a habitual reverence for divine things—God's name, God's Word, God's house, God's worship. We Americans are charged with a want of reverence; we have no hereditary nobility, no people with prescriptive rights. The humblest born may aspire to and reach the highest place; the highest come down from his official elevation, and be as one of the people, all of whom are his civil peers. This intense individuality, and the great civil possibilities of each citizen, has tended to destroy reverence for great and solemn names and places. It affects us religiously. We need especially to cultivate this feature of godliness; we need to feel that churches are more than schoolhouses or warehouses, and that hearing the gospel is something more than listening to a miscellaneous harangue. The Christian should not be a recluse, nor so ascetic as to cut himself off from sympathy with his fellow-men. He should be cheerful, and, as far as practicable, agreeable and attractive, but never at the expense of religion, nor of the personal dignity that should always characterize a child of God. While there should be nothing pharisaical or cantish about the behavior of a Christian man, there ought to be something to make men take knowledge that he has been with Jesus, and such a light shining as to constrain men to glorify God.

Godliness is a grace that will be most cultivated by communion with God in meditation, in his Word, and in prayer. This is an age of all manner of external activities, and in spiritual things as well; and there is, perhaps, too little introspection and communion with God. Paul's life and example influence us, it may be, more than the "beloved disciple" who leaned upon the Master's bosom. Our business should never be too absorbing, nor our haste too great, to cultivate godliness, and be adding it to our graces.

"God is love," and to be like him is to be filled with love, and to be lovely in our lives. "Love worketh no ill to its neighbor," nor selfishly seeketh only its own; but, like the divine love, would wish well to all, and clothe the meanest thing in light. Such a spiritual experience exhibited in life would make men see "the beauty of holiness." Love is so vast, so eminent, so glorious in God, that all believers should desire to be filled and clothed upon with this divine excellence. It is said Alexander carried about with him Homer's immortal Iliad, that his ambition might be fired by the example of the heroes who conducted and pressed the long siege of Troy. So it is said Napoleon made a companion of Plutarch's lives of the great men of antiquity, that he might be moved to emulate their illustrious careers. "The heavens declare the glory of God," but his inspired Word more fully and gloriously reveals his perfections. The Bible is the book of God; it is filled with his words and his ways. Look then, often prayerfully, at his glorious image in his Word, and be changed as from glory to glory, in ever-increasing godlikeness.

Letter from California.

Across the bay from San Francisco is a cluster of suburban cities—Oakland of seventy, Alameda of twelve, and Berkley of six thousand inhabitants. Between these and San Francisco is a line of fine passenger ferries—freight boats—great transfers carrying a train of cars at once. These, with the deep sea vessels from every port, coasting-ships, river packets and a fleet of harbor crafts, convert the bay into a great shifting, beautiful marine picture, set in a framework of hills and mountains. Besides the railroads from every point of the compass, which terminate here, there is the local free system (the longest free system carriage in the United States), connecting these cities with one another, with the ferries, and distributing the ever-increasing hundreds of passengers to and from all parts of Alameda, Oakland, and neighboring suburbs.

Here is the great throbbing heart of the West, into which arteries over the ocean and across the continent pour an enormous and ever-increasing tide of life. The Golden Gate is the natural inlet and outlet of the trade of half of a continent, and hence at this point is concentrated the trade of half of the United States.

These cities are yet in infancy. The development of the soil under culture of incoming thousands, the development of industries, and removal of restrictions now restricting commerce and trade, will produce a future far beyond the conception of the most sanguine. On the Atlantic board the Eastern trade has built the great cities of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Charleston, to say nothing of Canadian ports. What, then, must be the future of San Francisco and her suburban cities, which, with the exception of one or two smaller, is the great door through which is to come and go the trade of half of the continent?

For our church to hold her own, or make a progress commensurate with the rapid development which must take place here, it is imperative for us now to realize and seize the opportunities which present themselves, and especially so in securing church and school property. We should now lay foundations, with a view, not to the present alone, but the prospective magnitude of our cities and State.

I intend, however, to speak of Alameda. It is separated from Oakland by a ½-mile-wide arm of the bay, along which these two suburban sisters extend some five miles. It covers a peninsula five miles long and one wide, nestling at the foot of the Coast Range Mountains. Being in close proximity to San Francisco, its business is limited; hence the business houses are comparatively few. On account of the lower rates of rent, cheaper land and houses, and its climate being much milder than that of San Francisco, hundreds of the business men of that city have made, and hundreds will make, this their home. It is, therefore, pre-eminently a home city, adorned with beautiful gardens, groves and parks—a city of wealth, refinement and culture. Through this city three lines of railway run—one horse and two steam lines—the latter a part of the free local system, running from one end, and connecting with the ferries at the other, and with the neighboring cities. They carry from five to ten coaches, stopping at convenient stations; accommodating, free of charge, the fast-increasing hundreds of passengers. This is the terminus also of some of the State and national roads. Besides the foregoing, there are all modern conveniences and luxuries—Macadamized streets, paved walks, churches, halls, libraries, baths, police and fire departments; all lighted by day with cloudless sun, and by night with electric light.

Some fifteen months ago Rev. P. B. Smith, a supernumerary preacher of the Baltimore Conference, visited Alameda, and finding a few members of our church, he began work, and remained in charge until the first of January, when I succeeded him. I found he had built well and wisely, so far as circumstances permitted; one of the greatest hindrances being the want of a church home. We rent an inconvenient hall for only the two services on Sunday. It is used in the meantime for entertainments, dancing, drilling, etc. We have lost much by this, especially in that we have no place for regular prayer meetings and revival services. According to my and my presiding elder's estimate, the gain would have been an hundredfold more. However, the work has prospered. The Sunday-school, since the first of January, has increased from about 30 to about 100, and comes nearer being a model school than any I know of. The congregations have increased largely. A flourishing Epworth League has been added; much valuable material has been added to the congregation and the membership. Among the latter is a granddaughter of Rev. Wm. Winans, D. D., known throughout American Methodism, whom I found to be a kinswoman of mine.

In spirit and work, the church here approximates my conception of an ideal one. The members, with many of the congregation, work constantly, systematically, and successfully, especially our women, visiting the needy, sick, and the stranger; in making and giving money for the sick, for a church home, and, while yet in its infancy, contributing money to foreign missionary work. Financially, the work is somewhat novel; the stewards claiming this to be theirs, and not the pastor's duty. Everything promised or required is given cheerfully. The pastor's salary comes in by the month, and is certain. The assessments for the Annual Conference were provided for in ten minutes. Besides cheerfully paying in all claims, they have contributed $2,000 for a church lot. Above all, it is an intelligent and pious church, and, crowning all, is undisturbed peace and harmony, with unswerving fidelity to the church.

The great desideratum is a church home. Our people are neither rich nor poor. They have, as mentioned, collected $2,000 for a lot, with which we expected to buy a property unanimously agreed upon; but, to our surprise, it was held at a much higher price. One of our big-hearted, liberal members authorized us then to offer $5,000 for it; but the owner would take no less than $6,500. Not long since, I am creditably informed, this same lot was offered at $800, and not two years ago at $2,000. Only a few years ago the Presbyterian property here, consisting of a nice corner lot, a handsome church and two-story parsonage, was offered at $6,000. The same layman mentioned proffered to loan the money to the Missionary Board until they were able to refund it. The Bishop did not buy. Now the city has grown up around it, there is a flourishing congregation, and they would, I am assured, refuse less than $20,000 for the same. There has been and is a rapid, but normal, increase in real estate values. A few years has made the difference of thousands, and a few years will make a similar difference in the future. Now is the time to secure church property here. We could get cheaper, but not suitable, lots. Within one block of that mentioned we would have to pay $20,000 for a similar property. We now regret opportunities lost in the past; yet if we do not improve those that present themselves now, we will, in the future, more bitterly regret our failure to buy now.

While I would gladly receive help from any source, yet this is not written as a preface to an appeal to the public for money; but it is written to arouse interest in our pioneer work, and in hopes of securing assistance from the Church Extension or Missionary Boards—help which can and would be returned; help which would create a perpetual interest, for, by making this church and similar ones self-supporting, it will become a perpetual contributor to the general funds of the church. And a church yet in its infancy, not much over a year old, situated in a field so important, contributing missionary money now, and having missionary societies organized, deserves help from the Missionary or Church Extension Boards.

I also offer this as one of the many illustrations of how our frontier work is being injured by the failure of our people in raising in full the missionary appropriations. But for this sad failure and consequent cutting down of missionary appropriations, we could have easily secured the help we need. By the failure of many to pay a few dollars, or maybe cents, which the delinquents would not miss, the work on the picket line is made to suffer, and in a way otherwise than that just alluded to, for men and their families dependent on missionary appropriations will be made to feel inconveniences and hardships by this failure. I know none who murmur, but willingly allow their misfortune to be used for the good of the cause. Men with the proverbial "large families and small salaries;" pastors who have become wedded to their struggling charges with victory almost in sight; who are striving to give their children an education, and for that purpose have just entered them into schools and colleges; men who, after months of work and anxiety, have just secured employment for an elder child, must now, for a bare living, be forced to move and go where these advantages do not exist, or existing where they will have all the trouble to encounter again. No army would be so short-sighted as to cripple and disqualify its picket line, and thereby lose ground gained by hard toil and self-denial. Shall we, more than a million strong, blessed with an unprecedented increase of members, wealth, and culture—we, representing our own sunny land—be guilty of a policy so suicidal? Shall we allow the banner of our church to be, not driven, but held and drawn back by the hand of avarice from the foremost ranks, where it legitimately and proudly waves? God forbid! Rather let us awake to the full realization of duty, of opportunity. Help us, of the picket line, to lay broad and deep the foundation of our church, so that in the days not far distant we may find our position here somewhat commensurate with the coming mighty West, which shall stand forth the wonder of the nations in its vast magnitude, wealth, power, and beauty.

Millsaps College Notes.

A. F. WATKINS, AGENT.

The Building Committee have been steadily at work for some weeks, and now report the adoption of a plan for a college building. The plan, a description of which was published in the ADVOCATE of last week, was furnished by Messrs. Hunt and Lamb, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and the building, it is estimated, can be completed and furnished at a cost of $25,000.

Advertisements for bids for the erection of the building will be published in a few days, and as soon as the contract can be awarded, and the material can be placed upon the ground, the work of building will begin.

Meanwhile the endowment fund continues to grow, both in the way of collections and subscriptions. We have now $60,000 invested and at work, and, notwithstanding the pressure of the times and the dullness of the season, endowment notes are being cashed almost every day. This fact shows that many others could easily, or with but little trouble, pay the notes due last December, and that many would do so, but that it is overlooked. It is much more important than each individual subscriber is apt to think, that these notes be paid at once. Let every reader of these lines resolve to send at once the amount of the note held against him; or if he has never given one, let him make a subscription now.

The agent recently spent a Sunday with Rev. George H. Thompson, at Pearl River Church, and received in notes $218.50 on the endowment fund.

On the next Sunday, at the session of the Brookhaven District Conference, the people of Bogue Chitto subscribed to this fund $160.

The note for $500, given by Lt.-Gov. Sims, of Columbus, has not been reported in these columns, nor has the agent made public record of the subscription of $101 on the "Clara Chrisman scholarship" at Fayette during the session of the Vicksburg District Conference.

A buggy ride of seventy miles with Presiding Elder P. A. Johnston was a pleasant experience, and long to be remembered, notwithstanding the rough roads and the Tuscalometa swamp. The trip gave opportunity for a visit and a sermon at Walnut Grove, where a subscription of $23.50 was made; at Carthage, where the collection amounted to $236.50, and at Forest, where $116.55 was raised to endow a Methodist college for boys in Mississippi.

The Moral and Religious Training of Children.

BY G. STANLEY HALL.

To be really effective and lasting, moral and religious training must begin in the cradle. The sense of touch, the mother of all the other senses, is the only one which the child brings into the world already experienced; but by the pats, caresses, hugs, etc., so instinctive with young mothers, varied feelings and sentiments are communicated to the child long before it recognizes its own body as distinct from things about it. The mother's face and voice are the first conscious objects as the infant soul unfolds, and she soon comes to stand in the very place of God to her child. All the religion of which the child is capable, during this, by no means brief, stage of its development, consists of those sentiments—gratitude, trust, dependence, love, etc.—now felt only for her, which are later directed toward God. The less these are now cultivated toward the mother, who is now their only fitting, if not their only possible object, the more feebly they will later be felt toward God. The infant soul has no other content than sentiments, and upon these rest the whole superstructure of religion in child or adult. The mother's emotions, and physical and mental states, indeed, are imparted and reproduced in the infant so immediately, unconsciously, and through so many avenues, that it is no wonder that these relations seem mystic. Whether the mother is habitually under the influence of calm and tranquil emotions, or her temper is fluctuating or violent, or her movements are habitually energetic, or soft and caressing, or she is regular or irregular in her ministration to the infant in her arms, all these characteristics and habits are registered in the primeval language of touch upon the nervous system of the child. At this stage, religion is naturalism, pure and simple. Religious training is the supreme art of standing out of nature's way. So implicit is the unity of soul and body at this formative age that care of the body is the most effective ethico-religious culture.

As the child comes to feel and know its own ego, it must be taught obedience. As soon as it distinguishes between what it does for itself, and what others do for it, it can command or obey, and must be carefully thrown upon its own resources, so far as developed, but no further. The whims and moods of the embryonic personality must be studied. To escape these children sometimes develop almost a passion for obedience. If, as children grow few and rare, the tender but important cradle-battles go against the mother, the latter is enslaved and the former are spoiled. Pleasures must be few, and mild, and uniform; and rare and intense enjoyments that bring reaction avoided. The limitations of the almost infinitely natural selfishness of the young child should be enforced along with the submission to authority.

Next to be considered are the sentiments which unfold under the influence of that fresh and naive curiosity which attends the first impressions of natural objects, from which both religion and science spring as from one common root. In this direction the mind of the child is as open and plastic as that of the ancient prophet to the promptings of the inspiring Spirit. The child can recognize no essential difference between nature and the supernatural, and the products of mythopœic fancy, which have been spun about natural objects and which have lain so long and so warm about the hearts of generations and races of men, are now the best of all nutriments for the soul. To teach scientific rudiments only about nature, on the shallow principle that nothing should be taught which must be unlearned, or to encourage the child to assume the critical attitude of mind, is dwarfing the heart, and prematurely forcing the head. It has been said that country life is religion for children at this stage. However this may be, it is clear that natural religion is rooted in such experiences, and precedes revealed religion in the order of growth and education, whatever its logical order in systems of thought may be. A little later, habits of truthfulness are best cultivated by the use of the senses in exact observation. To see a simple phenomenon of nature and report it fully and correctly, is no easy matter, but the habit of trying to do so teaches what truthfulness is, and leaves the impress of truth upon the whole life and character. I do not hesitate to say, therefore, that elements of science should be taught to children for the moral effects of its influences. At the same time, all truth is not sensuous, and this training alone, at this age, tends to make the mind pragmatic, dry, and insensitive or unresponsive to that other kind of truth the value of which is not estimated by its certainty so much as by its effect upon us. We must learn to interpret the heart and our native instincts as truthfully as we do external nature, for our happiness in life depends quite as largely upon bringing our beliefs into harmony with the deeper feelings of our nature as it does upon the ability to adapt ourselves to our physical environment. Sacred things should not become too familiar or be conventionalized before they can be felt or understood. The child's conception of God should not be personal or too familiar at first, but he should appear distant and vague, inspiring awe and reverence rather than love; in a word, as the God of nature, rather than as devoted in serviceable ministrations to the child's individual wants. The slow realization that God's laws are not like those of parents and teachers, evadible, suspensible, and their infraction perhaps pardoned, but changeless, pitiless, and their penalties sure as those of the laws of nature, is a most important factor of moral training. First the law, the schoolmaster, then the gospel; first nature, then grace, is the order of growth.

The Lottery.

We give below the views of some of our exchanges on the Lottery question, and ask attention to them:

Louisiana has before her a magnificent moral issue, one in which all good people can unite—the question whether the State shall be sold to a Lottery Company. It is simply glorious how the Louisiana Educational Association has met the issue and scorned the bribe. One of the provisions of the proposed Lottery amendment to the Constitution applied a portion of the money to be derived from the sale of the Lottery franchise to the support of the public schools of the State. The association adopted a resolution to the effect that "such a method for raising money for the cause of education is unwise and immoral, and calculated to poison, at its very source, the stream of knowledge from which the children of the State are invited to drink," and protesting against the amendment and any such application of tainted funds. Since the great public meeting in which Dr. Palmer made his famous speech, in which he classed the Lottery with the Mafia, and suggested that revolutionary methods might become justifiable, all the religious and better elements are united, and it will be a royal battle between virtue and bribery. In this matter we earnestly hope that the religious papers which represent the negroes will do their part well, as thus far they do. But they will need to add more vigor. The negro minister who defends the Lottery ought to be put out of his office; and every pulpit should speak its strongest word, and white and black take the opportunity to unite against the world and the devil.—Independent.

Already the Lottery and anti-Lottery fight has begun in Louisiana. The main issue, as our readers are aware, is upon the acceptance or rejection of the offer of the Louisiana Lottery Company of $1,250,000 a year for the extension of its charter, an issue upon which the voters have divided into "Pros," who favor the acceptance of the offer, and "Antis," who oppose. We may add that all the New Orleans daily press favor the Lottery, except the Delta. There is a strong suspicion that the other papers have been subsidized. It is claimed by some that the stringent United States laws have so crippled the Lottery that they can not pay the amount promised. But that statement does not deserve consideration. It is the duty of the State to stamp out the whole vile business, and this it is to be hoped, the people of the State will do in spite of the big corruption fund of a million of dollars with which the Lottery people seek to buy up the purchasable votes of the blacks and poor whites.—Christian at Work.

Before closing the lids of Blackstone and putting the weighty old volume back on the shelf, we quote a few of his words upon the always live topic of gambling. Reformers, if we mistake not, will find it remarkably good and appropriate reading.

"Next to that of luxury," says he (Chap. 14, Book iv.), "naturally follows the offense of gaming, which is generally introduced to supply or retrieve the expenses occasioned by the former: It being a kind of tacit confession, that the company engaged therein do, in general, exceed the bounds of their respective fortunes; and, therefore, they cast lots to determine upon whom the ruin shall at present fall, that the rest may be saved a little longer. But, taken in any light, it is an offense of the most alarming nature tending by necessary consequence to promote public idleness, theft and debauchery among those of the lower class; and, among persons of a superior rank, it hath frequently been attended with the sudden ruin and desolation of ancient and opulent families, an abandoned prostitution of every principle of honor and virtue, and too often hath ended in self-murder."—Sunny South.

IT IS COMMON.

So are the stars and the arching skies,
So are the smiles in the children's eyes;
Common the life-giving breath of the spring;
So are the songs which the wild birds sing—
Blessed be God, they are common.

Common the grass in its glowing green,
So is the water's gli-tening sheen.
Common the springs of love and mirth;
So are the holiest gifts of earth.

Common the fragrance of rosy June;
So is the generous harvest moon,
So are the towering mighty hills,
So are the twittering, trickling rills.

Common the beautiful tints of the fall,
So is the sun, which is over all;
Common the rain with its pattering feet;
So is the bread which we daily eat—
Blessed be God, it is common.

So is the sea in its wild unrest
Kissing forever the earth's brown breast;
So is the voice of undying prayer
Evermore piercing the ambient air.

So unto all are "promises" given,
So unto all is the hope of heaven;
Common the rest from the weary strife;
So is the life which is after life—
Blessed be God, it is common.

Coast Gleanings.

It has been said, "If one ever visits our Gulf coast and eats mullet, he will long to come back again." The rule may have exceptions, but I fall under the rule.

July was to bring three events: Seashore Camp Meeting and Seashore District Conference—and the mullet. As the time to leave drew on apace, my chances of going became less hopeful; but just before giving up the cherished desire, one of my Ellisville stewards said: "You must go. I and my friends here will open the way."

Monday morning, two A. M., I started, and was privileged to hear most of the eleven. A. M. sermon at the camp ground. O, the beautiful campus these Methodists have secured to themselves! I attended the initial meeting; have missed three gatherings; have seen the sapling shade trees, planted years ago, develop until to-day one can walk continually in the shade of beautiful live oak trees. Commodious seaside homes, called tents, allow Christian people to have the benefits of our lovely coast country, without its evils, and here until October first some three or four hundred souls tabernacle.

Among the ministers ministering on this occasion were some of camp ground boys of a few years ago. And they are not without honor in their own country. This meeting has been precious to many souls, and, like all others, has an unknown record to be revealed at the last day. A word spoken in season, a song, a sermon, a look, a tear, a grasp of the hand; ministers quickened, swords sharpened; we may not know, but God does.

Bay St. Louis was the objective point for some dozen souls, July 23. Seashore District Conference was to convene there. Friday morning, nine A. M., Rev. E. H. Mounger, P. E., opened the Conference in the neat church-building, in past days known as the Protestant Chapel, now as the Methodist Church of Bay St. Louis. Rev. H. J. Harris was elected secretary. By ten A. M. we were delighted to have Bishop C. B. Galloway appear in our midst. We were honored by the presence of Rev. Alex Watkins, agent Millsaps College; President Anderson, of East Mississippi Female College; J. B. McLaurin, agent American Bible Society; Rev. Van Valkenburgh, colporteur of Louisiana Conference. Several of the pastors were detained by illness or sickness in their homes. Bro. Howell was recovering from an accident incurred while trying to board a moving train. Dr. Harmon was quite feeble, but thought to be improving.

The selection of delegates for representation of the laity at the Annual Conference resulted in choice of Bros. H. J. Harris; Cope, of Paulding; Dr. Griffin, of Moss Point, and Ramsey, of Vancleave.

Ellisville, Hattiesburg and Purvis asked for the next District Conference, and Purvis was selected.

The experience meeting, Sunday afternoon, was most delightful and edifying. Methodism has not been established at the Bay without cost. Some eight years ago the prospect was gloomy. For several years we had been trying to get a foothold. At one of our camp meetings at Seashore, a good brother, Bro. Henry Ware, was restored to the joys of God's salvation. In other days he had been a minister. He longed to do good, and, as I was his pastor, he asked at my hand the privilege of working at the Bay. A Sunday-school was organized, and one time, in order to lead it, he was compelled to walk the railroad trestle, of nearly two miles, between Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis. Before that year closed, God sent Dr. Turner out of Tennessee, southward. After many promising offers from other points, the Holy Spirit directed him to locate at the stronghold of Catholicism, Bay St. Louis. I trembled for them lest they would fall from their steadfastness. As I walked up the street to the place of Conference meeting, my eyes beheld a comfortable building, smiling within and without in its glory of fresh paint. Pulpit and chancel rail of modern pattern; organ, chandeliers, all of approved style. I inquired of the present pastor, Bro. Savage, "What number have you on the church record?" "Eighty," was the reply. I fell into a train of meditation. How is this? Whence came this transformation? At our experience meeting the problem was solved.

Listen! A saintly matron, plainly attired, with radiant countenance, arose, and said: "I love God; I do not seek to be happy; I feel that God has a work for me to do in this place. My great desire is to know my duty, and then to do it." Oh, how I longed to say out loud, "Yes, thank God! Sister Turner, and you are doing it!" Oh, for more consecrated men and women to do God's will where they are, even amidst all the adverse surroundings of life.

Bishop Galloway—grand man that he is—preached two sermons with a liberty and an unction that was soul-inspiriting. He won the hearts of the struggling band of Christ's humble followers, and henceforth the first District Conference held at Bay St. Louis will be "red-letter-day" in its history.

In Memoriam.

REV. T. Y. RAMSEY.

In the death of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey the North Mississippi Conference has lost one of her leading ministers, and a noble character has passed from the scenes of earthly action. It is difficult yet to realize that he has gone from us, and that we shall see him no more at the Conference, nor in the field leading the hosts of Israel. He was one of nature's noblemen, strong in conviction, firm in purpose, and prompt in action. He did not seek favor and thrift by flattery and fawning. A faithful and zealous servant of the church and a loyal follower of Christ, he never lowered his knightly crest to anything beneath his high calling. He was a veteran in the itinerancy. Forty-seven years a Methodist preacher! During this long service he was ever true to the trusts committed to him by the church.

He was converted at or near Demopolis, Ala., in the year 1843, during a great revival conducted by Jesse Boring, at that time presiding elder of Mobile district.

A graduate of the University of Alabama, he afterwards studied law, and at the time of his conversion had already entered successfully upon the practice of his chosen profession. But, constrained by the Spirit of the Lord, he abandoned his worldly vocation and aspirations, and went out, while yet in his early manhood, as a preacher of the gospel. In the fall of the year in which he was converted, he received license to preach, and a few weeks thereafter was admitted into the Alabama Conference, in session at Columbus, Miss. Like Peter, and others of first disciples, who at the command of their Lord gave up their nets to become fishers of men, so did our glorified brother obey the voice, "Come, follow me," and turn aside from a calling, in which many win fortune and honor, to follow Christ and become a winner of souls. Thenceforward his life-work was in the service of the church and of his Lord.

He served the church faithfully and well in various important positions: first in the Alabama Conference, afterwards in its division, in the Mobile Conference; and in the North Mississippi Conference since its organization in 1870. He was a member of the General Conference which met at Louisville, Ky., in 1874. He was a member of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust from its organization until the time of his death. His carefully prepared sermons were clear expositions of the gospel, chiefly along the doctrinal and practical lines of religion. In the pulpit his manner was earnest and forcible. He was a faithful expounder of the Word of God. In debate, on the platform or Conference floor, he frequently took part, and was bold and fearless in the advocacy of his position, speaking as he thought and felt. Dignified and courteous without constraint, always affable and pleasant, he impressed himself favorably upon the social circle.

He was twenty years a presiding elder. The writer, as a pastor in more than one of the districts served by him, learned to love him for his excellencies of personal character, as well as for his fidelity and efficiency in official administration. He was considerate and kind to the preachers of his district. He made them his friends. Winona district was the scene of his last work in the presiding eldership. The district was large and the work heavy; but it prospered and grew under his administration. Though of slender physical habit, yet a constitution elastic and flexible had long rendered him equal to the strain upon his mental and bodily energies incident to his itinerant work. But under the arduous duties of this, his last district, there seemed to be a giving way of his vital powers, and at the end of four years' service he left the district with impaired health and vigor. He served as pastor, however, in one or more charges afterwards. In December, 1888, he retired from the active ministry and reluctantly, but quietly, accepted a superannuated relation.

On account of failing health, he was unable to attend the last session of his Conference, which met in Grenada. On my return from this Conference, I visited him at his home in Durant, Miss. I found him in the midst of his family enfeebled in body, yet the same courteous, affable Christian gentlemen I had long known him to be. He appreciated kindly the attentions of his brethren who had lately visited him. He seemed to anticipate the end, and to be ripening and mellowing spiritually as he neared the close of his long and useful life. Accompanying me to the door, as I took leave of him, he spoke calmly and trustingly of his hope in God. He died on the morning of March 15, 1891; and, as his pastor, Rev. J. T. Moody, writes, "was ready for his departure." A member of his stricken family writes: "He loved God with his whole heart, and the church better than life. He made a home-life so sweet for his wife and children, that the memory of it is a heritage better than jewels and gold." Fitting words with which to close the chapter of a good man's life.

Woman's Work.

The Woman's Missionary Society, Louisiana Conference, held its annual meeting in Shreveport, June 19 to 22. The delegation was hardly so full as heretofore; the interest in the work deeply felt by those present. The occasion was marked by special spiritual fervor. Sunday was a notable day; a stirring sermon by Rev. J. A. Parker at eleven A. M. The evening services comprised a thrilling class meeting, in which the members of Shreveport Mission Church, especially, were joined by the ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society; the livest, liveliest meeting enjoyed for many long years. This was followed by an address from Mrs. Dowdell, of Alabama, one of the managers of the Woman's Board of Missions, and new life was infused into the society by her words of wisdom. The annual addresses and reports were encouraging, and those present departed for their future scenes of labors with renewed zeal. The State corresponding secretary reported forty-three adult and twenty juvenile societies. The treasurer reported $959.67. The officers elected for the coming year: Mrs. Thos. P. Fullilove, president; Mrs. M. E. Schumpert, vice-president; Mrs. C. J. Foster, corresponding secretary; Mrs. S. B. McCutchen, treasurer; Miss Lizzie Paxson, recording secretary. District secretaries: Mrs. LaPrade, New Orleans; Mrs. M. Morrison, Shreveport; Mrs. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, Alexandria; Mrs. B. F. Alexander, Opelousas; Mrs. B. Sheppard, Homer; Miss Minnie Thompson, Delhi. Place of next meeting, Keachie. Time, not fixed.

The Epworth League Call for Reports.

Will every pastor who has not reported the organization of an Epworth League in his congregation, do so immediately? The Sunday-school Committee wishes to report to the approaching sessions of the Annual Conferences the number of Leagues organized, etc. Dr. Peterson, who has prepared a Southern Methodist yearbook by order of the last General Conference, is anxious to have the statistics of the Epworth Leagues. We are certain many Leagues have been organized that have not reported to the central office at Nashville. Will our brethren, the pastors, see to it that reports are made at once? The Epworth League is as much an institution of the church as our Sunday-schools, and reports will be called for by the Annual Conferences now soon to meet. Will the brethren kindly respond to this call?

A Correction.

In to-day's Advocate (July 23) I notice the following item:

"Life of Clara Chrisman, by T. L. Mellen. $1."

That needs correction. Miss Agnes G. Chrisman has just published at our Nashville House a very charming memorial of her sister, bearing the name of "A Living Sacrifice: Anna Clara Chrisman." It is the tribute of a sister's love, and ought to find its way into every home, that its holy impress may be made on the hearts and lives of all our young people, and our older ones as well. A fine steel-plate portrait of Miss Clara adorns the book, which is regarded as one of the most elegant ever issued from our Publishing House. I have been simply one of many contributors to its pages, and have superintended the publication for the gifted author. The introduction by Bishop Galloway is in his best style, and is a fitting prelude to the narrative so lovingly and eloquently written by the sister. The poem by Wm. Rice Sims, Ph.D., makes an appropriate ending to the volume. Until certain arrangements are completed, the book can be ordered through me or Rev. W. D. Dominick, Jackson, Miss. Price, $1.

Sympathy for Us.

Resolutions adopted by the Camden District Conference, of the Little Rock Annual Conference, July 10, 1891:

Whereas, The Christian people, together with all lovers of morality in the State of Louisiana, are engaged in a fierce conflict with a great moral evil, the Louisiana State Lottery; And, whereas, This is a contest that can not be bounded by State lines, but Louisiana is simply made the battle-ground of a great principle, in which every lover of God and good government is profoundly interested; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this District Conference send greetings to the good people of our sister commonwealth, with expression of hearty sympathy for them and their cause, and pledge earnest and sincere prayer for complete triumph over their foe.

Resolved, That a copy be furnished the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Memphis Commercial.

J. R. Cason, Sec.

Fordyce, Ark.

[We speak for the Christian people of Louisiana when we say, We are profoundly grateful for the expression of sympathy and the promise of prayer to Almighty God for our deliverance, contained in the above preamble and resolutions of the Camden District Conference of Arkansas. We feel that our cause is the cause of righteousness, and, therefore, the cause of every citizen of this great country; and we trust that all Christians everywhere will hold up their hands in prayer while we fight this modern Amalek.]

From the Work.

VERONA, MISS.

We have recently closed a meeting here, which resulted in great good to the town and community. Christians were revived, backsliders reclaimed, and sinners converted. The town occupies a higher plane of experimental and practical godliness than at any time before during my four years' pastorate here. The young men and young ladies of the church have organized weekly prayer meetings. Some of our members have taken up the duty of family prayer who heretofore have neglected it. We organized an Epworth League before the meeting, which is doing well. Have sixty members. Thank God, the young people of the church are coming to the front in the performance "of works of righteousness"—the observance of practical Christianity! Bro. Bowen, of Aberdeen, and Bro. Burroughs, of Okolona, assisted me in the meeting. We were much pleased with the earnest, faithful labors of both these brethren. Eternity alone will reveal the good they did here. Our meeting commenced with our Quarterly Conference. Bro. J. B. Stone, P. E., fired the church, spiritually, by preaching three sermons containing great spiritual power before Bro. Bowen reached us. Bro. Stone is doing fine work on the district.

Verona made a bid for Millsaps College, which was the best made, according to our judgment, everything considered. Yet a majority of the trustees differed from us in judgment, and located the college at Jackson, Miss. So the trustees of our college had to make other arrangements. They were eminently fortunate in employing Prof. L. B. Abell as principal of the school. Those who know him and his excellent wife as teachers speak of them in the highest terms of praise. Now, Prof. Abell proposes to make this school one of the feeders to Millsaps College. He will prepare a boy, who desires it, to enter either the freshman, junior or senior classes of that school. As for health, morality and intelligence, we think Verona is unsurpassed by any town in the State. So, if parents desire to send their sons and daughters where they may obtain the best religious and intellectual culture, and be free from anxiety concerning their health, send them to Verona. Very cheap board can be had with the principal in the college. For further information apply to Prof. L. B. Abell, Verona, Miss.

LAUDERDALE CIRCUIT.

I believe that it was but a few years ago when there was nine, if not eleven, appointments on this charge. Last year there were eight; this year we have four. We have a membership of 220. We reported one Sunday-school at last Conference; will report four next. We have had but a small increase in the membership up to this time. We have built two churches: one at Lauderdale station; the other seven miles west, at what is known as Seule's Chapel. The one at Lauderdale was begun about the middle of April, and was ready for use the fourth Sunday in May. If you please, I will partially describe this building: 24x40; post, 14 feet; arched ceiling, 19 feet in center; pulpit recess, 4x12; vestibule on corner, 6x12; tower, 37 feet; Gothic roof, Gothic windows; circular windows in tower and front end of building; painting outside, pearl, with dark walnut trimming inside; wainscoting, light oak, walnut band; walls, cherry stain, and varnished—overhead, white; seats, light oak, to correspond with wainscoting. This church's seating capacity is 165. It cost $915, of which amount $800 was given by the church. We were promised $100 by the Church Extension Board of the Conference. We have in this church a fine Sunday-school in fine working order.

Our other new house was to be completed to-day (July 28) up to the painting. Same style building as the other, minus the vestibule and tower. This building will cost about $700 when complete.

These buildings speak well for the church on this charge. This is the first house of worship our church has ever had at this place (Lauderdale), though they have been holding forth here for many years. The one at Soule's Chapel takes the place of an old shell that has been standing there for years. These people have done well, and I pray that God's richest blessings may be their reward.

Health is good, and crops the best for years.

N. M. Clark.

WEIR, MISS.

On last Sunday, being the third, we began a meeting at the Methodist Church of this place, which was conducted by our pastor, Bro. J. H. Smith, whom we all love so well. He preached from the text, "What is man, that thou dost magnify him?" at eleven o'clock, to a large and attentive congregation; and being full of the Spirit himself, could not fail to reach the congregation; therefore, the seed sown fell in good ground, and brought forth fruit. Tuesday night Bro. J. T. Moody joined the band; preached four sermons that were sweetened with the Spirit of the Master, and could not have been excelled by Talmage, Spurgeon, or even a Sam Jones. May the God of all grace follow him wherever his lot may be cast! The church was wonderfully revived, and started out with new determination to fight the battles of life for God and dying humanity. There were fifteen conversions, ten joining the Methodist Church, with others to follow; two the Presbyterian. To God be all the glory. Pray for us.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. W. F. Henderson writes from Pleasant Hill, La.: "Please place in your list of camp meetings that of 'Beulah,' on Pleasant Hill circuit, to begin Friday, August 21, to which you are cordially invited. Crops are very fine in this section; plenty of rain. Anti-Lottery spirit warming up; people determined to down the monster."

—Rev. B. R. East writes from Saltillo, Miss.: "We have just closed a most glorious meeting in Saltillo. About all the children in town were converted. About twenty-five professed; fifteen joined our church; several will join other churches. We were assisted by Bro. W. D. Bass, of Pontotoc. We are moving on well with our work."

—Rev. H. P. Lewis writes from Benton, Miss.: "Mrs. J. N. Shoemaker passed away on the morning of July 16, leaving a husband and five little children—one an infant. She was, at the time of her death, an acceptable member of our church here in Benton. She came to us from the Baptists some two years ago. May heaven bless her stricken husband and children!"

—Rev. C. R. Godfrey writes from Sparta, La.: "On July 22 I closed a big meeting at one of my appointments on the Sparta circuit. Many bright and powerful conversions. Church wonderfully and graciously revived. Six adults added to the church. Five infants baptized. A Sunday-school was organized with eighty pupils. Crop prospect very good, especially cotton. Finances very low; but it is hard to starve this preacher out."

—Rev. J. G. Sibley writes from Summit, Miss.: "We have just closed an enjoyable meeting in Bogue Chitto, Miss. We held seven services for all who desired to come, and three special services for the children. These services for the children were graciously blessed of God. I am becoming more and more convinced that we are not making the proper effort for the salvation of our children. Here is the mistake of the church to-day. Thirteen joined, and I think as many were converted. The church was quickened and comforted, and my own soul strengthened and encouraged. The outlook on this charge brightens, and am confident of a full report at Conference."

—Rev. J. F. Wynn writes from Pineville, La.: "Bro. Walker and I have had a glorious meeting this week at Hickory Grove. Sinners convicted, mourners converted, backsliders reclaimed, and believers sanctified."

—Rev. J. V. Penn writes of Homewood circuit: "Saturday night closed a glorious meeting at Homewood Church. The prayers of assainted wife, in behalf of penitents last year, were answered during this meeting. Twenty-one additions and about thirty conversions. Some of the brightest I ever saw. We will enlarge or build a new church at this place. Rev. C. C. Griffin was with me part of the time and did glorious work for Christ. Praise the Lord for salvation! More anon."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis writes from Raymond, Miss.: "Have just adjourned a glorious meeting at Forest Hill, assisted by Revs. W. T. Beall and J. A. Hobbs. Also we were glad to have with us one day the worthy president of the Shuqualak Female College, Rev. L. M. Stone, a Baptist minister who preached an excellent and edifying sermon. Church generally revived, and thirteen were added to the church; five had been received previous to the protracted meeting, making a total of eighteen this year at this church."

—Rev. R. A. Davis, writing from Downsville, La., says: "Our protracted meeting at Downsville closed last night after a run of thirteen days. Preaching every day and night except on Friday, eleven A. M. Had no ministerial help, except on the first Wednesday night. Bro. Hearn, of the Protestant Methodist Church, preached for us an excellent sermon. The result of meeting was: About ten or twelve professed conversion, many lukewarm members reclaimed, church very much revived, a young ladies' prayer meeting appointed, and twenty-six accessions to the church. To God, our heavenly Father, and Jesus Christ, our blessed Savior, and the Holy Ghost, our great Comforter be all the praise."

—Rev. G. E. Greene, P. C., writes from Brodnax, La.: "Owing to circumstances, I have held no protracted meetings yet. As well as I can ascertain, however, there have been two revivals on the circuit: foreign missionary and Sunday-school. We now have five Sunday-schools, and the prospect of one more. Our foreign mission assessment is $108.41, of which I have secured subscriptions to the amount of $102.40, while two congregations have not yet been approached. Of course, I shall have to wait on the crops for this money to be paid. Fifteen dollars, though, has been forwarded to Nashville. Our new church at Jones, La., is built, and I have preached in it three times. As soon as all indebtedness is paid up, we expect to have it dedicated."

Woodberry, and E. P. Clark answers the question, Does Public Life Give Long Careers? The remaining articles combine to make this a strong number. Forum Publishing Company, New York. Price, $5.

Sunday-School Lesson—Aug. 9.

CHRIST'S AUTHORITY.

John v, 17-30.

In this section we have the defense which Christ made to those who condemned him for healing an impotent man on the Sabbath day. Being in Jerusalem during one of the feasts, Jesus had healed an infirm man at the pool of Bethesda, and sent him home carrying his bed, on the Sabbath day. This roused great indignation in the Jewish authorities, and they persecuted Jesus—possibly summoned him before the Sanhedrim. Our lesson gives his reply to their accusations. He claims

I. Authority over the Sabbath. In the other Gospels, Christ's defense is on the ground that works of mercy are in perfect accordance with Sabbath law; that the Sabbath was made for man's benefit. Here we are taken back to the fact which is at the root of this law: God's resting from all his works on the seventh day. What did this rest of God mean? It was not a ceasing from doing men good. . . . Not on the seventh day did this stream of mercies cease. Hence, Jesus in curing the impotent man on the Sabbath, was only imitating God in his ceaseless goodness to all men."—Reith. It is lawful to do good on the Sabbath day. See Isa. lviii, 13, 14. Jesus claims

II. Equality with the Father. So the Jews understood him (v. 18)—"said also that God was his own Father,"—and this further claim roused deeper resentment. But Jesus proceeds to emphasize and justify his claim. He THE SON, and as The Son, his action is not self-willed, but voluntarily depends on that of the Father; his action is completely coincident with that of the Father, in every particular, even to his life-giving power. This equality is founded on the Father's love for the Son, and the fullness of knowledge enjoyed by him. Being equal in power and in knowledge with the Father, Christ asserts his right to equal honor (v. 23). For us, Jesus Christ is truly and perfectly God. Further, Jesus claims

III. Power over Life and Death.—(Comp. Rev. i, 17, 18.) In this sphere the "greater works" are found. Jesus has power and authority to give life to dead souls, and to raise men from the death of sin to the life of righteousness. This power he exercises now—every conversion is a new illustration and example—and the day is coming when he will so speak that "all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." As only God can create and call into being, so only Jesus has power to give the blessing of eternal life. We may go to him for this, for "this life is free for all," who believe in him. Let us learn further, that "our dead are in his keeping." Jesus claims

IV. Full authority as Judge. This authority comes from the Father, and is entrusted to Jesus because of his fellowship with our race. It will be a judgment that has "sympathy, mercy, and full understanding of man's condition in it." It will, therefore, be infallible, and its sentence impossible of dispute. It will be "according to a man's works," whether good or evil; and will determine man's destiny. We can prepare for this only by making Jesus our Friend.

Jesus is "the One Man by whom all other men must judge themselves and be judged. The human life of Jesus is the ideal, which, rising before us continually, judges our own."—Preacher's Magazine.

It was said of Samson of old that his strength lay in his flowing locks. However that may be, a full and vigorous suit of hair is looked upon as one of the accompaniments of good bodily health. Yet the hair itself may be diseased without having reference to any bodily ailment.

Whatever the cause of decay, the best preventative of baldness is not delay treatment, and the best application known to physicians who have made the hair and scalp a study for years, is the Louisiana Creole Hair Restorer, so named because it contains the ingredients used for generations by the beautiful Creoles of the South, who are famous the world over for their splendid and luxuriant hair.

This is a preparation that is not only a remedy which will stop hair from falling out and cause it to grow, but it also restores the natural color, and is a blessing such as ladies delight in having on their toilet tables. Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

This was given for noble purposes, and therefore we must not part with it foolishly. It must not be thrown up in jest, nor sacrificed to a quarrel, nor refined away in love.—Collier.

Lafayette expects to have a bank in operation soon.

Lake Charles mills are shipping lumber to Mexico and Texas every day by water.

Lake Charles is soon to have a street railway. The stock was readily taken by its enterprising citizens.

The police jury of Union parish levied a seven-mill tax upon all the assessable property in the parish, the proceeds amount to be applied to parochial purposes.

Assistant Engineer Darling, of the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf railroad, arrived in Alexandria, Friday last, with a surveying corps, having finished the second preliminary survey from Alexandria to Mobile City, in Winn parish.—Caucasian.

Our country exchanges from every part of the State give accounts of the forming of Anti-Lottery Leagues. The people are beginning to see the threatened danger of another twenty-five years of Lottery rule, and are determined to avert it. There is but one issue—it is both moral and political—and that issue is, Lottery or no Lottery. We are glad to note the fact that everywhere the people are speaking out on the right side—no Lottery.

The Union Bridge Company, of St. Louis, commenced to put down the concrete on the land piers of the Houston Central, Arkansas and Northern railway bridge at Alexandria last Friday. The construction of this road is quite active at present in that section, and they will soon be completed to Alexandria.—Caucasian.

The Arcadia Advocate says of that town on two hills:

To-day the hammer and saw of the carpenter can be heard in any direction, and some very nice residences are under construction, while other improvements are being pushed vigorously to the front. The prospects of a North and South railroad grows brighter every day, and the compress and mill being an assured fact, we have every reason to be proud of our town.

The police jury of the parish of Terrebonne recently passed an ordinance which makes it unlawful for any person to shoot, kill or trap any white or blue cranes, sea-gulls, tern, etc., from Feb. 1 to July 1, inclusive. Any person so doing shall, on conviction, be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be find not less than $25, nor more than $100, and in default thereof shall be imprisoned in the parish prison for the term of not less than three days, nor more than thirty days.

Washington.—The late rains have greatly benefited the crops of this section. The effects of the drouth are fast disappearing, and the prospects for an abundant crop are now very promising. All the buildings for the cotton factory have been completed, and machinery is being put in position. The managers propose having everything in readiness to commence operations on Sept. 15. The progress of this enterprise is watched with a great deal of interest by the surrounding towns, and should it prove a success, the building of many like industries in the near future will follow.

At a meeting of the merchants and leading business men of Brookhaven, last Monday, the initial steps were taken towards the organization of the Brookhaven Grocery Co., for the purpose of doing a wholesale grocery business. Seven thousand dollars of the capital stock was quickly taken. This will be ultimately increased to $20,000. It is the object of the company to do mainly a local business, furnishing groceries at the lowest rate possible to Brookhaven merchants and those in the country. A charter will be secured, and the company will be ready for business by Sept. 1.—Leader.

The Clarion-Ledger says:

Judge R. A. Hill has at last sent in his resignation as judge of the United States Court for the District of Mississippi. He was appointed by President Johnson in 1865, and has for more than a quarter of century served the government faithfully and well. He will retire from active service with the best wishes of the Bar of the State, as well as of the people generally.

Though a Republican, Judge Hill has always been held in the highest esteem by the Democrat leaders in Mississippi, and in the memorable days of reconstruction was conservative and fair. Judge Hill is now about 80 years of age, and retires on full pay for the balance of his life.

The cistern in the rear of the public building, intended to supply drinking water to Uncle Sam's employees, is a wonder to all brick masons who have examined it. It is now approaching completion at a cost of about $500.

Its walls are of brick, and from thirteen to twenty inches in thickness. The bottom is paved with three feet of concrete. It has two four-inch inlets and an eight-inch outlet, the latter at a much higher level than the former. It will be divided into two parts by a partition of brick, and all the water used must filter through this wall. After the mortar has set it might be safely dug up and carried anywhere, being quite as strong, though not as portable as a jug. There is nothing like it in the town, nor probably in the entire South.—Commercial-Herald.

The interest of Confederate veterans here has been much enlisted in a plan suggested by the statement recently published that Mrs. Davis will make her home in Richmond, Va., and is desirous of selling her home on the coast, or Beauvoir. This is, that the people of Mississippi, or of the entire South, should unite to purchase the Beauvoir estate with the object of preserving the house and the grounds intact as they were in Mr. Davis' lifetime, in memory of the illustrious soldier and statesman who passed his declining years there. It is believed this this could be easily affected, and that future generations would appreciate the forethought that secured them the home, that the same property would afford an excellent site for an old soldiers' home, the foundation of which is an object very dear to the veterans.

Judging from the comments of experienced planters, the bright side of the present agricultural outlook is the splendid corn crop. The cotton crop is equally good, but the general apprehension is that it is altogether too good for the price—in fact, that such an immense crop will be raised that it will realize nothing for the grower. Corn is not open to this objection, being raised for use and not for sale.

The Hinds county Sunday-school Convention at Raymond was largely attended—twenty-five schools being represented by seventy-six delegates. Five of the Jackson schools were represented by thirteen delegates. A large number of visitors were also present. It was altogether the most interesting session of the convention that has yet been held. Capt R. H. Smith was elected president; J. T. H. Laird, secretary and treasurer, and the usual number of vice-presidents and committees were chosen. The next convention will be held at Edwards.

Theologic Unrest.

In transition times, when confessions of faith do not speak the exact truth according to the new thoughts springing up in men's minds, what are Christian ministers and men to do?

One thing is clear; to ask ourselves, "Is the old Bible, which our parents read for their comfort, true or not?" Here on our tables, what is it? If we feel confident that it is God's book, sent from him, though in human speech, to teach us of him, then we had better cling to it rather than to newspapers and essays and books which speak of this or that doubt?

As we keep looking in it, we are struck with one element in it and its writers; their calm feeling of certainty, without paroxysms of speech or hysterical exhibitions of feeling. Calm and majestic and dignified, all its writers are; they speak with absolute conviction that God is, that God is great and just and holy and merciful. They falter not as they speak of Jesus Christ as the only begotten Son of God, who came across the history of the world, not to speak words of wisdom only, but by his death to make atonement for the sins of the whole world. They speak of one Holy Spirit who is here to elevate mankind into likeness with God. They affirm if man is to get this elevation and salvation, it can only be by daily repentance and loving faith in God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

Are these things in the Book beyond all peradventure? Then we have no need to be troubled, because we can not tell the day Moses or another man edited the Pentateuch, or the author of Psalm xc, or even of Psalm li. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that seek him." He that cometh to Christ, let him come with boldness, knowing he will bless every penitent seeker.

Too much is made of this or that man's thoughts and affirmations. The man who in the Bible can read God's thoughts and affirmations need not trouble himself because Smith thinks this and Jones says that. Have we God left us and Christ?

One studies mathematics and gets mathematical thoughts. If one study his Bible, he will get Bible thoughts and Bible feelings and Bible aspirations; and Bible thoughts and feelings and aspirations, are those of God. So many journals nowadays, so many pamphlets and books; there is one book, greater than all books; to neglect it is to be ignorant of God, to study it is to know God and Jesus Christ, whom he sent; is to enter the blessedness; is to grow calm and be surrounded with the certainties.—Southern Churchman.

WINDOW SHADES!

Our offering of dropped styles of shades at half price was so successful last summer that we have concluded to repeat the same this year. By dropped styles we mean the styles which will not be made this coming fall and which we will, therefore, be unable to get duplicates of. The goods are perfect and on the best quality of spring fixtures with a handsome band. We will sell and others in proportion. The larger sizes of shades are what they use principally in the South, and there has never been an opportunity of buying them as low as this. We will accompany the drive with standard makes of Table Oil Cloth at 15 cents per yard. Floor Oil Cloth, Wall Paper, Matting and Rugs we are running out at very low figures, and you will save money by buying now.

A 7x42 Shade at 75c., worth $1.50,
An 8x38 Shade at 90c.; worth $2,

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, August 6, 1891.

Briefs.

By quotations from Jefferson himself, the Southwestern Presbyterian has knocked the props from under the structure which the Times-Democrat built upon the great statesman's lottery utterances. The quotations show plainly that Mr. Jefferson would never have favored the present proposition before the people of Louisiana. Will the Lottery papers now face about and correct their misrepresentations of Mr. Jefferson? Of course, they will do no such thing!

The Baptist Convention, recently held at Natchez, among other things, after a spirited discussion developing strong opposition, passed the following:

Resolved, That a committee of nine be appointed to put before the entire Baptist body of Mississippi the question of location of the Mississippi college, and report at the next meeting of the convention.

The convention also adopted resolutions against the Louisiana State Lottery and against opening the World's Fair on Sunday.

According to recent summaries, the total estimated circulation of religious papers published in this country is very near 4,000,000, which would intimate that the papers are seen by, at least, two or three times that number of readers. The Roman Catholics head the list with 127 papers, having about 750,000 circulation, but the Methodists are close behind them with 147 papers, having about 660,000 circulation. Of undenominational religious papers, it is reported that there are now thirty-nine with 265,000 subscribers.

Here are some facts in regard to girls' colleges which we clip from an exchange:

One hundred years ago girls were not allowed to attend any of the public schools of the country. When the first high school for girls was opened in Boston, in 1825, there was such an outcry against the innovation, and so many girls applied for admission, that after a year or so the scheme was abandoned, and was not attempted until 1853. In 1774 the first academy for women was opened by Moravians in Pennsylvania; in 1789 the first seminary for women in New England was inaugurated in New Bedford, Massachusetts, and Mary Lyon, in 1836, founded a college for women in that State on the broadest basis ever before attempted. Oberlin College was opened on the co-educational plan in 1833, and Antioch College in 1852. But these were innovations which met with much discussion and opposition, even among women themselves.

Once in a while a case comes up which shows the impracticability of the State and Church working together. The general government has been for some years aiding education among the Indians through the churches. In order to work this matter to the best advantage the Roman Catholics established an Indian Bureau at Washington. So well did they manage the matter that last year out of an appropriation of $570,218, they secured $363,349. Gen. Morgan, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has broken off all communication with this Indian Bureau, and declares he will hereafter deal with the schools directly. This is the proper course to pursue. Let the government and the churches be separated and remain so. Let the commissioner now break with all the churches, and let each do its work in its own way. "Render to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's." We do not need, we certainly do not desire, either a State Church or a Church State.

The Week of Prayer.

Next Sunday begins the week of prayer appointed by our Bishops. We regard this as a very important matter, so much so that we trust that all our pastors will duly observe it. We have already published the program for the week, suggested by the circular sent out. We call attention to it again, this time in detail, and annexing some suggestions which we hope the brethren will receive in a kindly spirit.

Sunday, August 9th.—Sermons on the Baptism of the Holy Spirit as a preparation for service.

From what we have observed for some time past, we have come to the conclusion that just now nothing is more needed in the church than stirring sermons on the Holy Spirit and his offices and work. There seems to be a low plane of thought and a low state of feeling in regard to the work of the Spirit in the church. This is especially the case in regard to the baptism of the Spirit as a preparation for church work. This is the point made in the program. It says: "Sermons on the Baptism of the Holy Spirit as a preparation for service." Christian work can not be done without this. The first disciples were commanded to "tarry in Jerusalem" until they had obtained this baptism. Without it they were nothing and could do nothing. The very day they obtained it three thousand souls were converted. That chapter of church history proves the necessity for it and proves its efficacy when it comes. We trust all our pastors will preach on this great subject, showing the people their need of this baptism and what they can do when they secure it.

Monday, August 10th.—Prayer for great spiritual power for all our preachers.

Physical power is good for a preacher, because it is a sort of basis upon which to rest the mental machinery. Intellectual power is an excellent thing, for no man can do much without it. What the preacher needs is spiritual power. With this he can do all that is required of him. Without it the influence of his life is weak and his preaching void of good and great results. Let us see to it that we pray for "great spiritual power for all our preachers;" then will they become "sons of thunder."

Tuesday, August 11th.—Prayer for a higher estimate of spiritual things for all our people.

One of our hymns says:

"Look how we grovel here below,
Fond of these earthly toys!"

What low estimates of spiritual things obtain largely in the church! How many thousands have hardly yet passed the A B C of spirituality! Every pastor who is faithful has been many times pained and grieved at the low ideas concerning spiritual matters which he has found pervading the minds of many of his people. And the injunction to "grow in grace and knowledge" sounds from many pages of the divine Word. Let us show the people how to cultivate a higher estimate of divine things, and pray that they may enter upon that cultivation with a holy and earnest enthusiasm.

Wednesday, August 12th.—Prayer for the increase of home religion, more family altars, and greater fidelity to the religious needs of our homes.

Home religion! Family altars! Greater fidelity to the religious needs of our homes! Oh, what need of prayer along these lines! There are thousands of homes where religion is sickly, and hundreds where the altars are in ruins. Preaching and exhortations and scoldings and reproofs on this line have been faithfully given by our pastors without much apparent effect; now let the people and preachers fall down before God in agonizing prayer for a revival of home religion—the most beautiful exhibition of religion earth ever saw!

Thursday, August 13th.—Prayer for the youth of the church in our Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues and institutions of learning.

The young people! The hope of the Church and the State! What heart is so wedded to worldliness that it will not, on next Thursday, send up its mightiest prayer for God's blessings upon the young people of the church and the country? Let us not fail to supplicate the divine blessing upon all our Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues and schools and colleges, that these all may prove real training grounds, where the young shall be fully qualified to enter upon the grave duties of life and prosecute them to the building of genuine Christian characters and doing genuine Christian work.

Friday, August 14th.—Prayer for our missionaries, native helpers and members in foreign mission fields.

There is a peculiar pathos in the request that at this time we should pray for our missionaries. They are enduring peculiar trials, in the small allowance they are receiving from the church at home, and in the persecutions they are undergoing from the heathen among whom they labor. Our brethren in China are passing through the fires, and God only can assuage and quench the fierce flames. Let the church lift up its voice to Heaven in their behalf, that they may be kept in the midst of the furnace, and that from it may come forth an influence that will greatly speed the progress of the gospel and win thousands of souls to Christ.

Saturday, August 15th.—Prayer for our missionary workers among the unevangelized in our cities and on the frontiers.

The greatest need is manifested in our cities and on the frontiers. Many are the weary toilers in these needy fields, men and women working for God in trying to rescue human souls from the "depths of Satan." How their hearts hunger for Christian sympathy! How their spirits would be refreshed by the knowledge that twelve hundred thousand Christians on Saturday, the fifteenth of August, were praying for them! How they would toil on to life's close encouraged by such prayers!

Oh, brethren, pastors and people, let us with one heart and mind wait before God during the appointed week and bear these sacred causes to his listening ear. May his Spirit help us to keep the week faithfully!

Autobiographical Preaching.

This is a kind of preaching which, in some quarters, prevails to a considerable extent. It is in its present form the growth of late years, perhaps. It does not mean the relation of the minister's religious experience, as at first glance might be supposed. This has always formed an element in Methodist preaching, and we can not now afford to omit or ignore it. He always speaks with most effect who utters the truth which he knows in his own heart. But even here care should be taken lest the impression be made that our individual experience is the sole pattern, the very measure of truth. Religious life is almost endlessly varied, all the while, however, within certain bounds, just as the features of the human face are few in number, but are so combined that each face is unlike every other. Sometimes it occurs that through the prominence given to a pastor's modes of religious thought and feeling, a whole church or community is fashioned in the same way. Each experience is a feeble repetition of the pastor's, the same feelings recur, and the same expression of them. It comes to be a whip-poor-will song, a scarcely varying note.

But this is not written to protest in the slightest against the introduction of experience into the utterances of the pulpit.

"What we have known and felt
With confidence we tell."

I refer rather to that which is of a totally different character—the relation of matters purely personal. The preacher's own history, what he thinks and does, becomes the staple of his ministry. The most minute things pertaining to himself find place there.

In this, as in some other directions, the traveling evangelist has led the way. He, the evangelist, seems to think that there is a desire among his hearers to know something of his life, and he will not disappoint so laudable a curiosity. Others have fallen into the same way, and congregations are regaled with particulars of personal and family life, abundant and minute. Sometimes the bright sayings of "my little boy, Joe," are introduced. "My sweet little pet, Susie," comes frequently into the sermon. But more frequently reference is made to the "dear, blessed woman at home." However, if the latter is present and smiles or weeps an accompaniment, the interest is greatly heightened.

Mr. Editor, do not suppose that this is something unheard of, for I assure you it is a picture from life, caught by the Kodak and not enlarged.

In justification of this kind of preaching, it is said that people will listen to it. That is very true, and the more personal it is the better they will listen. They listen because it has in it the element of gossip, and that always catches the ear of people. We turn first to the personal column in the newspaper. "Society Notes" in the Sunday paper, which tell how certain very unimportant persons were feasted by certain others, and what frills and neckties they wore, are eagerly read. Even if a beggar tells you the story of his life, you listen with absorbed attention. I once knew a woman who entertained her friends by the hour telling them how she "did up" her back hair. It is surprising how the smallest circumstances of one's life, when related, will catch the attention of others. It is no strange thing, then, that a preacher finds willing hearers, even when self is most crudely and offensively prominent.

But is this a sufficient reason for preaching of this character? Not at all, it seems to me. Let us consider the results of autobiographical preaching. In the first place, the hour designed for holding forth the Word of Life is wasted, and those who might have been impressed by the truth go away without benefit. Opportunity is lost, for if you fill a basket with sawdust, you can put no apples in it.

It may be that many are pleased and will come again, the crowd with vacant minds, and they will go away with the conviction that the Brown or Jones or Smith family, of whom they have heard so much, is a very important one. But the good and thoughtful people, those who hunger for the truth, who keep up the church everywhere, these depart with sad hearts.

"The sheep look up and are not fed."

Verily the cause of it all is vanity. Brother, you who indulge in it, if you examine yourself, you will find that it is this which prompts you. You are all the while burning incense to the divinity of self. There is, perhaps, but one lower depth of ministerial vanity, and that is when the preacher preaches his little sermon and afterward tells you what "liberty" he had, and what the hearers said about it.

There are so many good things waiting to be uttered that it is strange that any should use the time in speaking of self. The old preachers talked of getting behind the Cross. This is the spirit the minister should have, so to speak, that every eye may be fixed on Christ. St. Paul said, "We preach not ourselves, but Christ crucified, and ourselves, your servants for Christ's sake." The preacher should point to Christ as the Baptist in the wilderness, who said, "I am not that Light, but am sent to bear witness of that Light," self-forgetful as the Star in the East that led the Magi to the Savior in Bethlehem.

Let the truth go forth from the lips as the load from the gun, carrying the force of the gun with it, but leaving the gun behind. E. H. MOUNGER.

Prayerlessness.

Next Sunday begins our week of prayer, and to show the need of prayer we present our readers with some earnest words of Dr. A. T. Pierson, taken from the Christian at Work:

This is an age of prayerlessness. Scientific skeptics sneer at prayer; but God's own children do what is worse—they practically neglect prayer. We have not come to the time when the forms of prayer are commonly omitted, though even in this respect there has been within thirty years a very manifest decline. Those who know the facts are compelled to confess that family worship is far less frequent than it used to be, and is ten times as common in communities recently brought to Christ from heathenism as in the oldest communities of Christendom. We have noticed, with considerable pain, that in our great cities, like New York and Chicago, the prayer meetings of churches have well-nigh ceased to exist, and in the place of the old-fashioned prayer meeting, in which many took a conspicuous part, we have now lectures by the pastor, or ecclesiastical conversazioni, in which the object seems to be to entertain a congregation, or to avoid the necessity of holding a prayer meeting or of confronting the fact that so few would come to a prayer meeting if it were held.

Christianity is an inspired, divine religion, or it is nothing; the Bible is an inspired book, or it is nothing, and the power which converts man is a power above man, or it is nothing. The church must be brought back to something like her primitive confidence in prayer, in the prayer that takes hold of God, that is offered in faith, that is offered in the name of Jesus Christ, that prevails with God first of all, that it may afterward prevail with man. The reason why the preaching of this day is not far more blessed to the salvation of man—the reason why the masses, as we call them, are becoming more and more hopelessly and irremediably alienated from the churches—the reason why the vital power of the churches themselves is so low that it needs continually the tonic and stimulant of church entertainments to secure even a respectable showing of members—is because the prayer that brings man nigh to God and brings God consciously nigh to man is so rare and exceptional a factor in our church life. Mr. Finney found in his great revival services in Western New York that the effectiveness of his preaching was exactly in proportion to the importunity and spirituality of a few praying disciples, who often spent whole nights in prayer to God; and when one of these men died who had been for years confined to his own room by bodily infirmity, it was found that revival after revival had visited fields in answer to his prayers, and in the exact order in which those fields had been the subjects and objects of his devout supplication. There is not a pastor living to-day, who has been marked as a winner of souls, who from his own experience can not attest that the power of his preaching is dependent upon the power of his own prayers, and the prayers of an elect few who have had the secret of immediate access to God.

Another Answer.

What's the matter with the Sunday-school drifting away from the church?

A friend, in this week's ADVOCATE, thinks it is the fault of parents. My opinion is that the person responsible for the drift, where it exists, is the preacher. If he acts as a stranger to the school, he will soon find it estranged from him, and through him from the church. And vice versa.

A wise preacher can keep his Sunday-school in good form. So thinks,

Faithfully yours, E. B.

Notes.

"True education is not making [illegible] like others, but bringing out to the best and loftiest our own personality."

Sam Jones had an experience with the hoodlums and their rotten eggs in Houston, Texas, last week. Great indignation among the better class of people was expressed at this evidence of hoodlumism.

Rev. H. S. Thrall says in the Texas Advocate:

In the fifty-two years that I have been in the itineraney I have not received from the charges I served an average of $400 a year, and have never complained on account of meagre support.

Straws are sometimes signs. Bro. Van Valkenburgh told us the other day that Bibles and hymn and song books sold better than any other kind of books. And yet some people are trying to delude themselves into the belief that the Bible is in fragments and the Christian religion a corpse.

The missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal Church has had an increase of $75,000 a year for six years in its income. For the second time since the war the society is out of debt. That is a good record. We wish that our own people would wake up to the necessity of more earnestness in the missionary work, and show larger liberality in their gifts for that work. Nothing nurtures religion better than hearty work and liberal giving.

In the Independent, Dr. Newman Hall has expressed this thought, which is good for young preachers:

There is danger of young preachers thinking that to satisfy the demand for novelty is the best evidence of intellectual power. But is it not easier to attract and please by novelty than so to preach the old truth that it is felt to be ever new? Is there not enough in the old Bible in parables, events and existing conditions to furnish new illustrations and enforcements of old truths? Would not the sounder learning and the strongest intellect sanctified by the divine Spirit, be better employed and manifested in holding up to view, so that men must be arrested and interested, the reality of the old gospel, than in multiplying gaudy pictures of our own fancy, lighted up by flashy squibs?

A conference of the members of the Executive Committee of the International Sunday-school Association to be held at Chautauqua, Aug 15-1[illegible]. The object of the conference is, to consider the present condition of organized Sunday-school work in the United States and British America, to compare plans of work, to review and perfect the financial plans of the International Committee, to consider plans for the World's Sunday-school Convention, to be held in St. Louis, June 1893, and to consider the appointment of a special committee to visit the prominent places of the world in order to secure a full representation at the World's Convention. We understand that our friend, E. P. Mackie, who is one of our foremost Sunday-school workers, will attend the committee meeting at Chautauqua.

In an article on "No Room for Sectionalism" the Pacific Methodist Advocate has this profound paragraph:

No less significant or important than the race questions, suggesting political measures, are the religious difficulties suggesting unity and co-operation in the realm of pure sentiment. The many theological disturbances of late do not mean local or sectarian divergencies only, but a national commotion of convictions produced by the recognition that there is disparity between our pretensions in religion and the faith we keep with one another. It is not so much a discontent with creeds as it is a discontent with the Phariseeism of our lives. There is life within us that always revolts against the falsehoods we practice. The perturbations that have recently given the several churches so much concern, are only the strong man discontent attacking creeds to lull to sleep a disordered soul and a troubled conscience.

Like the surgeon's scalpel that cuts down to the bone and lays open the sources of corruption. It is not the church creeds that are at fault; it is the church life.

The Standard speaks out a timely caution in this paragraph:

Those gatherings which represent the active Christianity of the time are amongst the most notable of all that occur. There is no occasion on which the wonderfully vigorous life of the times finds more marked expression than in these. At this point of view, the Christian religion of these last years of the nineteenth century ranks first and foremost among the world's great powers. Has all this activity back of it those full fountains of spiritual life from which it must be spiritually fed, or else degenerate into sheer worldliness of spirit and motive? There is a home "vineyard" to be "kept" by every one of these workers in the great world field. Is it thus kept, or neglected? Every one of these thousands of young people whose zeal has found both stimulus and expression in "the great congregation," the resounding song and the eloquent appeal, has a home duty and a heart-culture for which there is, and can be, no substitute. Let them be careful not to undervalue or neglect "the little nook" and "the little book"—the closet prayer and the devotional reading.

There is nothing more important at this time than the "keeping of the home vineyard."

Personal and Otherwise.

In thirty years the Wesleyans have built eighty churches in London, and the membership has increased one hundred and fifty per cent.

We are sorry to have missed the visit of Dr. A. D. McVoy and wife, who called at our office on their return from a pleasant trip to the Educational Convention at Toronto.

The delegates of the Annual Conference from the Brandon district are W. M. Thornton, Rev. Irvin Miller, Dr. W. H. White and A. J. Brown. The alternates are Judge A. G. Mayers and W. M. Williams.

T. J. Magruder, of Baltimore, one of our foremost laymen and Sunday-school workers, died recently, in his sixty-eighth year. He was for a long time a prominent man in business circles in Baltimore.

We have received the annual catalogue of Mansfield Female College. This school belongs to the Louisiana Conference. It did good work last year, and will open for another successful session, Sept. 9.

Rev. Ira B. Robertson writes: "I have just returned from the burial of my oldest brother, Wm. T. Robertson, of Jefferson county, Miss., who died in the triumphs of faith, July 31, 1891. Verily, God's children are gathering home."

The editors of the Nashville Advocate have both been called to affliction. Dr. Hoss mourns the death of his mother, and Dr. Bounds that of a little boy. We send our sympathy to that office. Having experienced both afflictions, we know what each means.

The editor of the Arkansas Methodist says that during a thunder storm recently his residence was struck by lightning. Several members of the family were shocked by the current, and his mother, Mrs. R. G. Bennett, seriously hurt. He is hopeful of her speedy recovery. We are glad that the harm done was not more serious.

Rev. E. F. Edgar writes: "By special request Rev. J. W. Chambers, of Enterprise, Miss., came over and assisted us in a meeting at Soulo Chapel, Camden charge, last week. Bro. Little was present two days, it being time of Quarterly Conference, Saturday and third Sunday in July. The meeting continued until Thursday evening. It was a very gracious meeting to many souls. The church and community greatly blessed. Bro. Chambers is a plain, strong, earnest preacher. We loved him before, but all love him now."

Letter from Bro. Pipes.

MR. EDITOR: Since I parted with you at the District Conference, my health has been very poor and I have been exceedingly feeble, not being able to go to the table a goodly portion of the time. At present I have a little more strength, and my friends think I ought to seek relief in a higher climate. Hence I shall leave here in a few days for Webster Groves, Mo., to spend the balance of the summer; hoping to be benefited by the change. This is, however, an experiment. If I am benefited and gain enough strength, I hope and expect to meet you at the Louisiana Conference at Alexandria, next winter. If I am not benefited by the change, I shall endeavor to submit cheerfully to the inevitable. My post-office will be Webster Groves, Mo.

Tell Bro. Mitchel to send my ADVOCATE, and see that it comes. Having taken it since 1851, I can't afford to miss even a number.

I rejoice to know that we have the prayers and sympathies of the brethren, which we need. Many thanks to the good people of Grand Cane for their many kindnesses. Pray for us. Loving the brethren with a pure heart fervently, I remain,

Your friend and brother,

J. PIPES.

Bishop Galloway on Dr. Marshall.

I have just read "Rev. C. K. Marshall, D. D.," by Bishop Galloway. It is a feast of good things and will give new inspiration to the preacher who reads it. It is a grand theme by a grand man. Every Mississippi preacher should read it. J. W. HONNOLL.

A Splendid Institution.

In writing of Prof. Hinemon's school, Rev. Boone Keeton, A. M., says: "Thorough instruction, a high grade curriculum, gentle but firm discipline, and a dignified Christian spirit are marked features of Hinemon University School—features that should be well considered by those who wish the best education for themselves or their children. I most heartily recommend this school."

Our Young People.

A LISTENING BIRD.

A little bird sat on an apple tree,
And he was as hoarse as hoarse could be.
He preened and he prinked, and he ruffled his throat;
But from it there issued no silvery note.
"Not a song can I sing," sighed he, sighed he
"Not a song can I sing," sighed he.

In tremulous showers the apple tree shed
Its pink and white blossoms on his head;
The gay sun shone, and, like jubilant words,
He heard the gay song of a thousand birds.
"All the others can sing," he dolefully said—
"All the others can sing," he said.

So he sat and he drooped; but, as far and wide,
The music was borne on the air's warm tide,
A sudden thought came to the sad little bird,
And he lifted his head as within him it stirred—
"If I can not sing, I can listen," he cried—
"Ho! ho! I can listen," he cried.

Old Major's Sermon.

BY SALLIE V. DUBOIS.

Deacon Hartley and his family were always faithful at the Sabbath services, and they were always in their places on time. Mr. Hartley's father had brought him up in this strict old way. "Never go late to service, James," he was wont to say. "Make it part of your religion never to disturb the religion of others." And the pastor always knew that he could rely upon Deacon Hartley and his family. If the choir was a little late about getting there, Mr. Hartley would start the hymns, and the Hartley children would sing with a force that would make itself felt.

Regularly every Sabbath morning at ten o'clock, old Major, the horse, would draw up to the church door, while the deacon would unload the heavy carryall, and afterward go unguided to the church shed, built for his special use. Rain or shine, they were always there. Deacon Hartley was no dry-weather Christian. Years before, when the deacon married, he and Mrs. Hartley formed the resolution never to stay home from service unless kept by the hand of God. And they had always followed the plan.

Religion in the deacon's household was a very simple thing. To be a Christian was to be like Christ. And their lives in the church were useful and happy because they kept themselves in the warm atmosphere of God's love.

But there came at last a Sabbath when even Deacon Hartley hesitated. At daybreak a cold east storm set in, and the rain fell in heavy gusts, which sent a chill through the frame. As the day advanced the storm increased, while the deacon shivered as he viewed the weather from the kitchen window.

"What about it, wife," he said; "we would be under the cover of the carryall, but old Major would have to breast it, and 'a righteous man regardeth the life of his beast.'"

The result was that Deacon Hartley's family composed themselves for a quite Sabbath at home.

"Father," said James, "old Major has broken his halter, and I can not find him anywhere."

This was at about twelve o'clock, just as Mrs. Hartley was preparing the noon meal. The Deacon donned his gum coat, and a search was instituted, but no Major could be found, and the dismayed family met in consultation as to what should be done.

"Here he comes," cried Harry. And sure enough old Major came trotting sedately into the yard, halted a moment at the gate, and then went on his way and entered the open stable door.

"Bless my heart," cried the deacon, "if I don't believe the old veteran has been to church, in spite of everything." And sure enough, at just five minutes before ten, as the pastor entered the church path, grasping with both hands an umbrella, old Major passed him, paused at the door, and then went to his shed, with head down, and the water dripping off his shaggy coat.

"Well," said the deacon, "I never had a sermon to strike home like that preached by old Major. Hereafter let the weather be what it may, it shall always find me promptly seated in the house of God. Wife, this is the first and last time old Major shall attend Sabbath service alone."—Christian Observer.

Little May, three and a half, was riding with her mother. When entering the town, where the dwelling places congregated more thickly, she looked around with the remark, "My, but it is housey around here."

Mr. Editor: It has been several months since I wrote to your excellent paper. This being vacation, I have plenty of time at my disposal. Our live little city is improving all the time. The Presbyterians are building a handsome church near ours. Papa is pastor of the Methodist Church here. We have a large membership. About sixty have been received this year. We have a fine Sunday-school. Mr. Geo. Hawkins is our superintendent, and we like him very much. I belong to the Sunday-school Missionary Society. The Ladies' Aid Society had an ice-cream supper last night for the benefit of the parsonage. I like Hattiesburg very well, as I have a great many nice playmates. My "chum" left this morning for the Seashore Camp Meeting, and I miss him. A classmate of ours met with a horrible accident the other day. He got both his legs cut off in a sawmill. Oh, it is dreadful; but he has been such a hero through it all. The doctors think he will get over it, and I pray that he may. Before I close, I will ask the little cousins a question: What news did the first carrier-pigeon bring? It is to be found in the Bible.

Your little friend,

BENNIE B. PARKER.

Hattiesburg, Miss.

Mr. Editor: I am a little boy ten years old, and as I have not seen any letters from this country, I thought I would write one. We have a fine Sunday-school at Pearl River Church, and one of the best in the Mississippi Conference. Mr. C. L. Ray is our superintendent. We all like him very much. We have about one hundred members. Bro. Thompson is our preacher. I am going to school every day. Mr. H. H. Scurlock is our teacher. I will close by answering Gertrude Grambling's question: Christ was twelve years old when he began to teach the people.

Your new friend,

CHARLIE P. MELTON.

P. S.—The Advocate is a welcome visitor to our home every week.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl ten years old, and this is the first letter I have ever written to the Advocate. I hope to see it in print. My papa takes the Advocate, and has been taking it for a long time. I have two sisters. I am the youngest of the three. I have a little white Esquimaux dog named Gipsy. Bro. S. S. Keener is our pastor this year. We all like him very much. We go to Sunday-school every Sunday. My sister plays the organ. I am taking music lessons, and I practice one hour every day.

Your little friend,

CARRIE QUIMBY.

Donaldsonville, La.

Mr. Editor: I am a little girl eight years old. My papa takes the Advocate. I have two little brothers, and one little sister dead. I go to Sunday-school. Our superintendent is Uncle Nick King. Our preacher this year is named Trevilion. We like him very much. I joined the church last year under Bro. Denson. I did love him. This is the first letter I have ever written in my life. I hope it will not reach the waste-basket. Yours truly,

MAMIE PACKWOOD.

Household.

Good Manners at Home.

That ancient saw, "Familiarity breeds contempt," is too often shown to possess a modicum of truth by the behavior toward one another of the members of the home circle. The familiarities of home ought to be so sweet and gentle as to prove it, so far as its application there is concerned, to be a lying proverb. It is impossible to avoid familiarity in the household, as the very word itself implies, except by the cultivation of a cold indifference of demeanor which would leave nothing of home but the name.

But there is no reason in the world why the familiarity of home life should breed the "contempt" which shows itself in rudeness of behavior, in harsh, unfeeling words, in cross, snarling, snappish tones, such as would not be tolerated for a moment among equals outside of the "charmed circle" of home. Yet how often such conduct is indulged in—thoughtlessly, perhaps, in many instances—by those who would be shocked or angry if accused of ill-manners. The husband, for example, will speak to his wife in a manuer that is little short—if at all short—of insulting. If any other man spoke to her with so scant courtesy, he would very likely be knocked down by the justly indignant husband for his insolence—or deserve to be, if he were not. But why should a husband feel himself free to use language and manner toward his wife which he would not tolerate in another? And the wrong-doing is not all on the masculine side of the house. The feminine tongue sometimes wags with quite as little regard to the proprieties of polite intercourse in criticism of its owner's "lord."

These discourtesies of intercourse between husband and wife are not always the result of diminished affection. They often occur where there is no real breach of sincere regard. They are simply the result of the close intimacy of home life, combined with an unwise, not to say a sinful, neglect of the common laws of good breeding. It would be impossible for husband and wife to maintain toward one another precisely the same bearing as they exhibit toward the outside world; nor would it be desirable if they could. But a delicate, tender, loving courtesy in word and deed they can and ought to show each other.

And so of the bearing of brothers and sisters towards one another. There is a deal of brutality, shall we say?—certainly of vulgarity in the behavior of brothers toward their sisters, and vice versa. For a boy or a young man to be courteous to his sister is an old-fashioned virtue; in many families it is quite out of date. Happily it is not wholly extinct, for there are still manly young men in the world who would scorn to treat even their sisters with rudeness.

But the habit of discourtesy in the family is quite too prevalent, and we are sorry to say that here, too, the wrong-doing is not confined to the "sterner sex." Happy is the home where the gentle familiarity which springs from affection, tempered by genuine courtesy, abounds, where "good manners" are as scrupulously observed as in intercourse with the outer world, where no jarring notes disturb the sweet serenity, the heavenly harmony of the home circle.—Examiner.

We often see little pictures framed and hung upon the walls of American homes with beautiful mottoes, such as, "God bless our home," "God guard our home," etc. Well, God lays down four rules, the observance of which will make our homes happy. 1. "Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands as unto the Lord." 2. "Husbands, love your wives as Christ also loved the church." 3. "Children, obey your parents in all things." 4. "Fathers, provoke not your children lest they be discouraged."—Raleigh Christian Advocate.

A New Discovery.

While the Edison Company were rejoicing over the recent decision which vindicated their priority in incandescent lighting and terminated a prolonged litigation, the announcement was made of a discovery which, if successful, will supersede the invention for which they contended, and will give to the world lamps needing no wire, but deriving their brilliancy simply from induction. The name of the discoverer is Mr. Nikola Tesla, an electrician who came to this country from Austria-Hungary about five years ago, and whose experiments in alternating currents for motive power have met with successful results. It was by developing the potentialities of the alternating current from the ordinary vibration of 100 to 200 times a second to one of many million times a second—following in the line started by Clerk Maxwell twenty-five years ago, and so ably carried forward by the German physicist Hertz in 1888—that we have this fresh confirmation of the electro-magnetic theory of light and this latest adaptation of it to practical purposes. Commenting on this fresh discovery, the Boston Herald says:

"The most immediate practical result is a method of lighting which promises to revolutionize present processes, since it does away with all wires in direct connection with lamps. For instance, in illuminating a room, all that is required is to bring the wires from the central station into connection with two large sheets of metal, one on either side. Metallic wall paper might be employed. Then, by the principle discovered, glass tubes properly exhausted are made to glow brightly through the induction thus produced, and they can be moved freely about the room like any lamps. It is said that this invention will not make wholly useless the present methods of lighting, for, although the existing forms of lights will be replaced, the wires for distribution from central stations, together with much of the machinery now in use, will still be required.

"The discovery promises to be of use in many other directions, including the development of power, as well as for purposes which at present are probably hardly suspected. Altogether, it looks as if the power of electricity would thus be enhanced to a degree fairly marvelous in its extent."—Zion's Herald.

The Kinetograph.—What is the Kinetograph? Well, it involves a combination of the phonograph and instantaneous photography, by which as a man is speaking—reciting a poem, or delivering a sermon, or simply conversing—the phonograph records the voice, and what may be called an electrical camera, at once proceeds to take a rapid succession of images of the speaker and his action. In this way, by means of the combination of electrical photography and the phonograph, "a man," as Mr. Edison says—for he is the inventor—"can sit in his own parlor and see reproduced on a screen the forms of the players in an opera produced on a distant stage, and as he sees their movements, he will hear the sound of their voices as they talk or sing or laugh, while each little muscle of the singer's or speaker's face will be seen to work, his facial expression with its every change will be exactly reproduced, and the stride and positions will be natural, and will vary as do those of the person himself." The mind is almost dazed at the possibilities which seem to be contained within the Kinetograph; it can, if perfected, wipe out the past to the extent that it can present almost everything but the bodily substance of a speaker years after he has passed away. However, not to speculate further in this direction, we may add that Mr. Edison promises an exhibition of the Kinetograph at the Columbus Fair; and should that great Exhibition be postponed, as it is said it will be, it may be expected that this new and wonderful device will then be seen perfected, when its possibilities will be more clearly discerned.—Christian at Work.

A Life Saved!

READ THE TWO STATEMENTS.

An Extraordinary Case!

New Orleans, La., Nov. 22, 1890.

Last April I was attacked with Chagres Fever in Spanish Honduras and was given up to die by two physicians. During that spell and since I have used a pound of quinine and quantities of other medicines without any benefit. From three to four days out of every week I have been down and have suffered untold agonies. Between these spells I could scarcely walk more than two blocks at a time. I did not expect to live through the coming winter. Ten days ago I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. I have had no fever since. All the symptoms have entirely disappeared. I have no pain or trouble of any kind. Am gaining strength very fast. Can walk miles at a time. My sudden and rapid improvement is simply wonderful. Germetuer has been a God-send to me. I can not say too much in its praise. Any who wish to do so may call on me. DANIEL PAFFON,

481 Jersey Street.

New Orleans, June 1, 1891.

My improvement continued, and soon after writing the above statement I was able to go to work and have been working ever since. My health is now perfect. I never felt better in my life. I give this testimony gladly, because I know that Germetuer saved my life.

DANIEL PAFFON.

Chagres Fever is known to be not only a most dangerous form of sickness, but also very difficult to cure. Germetuer has been tried on a number of cases. In every known instance it has cured quickly and completely. It has a similar record as a remedy for Swamp Fever and Malarial troubles of all kinds. Properly used, it is the quickest and most unfailing remedy for Fevers of all kinds, Dyspepsia, Debility, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Diarrhœa, Dysentery and all diseases of the Blood and Skin.

These claims are sustained by evidences from thousands of the best people in the country, and the evidences multiply in our midst every day.

Resolutions of the Seashore District Conference.

Resolved, By the Seashore District Conference, that we rejoice in the prospect of the early establishment of Millsaps College. We regard the choice of the location—Jackson, Miss.—as eminently a wise one. The need for such an institution in our State is very great. Parents naturally desire to have their sons educated in the State, and in a college under the control of their own church. We can not meet this demand without the establishing of this college. We look on it as evidently a movement of Providence, wherein we are called to co-operate. We ask our people to contribute liberally to the endowment of the college, and we commend the suggestion of Bishop Galloway, that in our homes Christmas offerings be made to it. We will welcome to our pulpits and communities the efficient agent of the college, Rev. A. F. Watkins, and will heartily aid him in his work.

E. H. MOUNGER,
J. L. DANTZLER.

Whereas, We feel and believe that the cause of our blessed Savior and the interest of our beloved Methodism will be greatly advanced by the permanent establishment of a high school somewhere on the seashore; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Seashore District Conference, that we hear with great pleasure of the contemplated enterprise of Rev. H. Jones, of our Conference—namely, the establishment of a high school at Long Beach, or at some other point where the greatest possible degree of success can be attained.

Resolved, That we, as a Conference, will do all in our power to assist our beloved brother in his worthy undertaking.

J. S. PARKER,

Resolved, That we return our sincere and heartfelt thanks to the kind people of the city of Bay St. Louis for their generous hospitality in so bountifully entertaining the members of this Conference, and that we will ever remember them in our prayers before a throne of heavenly grace.

The Corvallis College Case.

As this case has excited a good deal of interest in our church circles, and as the case has been decided in the lower court in favor of the church, we present below the decree of the court.

DECREE.

This cause came on to be heard on the 17th day of February, 1891, upon the pleadings, depositions, and documentary evidence herein, and after argument by Geo. H. Williams and S. T. Jeffries for plaintiff, and J. F. Watson and L. Flinn for defendants, the court took the same under advisement, and now, being fully advised in the premises, finds that the equities of the case are in the plaintiffs, and it appearing that the individual plaintiffs are interested in the property hereinafter described, and that the plaintiff corporation has the legal title thereto and a direct pecuniary interest therein, and it further appearing that on the 20th day of February, A. D. 1886, J. H. Lee as president and Jas. A. Cauthorn as secretary of Corvallis College executed to the defendants, as a Board of Regents of the State Agricultural College of the State of Oregon, a deed for the following described property, to-wit: , "And containing thirty-four acres and eighty-four-one-hundredths of an acre of land, known as the Starr Place, all in Benton county in the State of Oregon," and it further appearing that said Lee and Cauthorn had no legal authority to execute said deed by and on behalf of said Corvallis college, and it further appearing that said deed was executed without any consideration therefor and in violation of a trust and the rights of plaintiffs, it is, therefore, ordered, adjudged and decreed that the said deed executed by the said Lee and said Cauthorn as hereinbefore described be and the same is herein declared null and void, and that said Corvallis College has the title to and good right to the possession and use of said property. And it is hereby ordered and decreed that the defendants do deliver up to said Corvallis College the possession and use of said property within sixty days after the date of the entry of this decree, and that the defendants be and they are as a body and severally, enjoined and restrained from selling up or claiming any title, right or interest in or to said property. And it is further ordered and decreed that the defendants do pay within sixty days after the date of the entry of this decree the plaintiffs' costs and disbursements in this suit, and if the defendants neglect or fail to pay said costs and disbursements within said period, the plaintiffs may have execution for said costs and disbursements.

Value of Observation.

The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher once said that he never saw anybody do anything without watching to see how it was done, as there was no knowing but that some time he might have to do it himself. This habit of observation once served him in good stead. "I was going," he says, "across a prairie when my horse began to limp. Luckily, I came across a blacksmith's shop, but the smith was not at home. I asked the woman of the house if she would allow me to start a fire and make the shoe. She said I might if I knew how. So I started the fire and heated the shoe red hot, and turned it to fit my horse's foot, and pared the hoofs, and turned the points of the nails out cunningly, as I had seen the blacksmith do, so that in driving into the hoof they should not get into the quick, and I shod the horse. At the next place I went to I went straight to a smith and told him to put the shoe on properly. He looked at the horse's foot and paid me the greatest compliment I ever received in my life. He told me if I put on that shoe, I had better follow blacksmithing all my life. Now, I never should have known how to do that if I had not looked on and seen others do it."

Another writer in a contemporary on the same subject says:

Every one should cultivate the faculty of observation. If he does so designedly, it will not be long before he will do so unconsciously. It is better to learn a thing by observation than by experience, especially if it is something to our detriment. One would prefer to know which is the toadstool and which is the mushroom by observation rather than by experiment, for the latter might cost him his life. There is hardly a vocation in which observation is not of great service, and in many it is absolutely essential. It adds to the proficiency of the chemist, the naturalist, the mining expert, and the bushman. Observation quickens experiment. It leads to inference, to deduction, to classification, and thus theories are formulated, sciences established. An observing boy will become an observing man, and, as boy and man, he will have an advantage over those who have not cultivated the faculty. He knows a thousand things that the unobservant boy does not know. He does not get the knowledge from books or from others, but acquires it for himself, through the use of his eyes and ears, and properly appreciates it for that reason. A child may know more than a philosopher about matters that may not have come under the observation of the philosopher. A little girl entered the study of Mezoral, the celebrated historian, and asked him for a coal of fire. "But you haven't brought a shovel," he said. "I don't need any," was her reply. And then, very much to his astonishment, she filled her hand with ashes and put the live coal on top. No doubt the learned man knew that ashes were a bad conductor of heat, but he had never seen the fact verified in such a practical manner. Galileo noticed the swaying of a chandelier in a cathedral, and it suggested the pendulum to him. To another inventor the power of steam and its application was suggested by the tea kettle on the stove. A poor monk discovered gunpowder, and an optician's boy the magnifying lens.—Scientific American.

OBITUARIES.

BROADFOOT—Bro. ROBERT L. BROADFOOT was born Dec. 16, 1871, and died May 22, 1891, aged nineteen years five months and six days.

Bro. "Bobbie" was an exceptional young man. Dutiful and perfectly obedient to his parents, loving and careful with brothers and sisters, respectful and considerate of friends, he was loved by all. Bobbie joined the M. E. Church, South, at Trenton Camp Ground at camp meeting, when he was a little boy. Having been religiously taught from childhood by pious parents, he went into the church while quite young, and continuing without a charge against him until his death.

It was my privilege to visit him frequently during his long and lingering sickness. I found him prayerful, and very attentive to the reading of God's Word, and very ready to join in religious conversation. His greatest regret was that he had not been more active as a member of the church. He expressed himself as ready to die; and even just about five or ten minutes before he died—in fact, when he was dying—when asked by his brother if he was ready to die, he answered readily that he was. So while his life seemed short on earth, and especially so to his loved ones, yet he left the bright, soul-cheering testimony that he had on the wedding garment, and, with his lamp trimmed and burning, was ready to go out to meet the bridegroom.

His funeral sermon was preached by the writer; text, Matt. xxiv, 44.

In the death of Bro. Bobbie the family has lost an obedient and loving child and brother, the church a promising young member, the community a good citizen, and many of us a true friend; but our loss is his eternal gain. So we bow and kiss the hand that smites us, and say, "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

May the Lord graciously bless the bereaved ones, and may they all finally meet where parting will be no more forever! is the prayer of His PASTOR.

MCGUIRE—JOSEPH EDWARD MCGUIRE, the son of Nimrod McGuire and Elizabeth Toomer, was born near Canton, Madison county, Miss., Oct. 19, 1812; united with the church in 1856, when only fourteen years of age; entered the Confederate Army at eighteen; was elected lieutenant of a company of volunteers in the Seventeenth Louisiana Regiment, of which he afterward became adjutant to Col. Robert Richardson. He was captured near Vicksburg, Miss., and when he was exchanged returned to the service under Gen. Dick Taylor, and remained in the army till the close of the war. He was appointed by the governor to fill out the unexpired term of W. S. Logan as sheriff of Ouachita parish, La., to which office he was elected twice in succession, and then served as deputy to his successor (W. Theobolds), thus serving as sheriff for about twelve years.

It was my privilege to be with Bro. McGuire very often during his months of severe illness. I found him seriously and prayerfully preparing for the coming change. His disease (dropsy) sometimes seemed to yield to treatment, but it was only seeming. When the dying hour came I found him calm, rational, and trusting the Savior. His last word was, "Yes," assuring us of his trust in Jesus in his last great conflict. We doubt not "our loss is his eternal gain." He died early on the morning of June 6, 1891, at his home, surrounded with his friends and loved ones.

He leaves an earnestly pious mother, an affectionate wife, three Christian sisters, four devoted children and hundreds of warm, true friends to mourn his decease. To the latter (his friends), Let us urge you to emulate his virtues; and to his dear family and kindred, Let us so live that we will meet him where sin and its curse can never come! His pastor,

B. F. WHITE.

TOWNSEND—Bro. ABRAHAM T. TOWNSEND was born in Pickens county, Ala., Feb. 22, 1816, and moved with his parents, R. W. and Elizabeth Townsend, to Attala county, Miss., when young. When twenty-six years old he was married to Miss Mattie Forrister at Rochester, Attala county, Miss., and died at his home in French Camp, Miss., on the morning of July 18, 1891, leaving a wife and five children to mourn their loss.

He was long a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South; consistent not only that he did nothing contrary to the rules of the church, but also in that he did as best he could all that it required to be done; taking special care of its interests that were committed to him. He was also a man of solid piety. He kept a diary, which was seen without knowledge, in which was found this record, "At one o'clock every day I went to secret prayer." He was uncompromising with sin or evil doers; under all circumstances he was to be found going on in the even tenor of his way. He left a strong evidence that he was going to his reward.

His pastor preached his funeral in the Presbyterian Church at French Camp, Miss., to a large audience of friends and relatives. May he who has promised to be a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow keep his place in that home, and may they so live that there will be a happy reunion in the home above!

Let every enfeebled woman know it! There's a medicine that'll cure her, and the proof's positive!

Here's the proof—if it doesn't do you good within reasonable time, report the fact to its makers, and get your money back without a word—but you won't do it!

The remedy is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—and it has proved itself the right remedy in nearly every case of female weakness. It is not a miracle. It won't cure everything—but it has done more to build up tired, enfeebled and broken-down women than any other medicine known.

Where's the women who's not ready for it? All that we've to do is to get the news to her. The medicine will do the rest.

Wanted—Women. First to know it. Second to use it. Third to be cured by it. The one comes of the other.

HO, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness.—Isaiah lv, 1, 2.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Potit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

Centenary Female College.

The following are some extracts from letters endorsing Centenary Female College:

"There is no college to which I would commit my daughter with more confidence than to Centenary. Your curriculum is thorough, your faculty complete, and, above all, the home comforts given our daughters there commend the college to the young ladies themselves."—Rev. Sam P. Jones, Evangelist.

"In Centenary, our daughters of the South will find one of the best colleges in America. I have been among you, and remained with you, and I know whereof I affirm."—T. T. Fishburn, Banker, Roanoke, Va.

"The place may justly be called a well-appointed home for those sheltered within its walls. The rule of work is thoroughness, having been a patron of the college, I can cordially testify of its high character."—Mrs. M. E. Riggs, McLendon, Texas.

"Indeed, it is the ideal college within the range of my observation."—John B. Boyd, (Merchant), Somerville, Ga."

"It is just such an institution as all sensible parents desire for the education of their daughters."—Henderson H. Henson (Pres. Bank), Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Home comforts unexcelled by any school of my knowledge."—Rev. J. A. Jones, Vicksburg, Miss. (Pastor Pres. Church.)

Cuticura Soap For Bad Complexions Red Rough Hands and Baby Humors.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger nails and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The report of the operations in the Ohio oil field for the month of July shows that there were 144 wells completed, with a daily production of 8,461 barrels, and nineteen dry wells.

The labor assembly of Chicago has decided to issue a warning to the workmen of the world not to come to Chicago in the expectation of getting work in connection with the World's Fair.

The foreign committee of the Columbian Fair Commission has made arrangements with M. Fanvette, chief of the ministry of commerce and industries, by which France has been allotted 50,000 square yards of space in the eastern wing of the exposition building.

The recent reciprocity treaty of the United States and San Domingo has been announced by proclamation of President Harrison. Sugar, molasses, coffee and hides pass our ports without duty, while in return a long list of American products go on their free list.

The Latin-American department of the World's Fair has received a cablegram announcing that the Congress of Colombia has appropriated $80,000 in gold to defray the expenses of making a proper representation of the resources of that country at the Chicago Exposition.

The Latin-American Department of the World's Fair has received information that the government of Chili has offered a prize of $500 for the best plan for an exhibit of the resources, industries and products of that country at the exposition to be held in Chicago in 1893.

U. S. Senator Gorman was re-elected by acclamation by the Maryland Democracy on July 30. The mention of his name elicited much enthusiasm, while his services in the Senate as the chosen leader of his party in its protracted and successful struggle against the force bill received flattering recognition.

The Spanish reciprocity treaty, and the diplomatic correspondence in regard to it, were made public on July 31 by proclamation by the President. In consideration of the admission of sugar, molasses, coffee and hides from Cuba and Porto Rico into the United States, the Spanish government will admit a long list of articles free, and will reduce the import duties on many others.

The commanders of the different cruisers in the Behring Sea have divided the sea into four districts which are patrolled and sealing vessels have been warned away. It is believed that once having received the necessary legal warning sealing vessels will leave the sea, but as about one-half of the fleet has avoided being served with notices, it is feared that some reckless captain will raid the seal islands and then clear out.

It is said that a movement of considerable magnitude is now on foot to arrange for the deportation of the negroes of the Southern States to Liberia. Negotiations between the representative of an important line of steamships and the agent of the Liberia Emigration Company have been carried on in Washington (D. C.), and an agreement has been reached whereby a fleet will be at the disposal of the colored people.

The Quintard Iron Works, of New York, have arranged with the Navy Department to set up in their shops the great 9,000-horse-power engines of the armored cruiser Maine. The engines will be run at different rates of speed, thus affording persons interested in naval engineering an opportunity to see in a most advantageous position the whole of the powerful and complicated machinery of a modern man-of-war in full action.

FOREIGN.

The fourth centennial of the discovery of America is to be celebrated at Genoa, the birth-place of Columbus, with many festivities.

The motion in favor of granting the right of suffrage to women in New South Wales has been rejected by a vote of 57 to 34 by the legislative assembly.

Brazilian advices announce the appointment of a commission of eight members to take charge of the Brazilian representation at the Columbian Exposition.

William O'Brien and John Dillon, the two Irish members of Parliament, who had been imprisoned for six months for inciting tenants to resist payment of rents, were released last week. They have both joined the anti-Parnellite forces.

The World's Fair Commissioners now in Europe have met with flattering receptions in the countries visited, and the sympathy shown their mission by ministers and public men in London and Paris has been gratifying. They are in Berlin this week.

A fresh decision of the Russian government concerning its policy towards the Jews debars the children of Hebrews not having the right of sojourning in Russia or the residents of any Russian district without a permit from admission to the middle and higher schools.

The great numbers of Americans who attended the Bayreuth festival have been the subject of much remark on the part of the German Empress. It seems to be generally admitted that the financial success of the undertaking was practically due to the great American patronage.

Emperor William is earnestly interested in suppressing drunkenness. A draft of the proposed bill was sent to him and returned with suggestions concerning the growth of criminal offenses and suicides arising from drink. The government has opened an inquiry in regard thereto and is drawing evidence from her hospital and medical sources concerning the increase of potato spirits and other impure alcohols, and how far the use of these spirits may be regarded as a leading factor in crime.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Graddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Hot Weather is the very best time to try Pyle's Pearline. Then the wash is largest, and a saving of time and toil is best appreciated. Think of doing a large wash with little or no rubbing. Consider how much longer your delicate summer clothing will last if not rubbed to pieces on a washboard. A saving is a gain. You'll be surprised and pleased with the cleanliness, satisfaction and comfort which comes of the use of PEARLINE. Simple—any servant can use it. Perfectly harmless—you can soak your finest linen and laces in Pearline and water for a month, with safety. Delightful in the bath—makes the water soft. Perhaps you have been using some of the imitations and have sore hands and find your clothing going to pieces. Moral—use the original and best.

Sold everywhere. 9t Pearline is manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

NEARER, MY GOD, TO THEE.

Nearer my God, to thee,
Nearer to thee!
E'en though it be a cross
That raiseth me.
Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to thee,
Nearer, my God, to thee,
Nearer to thee!

Nearer, my Lord, to thee,
Nearer to thee,
Who to thy cross didst come,
Dying for me!
Strengthen my willing feet!
Hold me in service sweet,
Nearer, O Christ, to thee,
Nearer to thee.

Nearer, O Comforter,
Nearer to thee,
Who for my absent Lord,
Dwellest with me!
Grant me thy fellowship!
Help me each day to keep
Nearer, my Guide, to thee,
Nearer to thee!

But to be nearer still,
Bring me, O God!
Not by the visioned steeps
Angels have trod.
Here where thy cross I see,
Jesus, I wait for thee,
Thence evermore to be
Nearer to thee!

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON FOR JULY 26—THE EDITOR—DR. WHEDON—DR. ABBEY—INTELLIGITIES—BLUNDERS.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

I.

It is no small matter either to call in question the opinions of men high in ecclesiastical position, or, through fear of a charge of egotism, to refrain from the expression of a profound conviction.

The question forces itself upon us: Shall we interpret the Word of God by the opinions of the befogged writers of the dark ages, or shall we interpret the Word by the Word itself?

I am persuaded that some one will cry out, "Egotist!" "Heretic!" and seek to relieve themselves by other accusatory exclamations—all which neither help nor hinder the cause of truth. We have to do with opinions, and not with men. If the opinion of Wesley or Ralston or Dr. So-and-So be controverted, it must be borne in mind that it is—controverting the opinions of others—has been the field in which great men most delighted to labor—the lever with which they lifted the church out of its well-worn ruts.

If Luther fought the whole church, and turned the tide of popular sentiment against its system of indulgences; if Wesley revised the entire creed of his church, leaving out six articles, and greatly modifying others; if Ralston plants himself on a dogma of Rome, pray, wherein is another's sin should he see fit to controvert these controverters?

These men were not infallible. It is positively certain that some of them held opinions at one time which were modified or altogether abandoned later in life. Had they lived on for a few years more, doubtless, other opinions would have shared a like fate.

It is quite likely that some writers on this question (of the status of infants) have been right in their theories, but by infelicity of expression have given support (apparently) to a doctrine which they did not believe to be true. A case in point is in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, for July 23.

Reviewing a paper on "The Object of Sunday-school Work," Dr. Abbey says: "A child at first is responsible for obedience to his parents, and for this he is answerable; and it is the duty of the parent to hold the child to account for this Bible duty."

Obligation is inseparably connected with duty and responsibility; and if obedience to parents is the "Bible duty" of a child "at first," then it must be responsible for any failure to meet this obligation. On this analysis of the paragraph, especially in view of the writer's plain declaration that "a young child is not a sinner," I take it that the "responsibility" is upon the parent, and the parent "is answerable" for the performance or non-performance of this "Bible duty." At any rate, this is my conception of the doctrine of responsibility as it relates to infants.

By similar processes, much that has been said by other writers can be made to harmonize with the writers themselves and the teaching of the Bible. This, however, is not true of what Dr. Whedon has been made to say in the Sunday-school lesson alluded to in the head-notes of this paper. It does not admit of apology; it is a statement of cold dogma without palliation or modification: "That which is generated of fallen and depraved humanity is fallen and depraved humanity." To this awful statement the Sunday-school editor adds, "Like produces like." There can be no doubt but that the editor intended to confirm the statement contained in the quotation from Dr. Whedon. The "chestnut" does not necessarily corroborate Dr. Whedon; it may contradict him flatly. If "ye are washed, ye are clean;" if you are "renewed in the spirit of your mind," you are not like a "fallen and depraved" human, and, therefore, your children would not be like his. His would be "generated of fallen and depraved humanity," and, consequently, would "be fallen and depraved humanity;" yours would be "generated" by a regenerated, Christianized "humanity," and would be regenerated, Christianized humanity—i. e., if "like produces like." But to continue this would be hypercriticism, since the editor's intention seems clearly to be the endorsement of Dr. Whedon. The statements contained in this quotation require a division in order fully to appreciate the force of the sentence. There are two facts stated dogmatically, viz.: 1. All infants are fallen. 2. All infants are depraved. If the doctrine of redemption were obliterated, this would be true; but with that doctrine standing out as the central thought in our religion, it can not be true. If infants are "fallen," they are "fallen" from favor with God; if they are depraved, it is in their moral natures. Certainly that was the effect of the fall on Adam. If "like produces like," this must be the condition intended to be expressed. If this be so, then the sufferings and death of the Son of God was of no avail to the millions of his creatures who die in infancy. They must be lost, for they were "fallen," and have not been raised up; they were depraved, and have not been restored. Now, since a thing "depraved" is vitiated, corrupted, contaminated, or polluted, and nothing of the kind can "inherit the kingdom of God," it is clear that children can not inherit that kingdom! That these writers intended to express any such opinion would be hard to believe; and, were it not for the fact that, at least, one writer, for whom some claim the authority of a standard, has coolly and logically stated just this view of the subject, I, too, would shrink from such a conclusion. Watson (comment on Matt. xix, 14) says, "Infants are fallen and corrupt in nature." Ralston (Omnum Gatherum, page 20), speaking of infants as well as adults, says: "Yet they all possess a depraved, unholy nature, for that is all they could derive from Adam, as it was all he possessed by nature after the fall, or could transmit to his descendants."

These quotations show that I have not "jumped at a conclusion." But these writers meet us by telling us that infants will not be lost; they are saved through Christ; taken up to heaven, although they are "fallen and depraved." If we ask, "How can these things be?" we are informed that it is none of our business. I believe an intelligent how can be given, and will attempt, in the following propositions, to do so.

Why, How, and When.

The undersigned is not a hobby-rider, and has never failed to advocate the cause of foreign missions as the chief concern of all Christians, including Methodists, and, therefore, in this brief article may consistently ask for a patient hearing for an interest, that he does not love less, if only less, than that which involves his loyalty to the world's Savior. The cause of church extension in the bounds of the Conference of which he is a member is one which is most eloquent in facts, if not in statistics. Louisiana is a great State; but her Methodism is comparatively weak, and in nothing is that weakness so demonstrably revealed as in the poverty of her resources in church-building. As surprising as that statement may occur to the average reader of the ADVOCATE, there are whole parishes, or counties, in the richest portion of the State where Methodism has no "shelter from the stormy blast."

During the present week the writer conversed with a preacher of more than ordinary capacity, who serves a work of six appointments, grown up along the shores of an inland river, where there is not so much as a bush arbor to proclaim the enterprise of the descendants of Wesley. Another circuit in, perhaps, the most fertile portion of the State, composed of several neighborhoods of rich planters, pays its pastor a salary of one thousand dollars, and does not own so many dollars' worth of church property, unless it has acquired it during the present year. In Southern Louisiana, where the opposition is of a less unmixed type, and much must be forgiven to the character of the population, there are three cities located in prosperous communities, and having, at least, two thousand inhabitants each, where there is no church do micile for "the leading movement of modern times," and, consequently, of course, nothing to domicile. Likewise from New Orleans to the Gulf, in a fertile stretch of country bordering on the great river, and more or less thickly grown up with towns and villages, there is not a stick of Methodist timber, or, indeed, any other kind of ecclesiastical mooring; but from east to west, as well as from north to south, a howling wilderness of "God's first temples." Through the labors of the present missionary there are the nuclei of Sunday-schools in some portions of that needy country; but, without pine-board reinforcement, they are likely to remain nuclei for all time, or until the same fate overtakes them as two years ago robbed the Felicity charge, in this city, of its twenty-year-old infant which it had neglected to house, and which imminently threatens Carondelet's aged protege on Claiborne avenue. But to bring the subject yet nearer home, if not to shift the discussion to a more popular plane, a few years ago, after mature counsel, shared in, we believe, by both clergy and laity, a missionary was employed in the city of New Orleans at a cost of twelve hundred dollars for salary, and of several hundred dollars supplementary expense account; and while we have no wish to decry missionary effort of any kind and of all kinds—certainly not that heroic type which assays to go after the reluctant masses in their rendezvous of both by way and highway—we may yet, with some disposition to criticise faulty methods, inquire what has been the net gain to New Orleans Methodism of this outlay of money and toil. Let us write it down in figures. One Sunday-school discontinued, and one inaugurated; or as, perhaps, it might be more intelligibly expressed, the Felicity hantling aforesaid transferred from an eligible point in an unevangelized quarter to a spot dangerously near one of our weak churches, and under the shadow of the leading Presbyterian Sunday-school mission of the city. Who, with a reasonable knowledge of the situation, can doubt that the same amount of money expended in a neat church at some salient point of our weak line would have produced a result, at least, tenfold greater? That the brethren who labored in that work, including the present pastor of Felicity Church, did all that might be expected, of combined skill and gallantry, is a fact well known, at least, to all who will read this article with the interest of deep concern; but, having reached the top of the mountain, what could they do but descend? Why gather liquid treasure in a sieve, or muster soldiers for a holiday campaign? To illustrate the weakness of such movements by contrasting them with, at least, one instance of the successful employment of the opposite policy: Rayne Memorial Church gave generous domicile to her two children, Carrollton and Parker's Chapel, the latter of which is one of our first-class, second-rate stations, and the former a growing charge, with one of the largest Sunday-schools in the city; and, contemplating their daily advance upon the same lines of material progress which she has marked out for herself, she is as justly proud of these, her brilliant offspring, as the much-quoted Roman matron of her jewels, or Jupiter of his moons. But lest we should grow factious, we hasten to remark that, in spite of what has been said in the introduction to these statements, the era of church-building has already been fairly inaugurated in Louisiana, and it is demonstrable that while the Louisiana Conference has almost doubled her membership in the last fifteen years, she has, during that period of time, quite doubled her church sittings. This is proof positive, and should silence intelligent opposition, while it need not interfere with the clamors of those zealous Boanerges who prefer a skirmish line for advance, and snuff the battle across populous wastes that are quite as advantageous for retreat! By all means, let us profit by the barren past, its mistakes and its poverty, while we improve the golden present to do what we can in the use of providential means for the redemption of our cause in this great State. A thousand churches erected along her magnificent waterways, and in her growing interior towns, would mean an hundred thousand additions to her membership, or a quintupled advance on present statistics; and to say that we can not secure them in the next ten years, is to declare that each member of her clerical force, serving a self-denying constituency of hundreds gathered from the leading proprietorship of her soil and commerce, is not equal to the erection of one church or chapel annually. If there ever was a time when this was not true, it surely is not the present, when the Conference Extension Board is offering a premium of hundreds of dollars on every plant of this kind which can furnish reasonable evidence of need, and when the Connectional Board is investing thousands annually on our church-building enterprises! And yet there are preachers in the Louisiana Conference, well-meaning and competent, too—and a nobler band of soldiers we verily believe never stormed at Crimean redoubts or swept with irresistible arms a Danubian frontier—who either will not take a collection to aid this sacred building fund, or do it in a tone of apology so weak as to excite distrust, if not rebellion. Why is it? and what can we do or say to stimulate their sleeping ardors? Surely we must enter this open door, in which there are no adversaries but the shadows cast by our persistent doubting.

J. M. B.

"The Kingdom and Comings of Christ."

Rev. J. C. Simmons, D. D., of the Pacific Conference, sent me his new book, "The Kingdom and Comings of Christ," printed for the author by our Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn. I was glad to get this book. It is the outcome of forty years' hard study of the questions involved. It is mature, if not true. Some years before, and for some years after, I entered the ministry I read every book I could get hold of along this line. Whether I was any the wiser thereby, or not, I need not now say. At that time there were two kinds of preachers that were immensely popular and in constant demand in some sections of the country where I grew up. One was the preacher with a big funeral sermon, alike suitable for saints and sinners, in which all were carried to heaven, and robed, palmed and crowned victors in the city of our God. The other was the preacher with a millennium sermon, in which the seven trumpets were sounded, the seven seals opened, and the seven vials of wrath poured out. The interest in these sermons was increased just in proportion as the time of the end was calculated to be far or near—the nearer the better, for immediate and popular effect. I used to sit, and listen, and gape, and shiver, and wonder, while the cold chills played hide and seek up and down my spine, as the calculations were made, the battle of Armageddon brought on, and the great white throne set for judgment. I soon passed so many set times for the world to come to an end that I lost all my boyish interest in the thing, and so I lost interest in books along that line, and I am sorry to say that, to some extent, I lost interest in the prophetical portions of God's Holy Word. I am over that now. I have come to know that prophecy is one thing and the exposition of prophecy quite another thing. If "The Kingdom and Comings of Christ" serves no other purpose, it is a good antidote to the poison of millennium doctrines.

The Second Adventists are said to be quite numerous and very industrious in California, and in the West and Northwest generally. They have a large publishing house in Oakland, Cal., and they pour their money into it, and send out annually hundreds of thousands of pages filled with their peculiar views. A failure of their calculations as to the end of the world does not discourage them; rather, it tends to quicken their zeal. They publish and sell through agents subscription books of a taking character, and inlaid along with their doctrines, That publishing house, or some friend or enemy, is constantly sending me their publications, which I threw into the fire unread, often unopened. They send out from the same place a holiness paper, marked copies of which are frequently sent to me, to be followed by anonymous letters, full of bitterness and curses, because I neither approve nor controvert the positions taken—as if my approval would help, or disapproval hurt, any thing. Some of these letters, purporting to be written by women, would be a disgrace to a bar-room bully. I call attention to this house and to their publications in order to put our people on their guard against them. I long ago learned not to furnish lists of names and post-office addresses, not for any price. Ninety times out of a hundred such lists will open the way for reading people should not have.

Dr. Simmons' book is not at all sensational. It is earnest, reverent and devout from beginning to end. One good thing can be said for it: it has more Holy Scripture in it than any book of like size on this subject I ever saw. He makes a strong showing in favor of his interpretations of the visions of Daniel, the predictions of Christ, and the revelations made to St. John. There is more simple, unadorned, plain common sense in this book than in any other I have read on this subject. Dr. Simmons thinks, and with good show of reason for it, that the visions given to Daniel, the predictions uttered by Christ, and the trumpets, seals and vials of wrath of St. John, were all fulfilled on Jerusalem and on imperial Rome within a few hundred years, at most, after the death of Christ. He does not find Papal Rome, nor a restored city of Jerusalem, in any of these wonderful passages of God's Word. This book, I should think, would have a quieting effect on the nervous systems of those who have been disturbed about the near approach of the end of the world. For my own part, I have been so busy, for many years past, getting ready for the coming of my Lord, that I have not had time to bother with long, intricate, complicated and doubtful calculations about the time of his coming. In fact, he may send for me to come to him long before the time for him to come to our world again—if he comes at all before he comes to sit in judgment on men. It is more needful for me to be ready at any time than for me to know the day and the hour of his coming. If my lamp is trimmed and burning, and my vessel filled with oil, I will be ready to go out and meet him as soon as I hear the cry: "Behold, the bridegroom cometh! Go ye out to meet him." The oil is so plentiful, and to be had without money and without price, that I need not waste my time in calculating to a decimal fraction how little it will take to do me till the bridegroom gets here. I should have my vessel full of oil, be the time long or short.

If Dr. Simmons wrote his book to make a stir, or to make money out of it, he has made a great mistake. More prognostications by Dr. Simmons about great things to be in the near future would have sold better and created far more talk than the already fulfilled predictions of Daniel, Christ and St. John. The people are infinitely more anxious to know what is to be than to read about what has been. Prophecy, provided it is highly sensational, is more interesting than history. The man who proposes to lift the curtain of the future has the eyes of the multitude upon him. Indeed, the vast herd of our humanity do not want religion till they get where they can not enjoy the world any longer. They had rather have religion than to fall into hell. Of the two evils, they choose that which they deem to be the least. Well, whatever may, or may not, be the truth as to judgments yet to come, one thing is absolutely certain: "The judgment," when both small and great shall stand before God to give an account for the deeds done in the body, is yet ahead of us, and it may not be far off. We ought to be ready for it.

Millsaps College Notes.

A. F. WATKINS, AGENT.

At Bay St. Louis, last week, the agent received from Master Holland O. White the sum of $1 for the endowment fund of Millsaps College. The money had been raised by the little man by the sale of scuppernongs, and was sent with the assurance that this year he was going to sell some more for the same cause.

I believe that an epoch in the life of a child is marked when his thought is led out of and beyond the consideration of selfish enjoyment, and when, by act of self-denial or labor, a contribution is made to a noble cause. Many children reach manhood without having learned to give. Is it any wonder that some men never learn that it is more blessed to give than to receive?

Bishop Galloway visited Oak Ridge on the second Sunday in July, and reports a pleasant trip, and a collection for the endowment fund amounting to $112.50. Bro. J. W. Brown, the pastor, speaks of the Bishop's visit as "opportune and happy."

On Sunday, July 26, historic old Cane Ridge added to the contributions that had been already made by its members a collection amounting to one hundred dollars, a part of which was for the "Clara Chrisman scholarship."

An unsolicited subscription of $200 was given the agent recently toward the endowment of a scholarship to be called the "W. H. Watkins scholarship." This, with the amount already subscribed, makes $325 subscribed for that object.

Millsaps College ought to be endeared to the thousands of Methodists in our State by the endowment of a score or more of scholarships, fellowships and professorships bearing the names of the loved and venerated dead. The living are able, the dead are worthy, and the cause is a noble and inspiring one.

The resolutions passed by the District Conferences in the State, congratulating the church upon the progress made in the establishment of the college, and pledging heartiest co-operation and support, are significant of the general interest felt in the college, and prophetic of the loyal patronage and support which it will receive at the hands of our people. Unless all the signs fail, the Methodist people of this State are losing sight of matters of minor importance, upon which they may differ, and are working for the establishment of a great enterprise for the common good.

Meridian District.

To Preachers and Church Conference Secretaries:

The neglect so far on this third round of Quarterly Conferences to present the church registers and records of Church Conferences has been lamentable and inexcusable. Only two charges have complied with the Discipline by presenting these books for examination. Let us keep the rules, brethren, and not mend or break them.

T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

Notice.

To the Preachers of the Jackson District:

It is important that the assessment to defray the expenses of the Ecumenical Conference be collected at once. Please attend to the matter promptly, as it is urgent. The money may be sent to me or to Barbee & Smith, at Nashville. Each charge is assessed two dollars.

BETTER THAN GOLD.

BY MORTIMER C. BROWN.

Better than gold are the drops that, descending,
Kiss the dry earth and awaken to life
Plant germs that long on their moisture depending.
Peacefully slept through the early March strife:
Better than gold—and the farmer well-knowing,
Gratefully watched the gentle May shower:
Beauty and wealth in the grain and the flower.

Better than gold are the sunbeams that brightly
Smile on sod when the storm-cloud is riven,
Better than gold the cool dew that falls nightly,
Heaven's soft blessing so silently given.
Treasures far richer than mines ever yielded
Generous nature flings wide o'er the land:
By her maternal hand nurtured and shielded,
Earth pours her fullness on every hand.

Better than gold is a heart where contentment
Scatters its sunshine to lighten and bless,
Treading its path with no thought of resentment,
E'en though than others its share may be less.
He who, with blessings kind fate hath provided,
Doeth his best and is happy, doth hold
Safe in his heart, though by many derided,
Life's truest riches—far better than gold.

Woodville Methodism.

BY REV. H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

It is presumable that either in 1799 or 1800 Rev. Tobias Gibson, the heroic apostle of Mississippi Methodism, preached and organized "societies" in the vicinities of Fort Adams, Pinckneyville and Centreville. Wilkinson county, and that he continued his ministrations until October, 1802, when Rev. Moses Floyd was sent to assist him. In the Spring of 1803, Rev. Lorenzo Dow, that wonderful man of God whom no Conference boundaries could circumscribe, led by some mysterious, but, doubtless, providential impulse, came into this "Natchez circuit," and labored with the preachers in charge until the last of June. The earliest positive record of preaching in this (Wilkinson) county was by Lorenzo Dow on this visit, and at "Loftus Heights, now Fort Adams, at Pinckneyville," and somewhere near what is now Laurel Hill, La., possibly within this county. There is still extant a tradition of an old "Spanish Fandango House" at or near this last-named point, which was used in these early years as a preaching-place by these early circuit riders, and, doubtless, by this pioneer evangelist. In October, 1803, Revs. Hezekiah Harriman and Abraham Amos were sent from Kentucky to re-enforce this little band. Just how these four divided the work among them, I can not learn. On April 5, 1804, Gibson died, and in October, Moses Floyd, having married, was located. At this session of the Western Conference, which met Oct. 2, at Mt. Gerizim, Ky., Amos was removed from this field, and Revs. Learner Blackman and Nathan Barnes were sent here, the former as "presiding elder of the Mississippi district," while Harriman and Barnes were preachers on the "Natchez circuit." The inimitable Dow accompanied these recruits to their new field, labored with them several weeks, got up a camp meeting near Washington—the first ever held in Mississippi—and, crossing the Mississippi river, preached in Louisiana as far down as the "Attakapas country." At the next session of the Western Conference, held Oct. 2, 1805, there was formed a "Wilkinson circuit," with Rev. Caleb W. Cloud as preacher in charge.

While the town of Woodville was not then in existence, the territory which the Woodville station now includes was embraced in these earlier pastoral charges, bearing different names at different stages of the church's development. At first it was in the "Natchez mission," whose area far exceeded that of the present State of Mississippi; afterward it was in the "Wilkinson circuit," whose territory stretched from Adams county to the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Mississippi to the Bogue Chitto rivers.

The following are the names of all the presiding elders and pastors, and the periods of their labors, who were appointed to serve this territory prior to the forming of the Woodville station in the Winter of 1835:

In 1824 Edward McGehee, John S. Lewis and others built a church in Woodville on a lot given by John S. Lewis. That church, somewhat enlarged by the addition of a Sunday-school room in the rear, and improved by sundry changes made at various times, still stands, sacred with beautiful memories and hallowed by heroic events, the worshipping place of Woodville Methodists. This writer stands, Sunday after Sunday, on the spot where has stood those "sons of thunder," Bishops Soule, Capers and Marvin; Drs. Drake, Winans and Marshall; where, for two years, preached the "seraphic Steele." The building is a neat wooden structure, with tall windows, a large gallery over the front door, a small vestibule, a modest tower, and perfect acoustic arrangements. It stands on a pretty lot on the western edge of the town. In the rear of the church, in a small enclosure under some cedars, are the graves of John S. Lewis and some members of his family. The State of Mississippi contains no spot more sacred than this church lot. Woodville Church remained for four years a part of

In December, 1835, the Mississippi Conference met in Woodville. Bishop Soule presided, Elijah Steele was admitted on trial, and Woodville station was formed, with Wm. Winans as P. C., and placed in the Natchez district, with B. M. Drake as P. E. For nearly seventy years Woodville has been a station, and for much of that time it was the banner station of the Mississippi Conference, and has been in charge of some of the most illustrious preachers of Southern Methodism. The following, its list of pastors, will awaken many beautiful memories wherever the ADVOCATE is read:

Dr. Marvin, afterwards Bishop, having left St. Louis as a delegate to the General Conference appointed for 1862 in New Orleans, but not held, and having gotten through the Federal lines, which he could not safely re-enter, and travelling Southward, found himself at length in Woodville, the pastorate of which had lately become vacant by the enlisting into the military service of Rev. W. G. Millsaps. Here he remained for most of this year, filling the vacant pulpit to the delight of all who heard him.

Only two preachers were ever pastors here for four consecutive years, viz.: Revs. T. S. West and P. Lane. However, Dr. Watkins was pastor for five years, but they constituted two distinct periods.

Judge and Hon. Edward McGehee—whose princely beneficence is evidenced by Centenary and Edward McGehee Colleges; Carondelet Street, New Orleans; Woodville, Bethel, and numerous other churches; whose children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren honor, by their devotion to Christ and Methodism, the name of a remarkably judicious ancestor, who became the most illustrious layman of Southern Methodism—came to this county in 1808. For some years he attended church at Old Midway, near the present town of Centreville, going thither on horseback, with his wife behind him and his baby in front. In 1815 he built a log church at Bethel, a place which afterwards became famous as a camp ground; about 1825 he replaced the old log-house with a neat frame structure, and in 1855 he tore away the frame house, building in its stead the present elegant brick church.

Mrs. E. W. Lewis, widow of John S. Lewis, still lives, "a mother in Israel," honored and beloved by us all. She is always at Sunday-school, where she has taught the infant class for more than fifty consecutive years. Her place at preaching and prayer meeting is rarely vacant, and her earnest prayers and wise counsels still gladden us in the prayer meeting and the Woman's Missionary Society; and she is young enough yet to take a lively interest in our latest innovation, the Epworth League.

The widows, children and grandchildren of Judge Walker and Maj. Barbee, and the children and grandchildren of E. H. Wailes and Daniel Howard, are here. The beautiful home, with library intact, of John W. Burruss, the devoted and gifted leader of the Sunday-school and of song, still stands, a monument to the culture and a reminder of the greatness and goodness of that worthy son of an honored father.

"Time would fail me" to speak of Henry Stockett and Dr. Henderson, of Bass and Keller and others who have left beautiful memories behind them.

Two sons and three grandsons of Edward McGehee, and one son of John S. Lewis, are members of our Quarterly Conference; a granddaughter of John S. Lewis is our organist, and two of them are teachers in our Sunday-school, where, too, are working three grandsons and a son of Judge McGehee. The spirit of the fathers rests upon the children.

Three times prior to the war did the Mississippi Conference meet at Woodville, and the memories of those gatherings still lingers. Two revivals are still spoken of. One by John Newland Maffit, away back in the "forties," and the other by J. J. Wheat, J. A. B. Jones and T. W. Brown, two decades later. The proximity of Bethel, with its annual camp meetings, to which all Woodville went, rendered the occurrence of revivals in Woodville infrequent. Maffit so stirred the people that the "sons of Belial" determined to break up his meeting, and threatened that if he preached again they would pelt him with rotten eggs. He preached—one egg was thrown, and the man who threw it was at the altar the next day pleading for mercy.

As early as 1841 the Woodville Academy, under the management of a Mr. Halsey and wife, was flourishing. Here Philip Werlein, Sr., taught music. Here also Misses Hand and Chapman, and Messrs. Ulysses Chapman and Franklin Soul, were teachers. This institution, after having trained many noble women for our Southwestern Methodism, passed finally away; and "Woodville Female Seminary" was founded by the Hon. Edward McGehee, and donated to the Mississippi Conference, its charter bearing date, May 2, 1861. Here Sullivan and Wright and Brown have presided, and Misses Wailes and Henry and Brown and others have taught. On May 5, 1890, by act of the Board of Trustees, its name was changed in honor of its noble founder to Edward McGehee College.

Woodville, beautifully situated in the centre of a large agricultural section richly endowed by nature, has, through all these years, been noted for its culture and refinement, and its old-time Southern hospitality and elegance, and through all these years the Methodist Church has flourished, being to-day larger and more prosperous by far than any other. Thus dowered with a glorious past and surrounded by monuments of old-time heroism, in an atmosphere redolent with such beautiful memories, Woodville Methodism ought to face the future with the strongest faith, the noblest aspirations and the sublimest possibilities.

"The First Sunday-School in Mississippi."

Let us have the record as nearly correct as may be. The history is sufficiently important.

Bro. John G. Guice, in this ADVOCATE, of July 30, says: "At our District Conference it was said that the first Sunday-school in Mississippi was organized in Natchez sixty-one years ago; but in 1822 I attended Sunday-school fifteen miles east of Natchez," etc.

That statement about the first Sunday-school was made by myself in a paper I was requested to prepare and read on that subject. I think Bro. Guice is a little mistaken as to the date. I think I dated the first Sunday-school in 1826, which would place it about sixty-five years ago. There is no discrepancy between Bro. Guice's statement and mine.

When a child, seven years old, he saw some man, at his own house in the country, teaching some children something on Sunday. No doubt thousands of such incidental events have occurred everywhere occasionally, back indefinitely into Old Testament times. But what is now known as Sunday-school is an organ—i. e., an historic system of public ecclesiastic teaching forming a part of pastoral theology. The Sunday-school forms a regular part of church history. Look into a dictionary and you will see a definition of Sunday-school, and any modern cyclopedia will give you a history of its introduction. Sunday teaching, to be counted a Sunday-school, must have organic connection. Bro. Guice's school, if it could be called a school, began and ended "fifteen miles east of Natchez." The institution at Natchez is there now.

It has been said that the Wesley family had some sort of Sunday teaching, which would antedate our historic Sunday-school. This is a little too far-fetched. Whatever this teaching may have been, it had no historic succession. It was inorganic and incidental.

So it is said of Dr. Rush, that he had a temperance society fifty years before the first Andover society began operation. No; Dr. Rush prescribed and advocated abstinence from intoxicating drink; but his advice, good as it undoubtedly was, had no historic connection with the institution organized in later years under the name of temperance. The Reshabites practiced abstinence long before that. The first Sunday-school this side of Philadelphia was in Natchez.

Facts, Figures.

Banking institutions find a trial balance-sheet necessary every twenty-four hours. In the commercial world an inventory in every department is carefully taken, at least, once in every twelve months.

The debits and credits are thus brought in contrast, not to depreciate, but to indicate facts; the true status of the business is derived. The most successful of "the children of the world" have been the men quickest to see the weak points, and the readiest to remedy and strengthen them.

May we not, as "children of light," regardless of pulpit or pew relationship, find incentive for prayerfully renewed and better work from the following inventory of one of the largest and, by careful comparison, most prosperous districts within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference?

The figures are approximate, but, in the main, accurate, embracing one year from July —, 1890, to July —, 1891: Pastoral charges, 19; preaching-places, 70; paid preachers in charge, $10,100; paid Conference collections, $3,503; paid church buildings, $4,950; number of Sunday-schools, 56; number of Sunday-school libraries, 23; number of Sunday-schools supplied with Bibles, 2; number of weekly teachers' meetings for Bible study, 5; church membership in excess of Sunday-school membership, 37½; church papers taken, 341; weekly class meetings, 5; family altars, 260; total accessions on profession of faith, 344. Young men in Methodist colleges, as follows: Vanderbilt, 1; Centenary, 4; Southern University, 4. Total, 9. Total church membership in district, 5,100. The combined labor of nineteen preachers and, at least, four noted evangelists have given total accessions upon profession of faith, only 344. Upon one occasion 8,000 persons were converted under the preaching of but two sermons, and those upon the same day.

About eighty per cent. of all accessions came through the Sabbath-school, and yet there are but 56 schools out of 70 preaching-places, and only 21 libraries, and 17 of that small number are found to have been procured this year; 5 weekly meetings for Bible study, and but two schools fully supplied with Bibles; 341 church papers taken, and 260 family altars in a church membership of upwards of 5,000.

Methinks some one is ready to say: "Well, I am not in that district; we do better work than that;" yet there is not a more wide-awake, aggressive (living away from wife and children) presiding elder in either Mississippi Conference than the one who runs this district.

The preachers are frugal at home, and for piety and earnest preaching will compare favorably with any. Upon the whole, the Discipline of the church is, doubtless, more rigidly adhered to than upon any other district.

In fact, by a careful impartial, summing up it might possibly rank second; but I rather believe will, by Minutes of coming Annual Conference, come first. The natural query arises, Why is this? Does the pulpit lack power because, as God-called men, they will not pay the price? Does the pew lack consecration? Is it because, as Methodists, we have neglected the class meetings? Has the Spirit withdrawn from us because we have not builded the family altar? Can it be the dearth of religious literature in our homes? Are we withholding the tithes from God's storehouse?

Is the accumulated desecration of the Sabbath charged to us? Upon these facts and figures let individual introspection characterize us all; then, as with one accord, it will be: "Come, and let us return unto the Lord: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth."

MR. EDITOR: In the Arkansas Methodist I find an article taken from your columns entitled, "Can't It Be Cured?" The situation is certainly deplorable, and to such a state has it grown in our church here (M. E. Church, South; R. S. Deener, pastor), that the superintendent places the Sunday-school in advance of the church, and says should we be deprived of either, he would retain Sunday-school service instead of church. I have studied the Sunday-school problem a great deal, and as you ask, "Who will answer?" I will give you my views thereon.

It is said a "Yankee" answers one question by asking another; so I will be a "Yankee" in this matter. How can we get parents to attend Sunday-school? If we could get the parents to attend Sunday-school, I am satisfied ninety per cent. of them would attend church service, and the children attend with them. When the parents remain at home, the children either return home or loiter in the streets and alleys. Get the parents to attend Sunday-school, and the children will, no doubt, attend morning service.

Another Answer.

The question, "Can't It Be Cured?" is certainly a very grave one; one that requires serious thought and earnest prayers. Let me offer a few suggestions easier made than followed. First, keep the subject of Sabbath-breaking before the church constantly. Make the parents see the gravity of the question. Many mothers think from nine A. M. until twelve M. too long for a child to remain in church, and, perhaps, one or both parents go home with the children to have a nice, quiet time, and read something before "going out this afternoon, you know." Let the church see to it that none but consecrated Christians teach in the Sabbath-school, for we want our children taught that the Bible is much more than a wonderful history. Let only those teach who can and will teach the children to keep the Sabbath holy. Make this the subject of one special prayer at every Wednesday night service. Pray that the parents and teachers may use all the loving influence they have to learn the children to love the house of God. Make the teachers feel their individual responsibility for the presence of their class they teach at the service. They should feel a loving pride in seeing them all at church, if they slight themselves. Has the reader noticed how many teachers attend Sabbath-school only? Children are quick to learn, and some have been known to follow a bad example. Where do the children go after leaving the church? Are they learning to keep the Sabbath as God-loving and law-abiding American citizens must keep it? Here is more work for the Epworth League. The fields are widening; are the laborers increasing?

BOOKS.

CHURCH AND CREED. By Rev. R. Heber Newton. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, 130 Canal St., N. O. Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

We have here three sermons on this now widely known Episcopal rector of All Souls Church, New York. These sermons were delivered because of a remonstrance against what is called his "uncanonical practices" was presented to Bishop Potter. One of these "practices" was inviting occasionally ordained ministers to speak at special services in his church. Under the three topics, Fold or Flock, The Nicene Creed, and How to Read a Creed, Dr. Newton gives his views of the various questions raised in regard to himself. It is interesting to read the opinions of a man in regard to those matters in which a large part of his own church judge him to be in error. We can be interested in such matters without passing an opinion. We leave the difference to be adjusted by those authorized to do so.

THE STORY OF PORTUGAL. By Morse Stephens. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, 130 Canal St., N. O. Price, $1.50.

This is the thirty-second volume of the Story of the Nations, published by the Putnams, and Mr. Stephens has already won the ear of the reading public by his "History of the French Revolution." We have in this Story of Portugal a chronological, rather than a philosophical or episodic history, in which is presented clearly to the reader, not only the doings of the rulers, but the real life of the people; how they lived and labored and studied and wrote and amused themselves. As this little kingdom, lying alongside of Spain, was early noted for its maritime exploits, and for its possessions and settlements on the American continent, and has long influenced much of the life of that continent, we apprehend that this story will be particularly interesting to very many American readers.

MASTER WILLIAM WITTEN. By B. Longstreet, D. D., LL.D. J. W. Burke Co., Macon, Ga.

Bro. George G. Smith handed us this book at the Seashore Camp Meeting, and we have read it with avidity. The author of "Georgia Scenes" has shown his power in this sketch of a youth of brilliant talents, who was ruined by bad luck." It is one of the best delineations of character we have seen in a long time. Every character in it stands out boldly under the strokes of Judge Longstreet's pen. Every mother who has a boy to educate, and every boy at school, should read it. We guarantee that both classes will be interested, and if they have any judgment, will be profited by it.

LITTLE THINGS IN EVERYDAY LIFE. Bound in white leatherette, with gilt title. Price, 25 cents. Thomas Whittaker, Publisher, 2 and 3 Bible House, New York.

Here is a readable little book on little things, which is good. The little things are duties, kindnesses, efforts, cares, pleasures and sins. They are little, but weighty sermons, and will do good wherever read.

VACATION TIME, WITH HINTS ON SUMMER LIVING. By H. S. Drayton, M. D. Fowler and Wells, New York. Price, 25 cents.

There is a good deal of information in this little pamphlet, but we hardly think people taking their vacation will be inclined to follow its teachings very closely.

PERIODICALS.

—BOOK NEWS, for August, has a good table of contents besides notices and reviews of new books. It is a valuable periodical. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1.

—VICK'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY will delight gardeners and lovers of flowers. All such will find this monthly a good accession to their reading matter. James Vick, Rochester, New York. Price, $1.

—The REVIEW OF REVIEWS, for August, is an exceptional number. The Prince of Wales adorns the magazine in a magnificent frontispiece, and W. T. Stead discusses him in connection with the baccarat scandal in a lengthy article. Cromwell and the Independents is a fine historical sketch. The leading articles in the principal Reviews are given, and an appreciative review of the principal periodicals is not the least interesting department of this monthly. We know of no magazine in which you get so much valuable matter for so little money. Published at 13 Astor Place, New York. Price, $2 a year, or seven months for one dollar.

Sunday-School Lesson—Aug. 16.

THE FIVE THOUSAND FED.

John vi, 1-14.

This miracle is the only one which is recorded by all the evangelists. The teacher should study the four records, and note how they supplement each other. It is used by St. John as an introduction to the discourse concerning the Bread of Life. He evidently has a vivid remembrance of the scene, and has kept the picture in his mind as a living memory. He notes with precision all the details of the miracle and the effect it had upon the people. The miracle took place in Galilee, on the shore of the sea of Tiberias, just before the festival of the Passover. Several points claim our attention.

I. The compassionate pity of Jesus. He possessed in their fullness the highest graces of human nature; and the sight of a weary, hungry crowd was enough to excite his pity, and prompt him to kind and benevolent action. Though he would not satisfy his own hunger by turning stones into bread, he will prepare a table in the wilderness to feed the needy crowd.

II. The testing of Philip. Jesus asked this question, not because he was embarrassed and wished for advice, but in order to convey instruction to his disciples. He wished to awaken their faith and to develop confidence in himself. Philip seems to have been a "practical common-sense man;" one who needed many lessons and much proving before he could fairly put his faith in "things unseen to mortal eye." He had yet to learn that emergencies are God-given opportunities; and that where there is no help in the ordinary course of things, Jesus can and will step in with his all-powerful aid.

Philip's answer shows his inability to grasp the situation. Instead of saying, "Thou canst supply: we need but buy," he tries to calculate the cost of feeding such a multitude. Andrew has a little more faith, but he can not see how five loaves and two fishes can meet the need.

"When they laughed at Saint Theresa when she wanted to build a great orphanage, and had but three shillings to begin with, she answered, "With three shillings Theresa can do nothing; but with God and her three shillings there is nothing which Theresa can not do."—Farrar.

III. The way in which the miracle was brought. Jesus "knew what he would do," and when the disciples had shown their faithlessness, he set them to work. There was orderly preparation—the great crowd was arranged in ranks, fifty in a company (Luke ix, 14). There was the quiet putting forth of power. The little had to be brought to Christ; thanks rendered to God for the gift of food; then quietly, unostentatiously the food was divided, and miraculously grew till all were satisfied. There was abundant supply, but no waste, and the remaining fragments were carefully collected.

IV. The effect on the people. They acknowledged Jesus as a prophet, and wanted to force him to be their king. But he escaped from them—the kingship he sought was not earthly and political, but a kingdom founded on love and righteousness. The temptation to become an earthly monarch had been met and conquered in the wilderness; now it has lost all its power.—Preacher's Magazine.

Louisiana Notes.

Thirty Chinamen passed through this city last week from San Francisco to Cuba, where they go as laborers.

It is said that in forty-five days trains will be running through from Alexandria to Monroe, on the H. C. A. and N. Railroad.

Major J. H. Stephens, of Provencal, had his residence and nearly all his furniture burned recently. There was no insurance.

The People's State Bank, of Lafayette, has been organized at Lafayette, with a capital stock of $25,000. All but five shares have been taken.

The building boom in Monroe continues, and other improvements, among which are a complete waterworks and electric light system, are contemplated.

The Planters' Oil Mill, of Monroe, is having various improvements and additions made to its buildings, anticipating a large business the coming season.

In the past eleven months the Mississippi Valley railroad has brought into this city 466,293 bales of cotton, being 27,698 bales over the same period last year.

The Town Talk says that the H. C. and N. R. R. Co. must have their road completed and be running through trains to Alexandria by October, 1891, in order to earn the five mills tax for 20 years voted by the citizens of Alexandria.

The buildings for the shingle factory at St. Martinsville have been completed, and the machinery is being put in position. The owners propose having everything in readiness to commence operation by October 1, next.

Crops throughout the parish are in a flourishing condition, and will surpass last year's yield.

The New Orleans and Gulf railroad has been sold to the New Orleans Southern Railroad Company. The price of the entire property, which includes the road from the city to Pointe-a-la-Hache, the Poydras plantation tap extending to Shell Beach, and three steamboats, Neptune, Alvin and Grace Webb, was $1,200,000. One million dollars represents the first bond cost of the road, and $200,000 is to be the future operating capital.

The new foundry of the Lake Machine and Foundry Company is nearly ready for business. They expect to be prepared to make all kinds of castings needed in sawmills, steamboats, etc.

Col. J. W. Nicholson, president of the State University, has received notice from the War Department that Second Lieutenant George W. Gatchell, Fourth Artillery, has been detailed as professor of military science and tactics at the University, to take effect on August 1.

During the eleven months from Aug. 1, 1890, to June 30, 1891, there have been constructed in this city 539 dwellings, 5 stores, 14 kitchens, stables and barns, 9 churches and 2 manufactories. This is 15 per cent. less than was built during the same period last year, though the cost is a half million dollars more.

During the month of July seventy-three steamships and fourteen sailing vessels from foreign and coastwise ports were entered at the customhouse here, and seventy-six steamships and eleven sailing vessels were cleared, making a total of entrances and clearances for the month of 149 steamers and twenty-five sailing vessels.

The Illinois Central intends proceeding with the building of their passenger depot on Delord street, between Rampart and Liberty, as soon as the ordinance before the city council passes its third reading and the permission to build is granted. It is intended to spend a million dollars in the construction of depots in view of the World's Fair traffic. The principal structures will be at Memphis, Jackson and New Orleans.—New Delta.

The American says that the capital stock of the Lake Charles Street Railway Company has all been subscribed, and that many would be glad to subscribe now, provided there were any shares left. The line was surveyed last week, and work will be commenced immediately, and if the material can be procured, the road will be in operation within the next sixty days.

A company has been chartered with a capital stock of $100,000 to manufacture ice, furnish electricity for lights and power, put in a system of waterworks, and a telephone system.

The Board of Commissioners of the Red river, Bayou Boeuf and Atchafalaya levee district met at Alexandria recently. The principal business transacted was the report of the secretary and the hearing of a statement from Mr. John Lanier, register of the land office, the latter gentleman informing the Board that they now owned 145,000 acres of land. The same will, no doubt, be disposed of at great benefit to the Red river, Bayou Boeuf and levee district, and that, too, at once. The Board let out the following levees in Avoyelles parish: Blackwood levee at 18 cents per cubic yard, estimated at 7,292 cubic yards; DeLeo levee, contract awarded to Andrews Brothers' Construction Company at 22½ cents per cubic yard; Howard levee, contract awarded to W. L. Linnans for 15 cents per cubic yard.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

The convention to nominate a State senator for the fourth district took 489 ballots before a nomination was made. D. M. Watkins, of Marion, was nominated.

The Queen and Crescent authorities contemplate further improvements at Vicksburg, among which are several cold storage warehouses and the coal chutes at Kleinston.

The East Mississippi Teachers' Association held an interesting session in Corinth last week. Quite a number of leading educators of the State were present. It was a profitable convention.

One of the fine old ante-bellum residences, of which there are many near Natchez, burned down last night. It was known as "Woodland," and some eight miles from the city. It was valued at $6,000 and insured for $2,000.

Gov. Stone, ex-officio president, has called a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Industrial Institute and College, of Columbus, Miss., in Jackson, August 27, next. The Board is called for the purpose of electing a principal.

A large fire, July 29, consumed the Spengler Sash and Blind Factory in Vicksburg, and a large part of a trestle on the Mississippi Valley railroad. Loss estimated at $60,000. The fire originated from sparks from a passing locomotive.

Reports from Mississippi show that the negroes in the State have apparently lost all their interest in their right of suffrage. Only about one-fourth of them have complied with the new Constitution, which requires voters to register four months in advance of the election.

After a test of our artesian water, furnished by the Lewis waterworks for several weeks, our citizens are very much pleased with the institution, both for drinking, washing and every other domestic purpose. The water is as clear as crystal, apparently pure and free from any injurious or offensive element, and supplied in great abundance.—Democrat-Star, Scranton.

A dispatch from Holly Springs says: A stock company formed here has purchased Franklin Female College, and will convert it into a Methodist female school, to be known as the Malone College.

Franklin College, one of the oldest and best-known institutions in the State, has now become a thing of the past.

The buildings of the Standard Oil Company, in South Vicksburg, will be completed this week, and men are expected here daily to lay about three thousand feet of pipe, which will be used to connect the stationary tanks with those arriving by rail.

The city has been for many years an important depot for coal oils, but it is understood that it will be a distributing point for a much larger territory in future.—Herald.

A petition has been circulated asking Gen. W. T. Martin to stand for re-election as senator from Adams county. Gen. Martin represented this county at the last and previous sessions of the Legislature in the Senate, and was one of the most prominent and able men of that body. The county is justly proud of him, and if he consents to run, will return him without opposition.

The Herndon, now dredging out the canal in front of Vicksburg, will complete her third cut down to three feet on the gauge, and begin work on the basin Thursday. The season has been very favorable so far, and it is hoped that much more work will be accomplished before dead low water. There is now sixteen feet of water in the canal.

The Commercial-Herald grows poetic and eloquent over the beauty of the Hill City. Listen:

"The city was never more beautiful than at present. Great attention is now being paid to lawns, and not even blue-grass could be prettier than the thick Bermuda sod when closely clipped. Flowers and shrubbery are also grown more extensively year by year, tropical plants are in great abundance, and a bird's eye view of Vicksburg presents a panorama of unexcelled beauty.

For stomach chills, from improper eating or drinking, take Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

WHAT IS MODERATE DRINKING?—What is a moderate dose of the "devil in solution"? (says Dr. B. W. Richardson). I have asked this question of a great many people, and I have written a few notes of certain persons who declare themselves very moderate. I will not give names, but I will put them down as B, C, and D. B is a moderate man, and, what is more, he is a rigidly regular man. He takes one pint of malt liquor at dinner, he takes one or two whiskies at bed time, and he takes half a pint of wine regularly at dinner. I find that represents 6 oz. of alcohol; and then I turn to the physiological side of the question; and I find the alcohol does this for the man—it makes his heart beat 18,000 times a day beyond what it ought to do, and it makes that unfortunate heart raise what would be equivalent to 19 extra tons weight one foot from the earth. That is the effect of his moderation. I turn to another moderate man, who says he is "very moderate." He says he takes a pint of Cooper; one "B. and S." in the course of the day if he feels flagging; a pint of claret at dinner—for that he considers the soundest wine—and a couple of glasses of sherry or port with dessert. That man takes at least 4 oz. of alcohol a day, the physiological effect of which is to force his heart to beat 12,000 extra beats, and to make it do about 14 foot tons of extra work. I passed to another man who is called a "very, very moderate drinker." He is really moderate. He takes two glasses of sherry at luncheon, and one pint of claret at dinner. That would represent 3½ oz. of alcohol, and would give 10,000 extra strokes to the heart, 9 extra foot tons of work. Perhaps you will say, "If the heart beats 100,000 times in the course of 24 hours, this is not a great additional labor put upon it in this last case, at all events." I have calculated it in a simple way. In a ton there are 35,840 oz. Now, suppose you had this gross weight of nine tons divided into 9 oz. weights before you, and you used your hand, which is not quite so strong as your heart, or your hand and arm, for the purpose of raising each weight of 9 oz. one foot 35,840 times. You would find in the course of 24 hours that your arms would be paralyzed with work before you had got to the end of the labor. Yet this is the extra work we put upon the heart when we indulge in moderate drinking to this comparatively small extent.—Methodist Times.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

There is no more useful or elegant article than Ayer's Hair Vigor—the most popular and economical hair-dressing in the market. It causes the hair to grow abundantly and retain the beauty and texture of youth; prevents baldness, heals troublesome humors of the scalp and keeps it clean, cool, and healthy. Both ladies and gentlemen everywhere prefer Ayer's Hair Vigor to any other dressing for the hair. Mrs. Lydia O. Pitts-Ask For Mooney, ton, Mo., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time, and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and falling hair, so that I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor, my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor to any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair."

WINDOW SHADES!

Our offering of dropped styles of shades at half price was so successful last summer that we have concluded to repeat the same this year. By dropped styles we mean the styles which will not be made this coming fall and which we will, therefore, be unable to get duplicates of. The goods are perfect and on the best quality of spring fixtures with a handsome band. We will sell and others in proportion. The larger sizes of shades are what they use principally in the South, and there has never been an opportunity of buying them as low as this. We will accompany the drive with standard makes of Table Oil Cloth at 15 cents per yard. Floor Oil Cloth, Wall Paper, Matting and Rugs we are running out at very low figures, and you will save money by buying now.

A 7x42 Shade at 75c.; worth $1.50,
An 8x38 Shade at 90c.; worth $2,

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, August 13, 1891.

Briefs.

The following paragraphs we clip from the August number of the Missionary Review of the World:

At the seventy-fifth anniversary of the American Bible Society, the last year's receipts were reported as $512,388.18, and the issues of Bibles, Testaments and portions as 1,497,637, of which 524,096 were for circulation in foreign lands. Since 1816 over $20,000,000 have been received, and with these 54,000,000 copies of the Scriptures have been printed and distributed. The legacies of the first quarter century reached $109,504.57, and grew to $3,204,460.68 in the third quarter, and the church collections increased from $28,938.04 to $353,307.29.

Well might Dr. R. S. Storrs say, in a recent number of the Sunday-School Times: "It is something that American missions alone now occupy more than 4,000 stations in unevangelized lands, with 2,350 missionaries sent from this country, and more than 10,000 native helpers; that there are at these stations more than 2,700 churches, with nearly 237,000 communicants, of whom 26,000 were added last year; and that $4,000,000 are contributed annually in our country to carry on the work. It is something, certainly, that all Protestant missionary societies have now 46,000 missionaries and helpers in the field, ministering to nearly 700,000 communicants, and to more than 3,000,000 of adherents to Christianity, and expending every year, at least, $12,000,000 in the distant and costly work."

Mr. Charles A. J. Marsh, of Minneapolis, has gathered with great care some interesting statistics relating to the money investments made in behalf of the Lord's kingdom by four of the leading denominations of this country: the Methodists (North), Baptists, Congregationalists and Presbyterians (North). He finds that they have 67,274 churches with a membership (Jan. 1, 1891) of 6,500,000; that they hold property worth $359,828,994, with endowments of colleges, etc., amounting to $40,590,000, or a total of $400,419,577 thus invested, and that their annual contributions are $53,351,103. He also concludes that the other evangelical denominations just about double these figures, and hence these and those together number 13,000,000, and have invested for the maintenance and spread of the gospel $800,839,154. If the same rule be applied to the annual contributions, they would aggregate $106,702,206.

The New Standard Dictionary.

We have carefully examined the sample pages of The Standard Dictionary sent us by the publishers, Funk and Wagnalls, and are free to say we like them. We like the plan of giving the most usual definition of a word as the first definition. We like the plan of telling what preposition is proper to use in connection with certain verbs. This has often bothered us no little. The definitions in this dictionary are exhaustive, while examples of the various scientific uses of a word are freely given. Synonyms and antonyms are given plentifully. These three things characterize the pages we have examined—simplicity, accuracy and thoroughness. The type is plainer and easier to the eye than the new International Webster, now in use in our office. It will contain two hundred more pages than the International, and a great many more words. From the comparison of these sample pages with the like pages in the International, we conclude that the Standard is the superior. It is edited by Dr. I. K. Funk in conjunction with about a hundred of the learned scholars of the day. Funk and Wagnalls are the publishers, and $12 the price; advanced subscribers, $7.

A Discrowned Christ.

What is called "liberal-mindedness," in regard to religious matters, is coming to be very popular in certain quarters. To speak of a preacher as "a man liberal in his views of religious questions," is thought by some to be the highest compliment. A "liberal Christianity" is so highly spoken of that one would think no man of sense, with any respect for himself or others, would recommend any other. And this sort of thinking and talking and writing is getting to be far more common and far more popular than it was one decade ago. Some good religious people, under the influence of this spirit of "liberal ideas," have actually become afraid to speak out on religious subjects lest they should appear to be narrow-minded. They remain quiet rather than antagonize by their words the "broad views" of some of our latter-day religious teachers. They accept without questioning the latest dictum, that primitive Christianity was not theological, and that we must return to the primitive, if we would realize all that is in it, and all that it can do for the present needs of the world. They accept, without inquiry into its truth, the statement that Paul turned the simple religion of Christ into a complex system of theology, which the study of eighteen hundred years has failed to unravel and make plain. They have actually come to the verge of believing another teaching of the "liberal-minded" teachers, and that is, it is all a mistake to suppose that Christ wrought miracles; these are nothing but the inventions of disciples determined to make their Rabbi loom up as the great wonder-worker of the world's history.

Now, these "liberal" teachers, who are talking so loudly and so frequently these days, have not yet come to the point of absolutely decrying Christ. No one speaks so highly in his praise as they do. No one brings him out so prominently as an example worthy of the following of every man as they do. "He is the pattern man," "the great philanthropist." "The ideal manhood reached its realization in Jesus of Nazareth." Not one of them would insinuate that Jesus was insincere! Not one of them would declare that he was a deceiver! Not one of them would dare to say he was a fraud. And yet this is the very thing to which a strict logic, starting from their premises, will bring them and all who believe with them. Where do these "liberal" teachers get their information of Christ? They pretend to get it from the Gospels; but is this so? We don't believe it. They can never get a Christ who did not work miracles, nor a Christ who did not teach theology, from the Gospels. The Gospels, no matter how they are interpreted, have never yet, and we believe never will, present a merely human Christ. The person these "liberal" teachers pretend to have discovered in the Gospels contradicts the Gospels. To say that the miracles were invented by the disciples is to say that the Christ of the Gospels is a deceiver, for he declared that he wrought miracles. To say that his disciples made this record of his statement out of their own imagination is to discredit the whole history; and then where is the Christ of the "liberals"? All that is really known of Christ comes from the Gospels. If that part of the history which tells of his miracles is a mere fabrication of his disciples, how does it come that the whole of it is not a fabrication? Who can distinguish between the true and the false? What reason is valid to accept one part of the history and reject another part of the same history? As far as we have been able to investigate the subject, it all stands upon the same ground as to credibility. So these "liberal-minded" teachers, in their wondrous wisdom, contradict the very witnesses they bring upon the stand and impeach the evidence which they themselves introduce. Such being the plain fact, can we receive the Christ they present? Of course not. "They have taken away our Lord;" they have torn the crown of glory from his brow; they have made a mere human being of him—aye, they have made him a deceiver and a fraud! And they pretend that they get such a character from the Gospels! No, they did not. They constructed that Christ out of their own diseased imaginations, and then went to the Gospels with their preconceived conceits and fabricated a caricature of Christ by leaving out or denying everything of a supernatural character. That is the way they got their Christ, and we don't want that sort of a Savior. We want an Almighty Being for our Savior, and such an one the Gospels give us, and we will cling to him.

"Mississippi in Africa."

I am indebted to my young friend, Mr. Wm. Dixon, of Centreville, Miss., for the great privilege of examining valuable files of old papers, secular and religious, carefully preserved by his distinguished grandfather, the Rev. Dr. Wm. Winans. In looking over a file of the Courier and Journal, published at Natchez in 1837, I find this account of a bold colonization scheme projected by the "Mississippi State Colonization Society:"

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the State Colonization Society, held at Natchez on the sixteenth of January, 1837—present, Stephen Duncan, president; John Kerr, F. Beaumont, Thos. Henderson.

The following preamble and resolutions were offered and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, At the last annual meeting of the Mississippi State Colonization Society, it was declared to be the purpose of the society to obtain a suitable territory in Africa in which to plant a colony of emigrants from this State; And, whereas, By the authority of the committee to whom the business of said society has been entrusted, such a territory has been purchased on the river Sinoe; And, whereas, Delay in taking possession of said territory may probably involve the loss of it; And, whereas, The strongest reasons of expediency, including the expectation already held out to and approved by the public call for prompt and energetic action on the part of the committee, they have unanimously decided to go onward notwithstanding the empty condition of the treasury, and to rely on the prompt liberality of the friends of the measure, and of the cause of African colonization, for the necessary funds; be it, therefore, Resolved, That the committee will go forward in the enterprise, which they consider as having been committed to their hands, of establishing a colony for the emigrants from this State in Africa on the territory purchased for that purpose.

Resolved, That the said territory be called "Mississippi in Africa," and that in conformity with the former resolution of this Board a town be laid out in the most eligible site to be called "Greenville," in respect to the memory of the late James Green, of Adams county, and as a memorial of his munificent bequests to the cause of African colonization.

Resolved, That an expedition shall be prepared as early as possible to sail from New Orleans for "Mississippi in Africa" with such suitable emigrants as may be offered, and an agent or governor to superintend the colony.

And other action was taken, including the election of Rev. R. S. Finley as agent to collect funds, and the appointment of committees to confer with the "American Colonization Society," and to secure a suitable man for governor of the new colony. The enterprise practically came to naught, but its logic and lesson abide. It showed earnest and patriotic purpose to do what seemed best for a needy race. Who knows but that the final solution of the great problem may find its germinal idea in that movement?

Fraternally,

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss.

Since the Bishop wrote the foregoing, this dispatch has been received from Washington:

A movement of considerable magnitude is now on foot to arrange for the deportation of the negroes of the Southern States to Liberia. Capt. John Murray and Mr. W. B. Lewis, representing Elder, Dempster & Co., of Liverpool, owners of an important line of steamships, have been at Chamberlains for some days in consultation with Mr. Benjamin Gaston, the authorized agent of the Liberian Emigration Company. The negotiations between them have been carried to a successful point and an agreement has been reached whereby a fleet will be at the disposal of the colored people. Ships will sail at frequent intervals from Southern points direct to the African coast, and it is believed that the first contingent will be ready to start out inside of two months. One of the company's vessels is now at Baltimore. Capt. Murray talks enthusiastically of the good to accrue to the negroes by emigration to Liberia.

So the Bishop's last sentence may be more quickly realized than he thought.—EDITOR.

Conference Claimants of the Mississippi Conference Again.

It does me good to see Bro. J. W. Chambers so earnest about the support of our Conference claimants, and, too, about their being paid quarterly. Ever since his first article I have anxiously watched for articles from the brethren concerning this matter; but if my memory does not misserve me, none have appeared as yet except his own. This surely can not be due to a lack of interest in these Conference worthies for whom God requires special and ample provisions to be made for their comfort and support. But still, when we consider the sheer pittance allowed each for his support, we are constrained to believe that something is lacking somewhere, and especially do we know that the money, a much-needed something, is sadly lacking. I, for one, am heartily in favor of raising their assessment to the needed amount, and each preacher's becoming responsible for the quarterly payments of the amount apportioned to his charge for their support, that they may be paid quarterly.

But some of us have talked most flippantly about the impracticability of the quarterly payment plan. Instead of taking Christ at his word when he said, "All things are possible to him that believeth," and proceeding with this great and responsible work, believing all things are possible in the sense of practicability where the Lord is at all interested. Now, let us see, after all, if the quarterly payment plan is not practicable. During the next session of our Conference let the preachers, the first thing, pledge themselves to collect their Conference funds quarterly, and then let the Joint Board of Finance make the assessments and apportionments, apportioning to each claimant his amount for the ensuing year. After this is done then let the Board make out a list of such a number of claimants and of such claimants for each district as reside in or near or properly belong to it, with the amount apportioned to each claimant of that district, and also each claimant's postoffice address, to be turned over to the presiding elder of that district or a trusty, business-like layman residing in the same, who shall be the depositary and distributer of the Conference funds of his district, to be sent to him every quarter on a certain day or week from the different charges of his district, the surplusage thereof to be sent by him to whatever other depositary the Conference may direct, where it is needed, giving and taking receipts, and publish a report of his work every quarter in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Should any claimant die during the year, leaving no member of his family a claimant, let the depositary keep his pro rata until the ensuing session of our Conference, and then turn it over to the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance. But, asks one, What are you going to do with the pro rata of the dead claimants and the funds that are sent in from other quarters for the support of our claimants? But, says one, It will cost too much to get the money to the claimants. Not at all. If the presiding elder is the depositary of the funds, each preacher can turn over his quarterly collection to him without his paying out anything, and then it will only cost the presiding elder a small sum to send to each claimant his amount—really, he can pay some in his rounds on his district. But rather than such a plan should fail, I am ready to pledge myself to refund all the actual money paid for this work in whatever district it may fortune me to labor. I believe that there are other brethren who will pledge to do the same thing.

Now, brethren, if there is another and better plan than the one I have suggested, let us have it, for our claimants have been embarrassed and neglected long enough. It makes me weep to see how our poor old worn-out preachers hate to be put on the superannuated list. They have had a hard struggle during all their active ministerial life; but oh! when the time comes for them to enter the roll of the (well, I believe I will say it) cast-off and neglected, they feel that hard times are just beginning. Their feelings at this period of life must be somewhat like those of some of the poor, unfortunate ones in our country whose circumstances necessitated their taking shelter in the poor-house, only no special house has been prepared for them. The Lord help us, as a church, to wake up and bestir ourselves in this line of work immediately.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

Methodism and Local Option.

My note in the ADVOCATE, some weeks ago, on this subject was addressed specifically to "the temperance workers of our church." I supposed, as a minister and officer of the church, it was my privilege to set forth the action of our General Conference in order that our people might continue to be united in earnest and unremitting struggle against the great evil of the age. And in order that our temperance workers may further see the aptness and force of the observations then made, I ask the privilege of reproducing an item of recent history.

The Anti-Prohibition Convention at Janesville, Wis., June 27, ultimo, adopted a platform containing this significant statement:

We are opposed to local option because its success means the downfall of personal liberty. Wherever the local option principle has taken root, the most strict prohibition measures have followed. It will come in Wisconsin as surely as it has come in Iowa, Kansas and Dakota.

So, the whisky men being judges, local option is not a compromise with the liquor traffic, but its determined and successful foe. And they are right in that judgment. It means the overthrow of their business, and in the speediest possible way.

The prohibitionists of Mississippi united heartily and harmoniously in demanding of t Legislature the passage of local option law, and secured Under its operation nearly tw thirds of the State have been r deemed from the curse of t saloon. If amended in so particulars and pushed vigo ously, aided by our new Cons tution, the whole State will so be protected by prohibition. again urge the temperance wor ers of our great church to su tain heartily the action of o General and Annual Confe ences. And, for the sake this great cause and the salv tion of our young men, do n waste time and strength on i relevant issues.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. B. R. East, writing from Saltillo circuit, says: "We have just closed our second revival meeting on this charge with glorious results: forty conversions, twenty-two accessions, and more to follow. Saltillo is on a religious boom. The claims ordered by Conference well up. The best Sunday-schools ever on this charge. Revival on all the lines. We go to Oak Hill to-night. The Lord is doing a great work for us, whereof we are glad. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. C. Ellis, Raymond, Miss.: "Since we last wrote we have adjourned to other good meetings, namely: Byram and Oak Hill. We were assisted by Rev. J. G. Cammack at Byram, who made many friends and lasting impressions. Fifteen were added to the church there, and the church was revived. We were assisted at Oak Hill by Rev. T. A. Luster, a young local preacher, who did good service. There were no accessions here except four renewals and two transfers, but the church seems to be greatly revived. Pray for us."

—Rev. R. H. B. Gladney writes as follows from Belen, Quitman county, Miss.: "But few preachers that wait upon large congregations understand the labor it requires to preach to ten or fifteen people in a protracted meeting. Bro. Geo. Lipscomb came down and gave us some clear-pointed sermons during the week at Marks. Above all, we had an opportunity to press the matter of salvation upon each individual. We received three into the church, and baptized four children; also secured a subscriber for the ADVOCATE. More anon."

—Rev. H. L. Vaughn, Pope Station, Miss.: "My first meeting closed on the sixth, after a continuance of eight days. While we were prevented from holding several services because of rain, yet the good work continued. The downpouring and outpouring of the rain was only a forerunner of the downpouring and outpouring of the Holy Ghost, resulting in nineteen conversions and twenty-one additions to our church. All of them except two were members of Sunday-school. I had no help except Christ, the Holy Ghost and a praying church. We need no traveling evangelist where this is the case."

—Rev. J. T. Nicholson writes from Edwards, Miss.: "We closed, on last Sunday, a very fine meeting at this place. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and about two hundred Christian people professed to be specially blessed and helped to a higher experience. Some of our brethren have taken up public prayer who had not done so before. Twelve united with our church. Our work is prospering here. Everything shows a forward tendency. We were assisted by Revs. W. B. Lewis and F. M. Keen, of Vicksburg. The preaching of these brethren was of the best type. It strengthened, encouraged and helped our people. They have the love and gratitude of this entire community. They came to us full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and have left with us an influence for good that will abide. It is with gladness we serve this noble, generous people."

—Rev. H. P. Lewis writes: "Mrs. W. J. Bunch died suddenly on the night of Aug. 2, leaving a husband and four children; one of them the wife of Rev. J. M. Cowan, of Mississippi Conference. Sister Bunch was an acceptable member of our church here in Benton. Let her stricken husband and children have the prayers and sympathies of the church. We closed, Wednesday, Aug. 5, a good meeting at New Hope. Bro. J. W. Ellison, of McComb City, was with us five days, in the spirit of the Master, and did good and faithful work. Bro. Ellison was born and raised near this church, and it was a great treat to his many relatives and friends to see his face and hear his voice in sermon, song and prayer. May his faithful, earnest, pointed preaching be productive of lasting good! One of the most interesting services was the children's service, the last day of the meeting, conducted by Bro. R. T. Nolen, a local preacher here in Benton."

—Rev. W. T. Woodward writes from Amite Mission, Mississippi and Louisiana: "Last Friday I started for Nebo Church, where I was to begin a protracted meeting Saturday, eleven A. M. On my way had to cross several creeks, and had quite a rainy day besides. I got my feet wet up to my waist. However, I reached Bro. H. B. Newsom, my Sunday-school superintendent, about, or a little before, sundown. He built a nice pine-knot fire, and I was soon dry again. Saturday morning dawned upon us; with the exception of a few clouds here and there, all was favorable. We all were soon ready, and went to church, where we were to commence our meeting. On account of the election, we had but few out that morning. We started; no one came to my relief until the last day. Bros. W. Powell and N. J. Roberts, both local, preached a sermon each. This closed the meeting, with twenty-six accessions. Such a meeting was never known in that community since the days of old Bro. Watkins. Eternity alone can reveal the conversions. To God be all the praise."

—Rev. W. Hoover writes from Summit, Miss.: "Third Quarterly Conference for Brookhaven circuit, Mississippi Conference, closed with a protracted meeting. Results gratifying. Owing to the incessant rain, Friday and Saturday, the people could not come out to hear Dr. Woodward. He preached three excellent sermons; all highly pleased with him. I closed the meeting with service (in the morning) for the children; the best day of all. I preached a sermon on the power of little things. When I came to the results of 'simply one drink' I stated that Miss Holloway would tell it better than I could. She stepped out with dignity and grace; gave us 'Lost Charley.' The effect was just wonderful. If we take the standard of effectual preaching, she excelled us all. All were in tears after Dr. Woodward left. Bros. Winborn, Ferrell and Bro. Hardin (a Baptist minister) did the preaching. I like this mixing up. As the egg question is up, I have a case to report. A Baptist sister, Mrs. Jones Greer, last year adopted the plan of saving her Sunday eggs—all the eggs gathered on Sunday—for mission money. She paid in nearly five dollars from this source. All can do this much."

Personal and Otherwise.

Bishop Haygood's address is 1952 Lovelace avenue, Los Angeles, Cal.

The editor, after a pleasant visit to LeCompte, in attendance on the Alexandria District Conference, returned Tuesday morning. He found his desk crowded with communications which will receive his attention.

The next session at Centenary College will be opened on Wednesday, Sept. 2. It is very desirable that students should be present at the beginning of the session. For new catalogues address Prof. G. H. Wiley, Jackson, La.

Some of the brethren are writing rather rough letters, complaining that their articles do not appear, when they think they should. It is simply impossible for us to publish everything that is sent us in the next issue of the paper. If any brother thinks he can do it, if he will come down here, we will vacate and give him a chance to try his hand.

WISHING.

"I wish I had an engle's sight!"
Said Johnnie with a radiant look,
As all sat round the evening light,
Each occupied with work or book.
"Then on far Eifel Tower I'd stand,
And view the wonders of each land."

"But you've no ship to cross the sea!"
Cried little May in quick reply;
"And if you had, how sick you'd be!"
"I'd take the engle's wings and fly—
Then on and on, o'er hill and plain,
Right round the world and home again,"

"Tshaw! eyes and wings!" sneered sturdy Dan;
"I'd choose, if I a choice could make,
A lion's strength." "And I," said Nan,
"The lily's breath and beauty take."
Then sweet-toothed Nell piped, "For my part,
Give me from bees the honey art."

Wishing ran wild. We all were gay.
Mother sat sewing, weary-faced;
Small time had she for books and play,
So many stitches must be pieced.
Old pussy stretched, lazy and fat,
Close at her feet, upon the mat.

"Mother," called Dan, "'tis your turn now!
What would you take, had you the chance?"
She pushed the glasses up her brow
And gave us all a kindly glance:
"Well, if I could, and 'twas no crime,
I'd take," she said, "the cat's spare time."

MR. EDITOR: As I never see any letters in the dear old ADVOCATE from here, I will let the young folks hear from Millsaps. I am now visiting my uncle, Capt. J. M. Matthews, who lives near Wesson. I am having a fine time. Our Sunday-school superintendent is Bro. Ben Goya. All the boys and girls think so much of him, and he is so good. We have preaching once a month, and Rev. Dr. Miller is our pastor. I am just from school at the Union Church High School. Dr. C. W. Grafton was president, and he was liked by all the pupils. I love to read the stories and the letters from the children in the ADVOCATE, and also the large folks as well as the children. I love to read Dr. Carradine's very interesting letters; also Bro. J. M. and S. G. Weems' letters from Mexico. Now, I want to ask the little folks a question: How many times is the word "man" found in the Bible? With best wishes for the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your little friend,
PRINT MATTHEWS FORD.

Millsaps, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As I have not written for some time to your very valuable paper, I will do so now; but am afraid my letter will reach the much-dreaded waste-basket. I am an orphan, my father, mother and two brothers having been killed in the Beauregard cyclone in 1883. I have only one brother, Dr. E. L. Jones, who is practicing dentistry in Greenville. He was not at home during the cyclone, which was exceedingly lucky for him. I am not going to Sunday-school now, for we have none. Rev. A. D. Miller is our pastor, and he is loved by all the people. He preaches once a month, and I am glad when that time comes. I went to school this Spring, at Beauregard, to Prof. R. E. A. Stuart. He is a very good teacher, and was liked by all. I will ask the young folks this question: Where in the Bible do we find the word "salt"? I will close. With best wishes for the ADVOCATE, I am,

Your friend,
J. B. JONES, JR.

Wesson, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: As papa takes the ADVOCATE, I thought I would write to you. I live in the country, and papa is a farmer. I go to school to Miss Emma Hall, and like to go very much. I study language, arithmetic, geography, reader and speller. She has twenty-seven scholars. Bro. Sanders is our pastor for the second year. I have two brothers and one sister living; one sister and brother are dead. I will close by asking this question: Who was Jesus' mother? Yours truly, Elephants in India.

HOW THE HUGE PACHYDERMS ENJOY THEIR LUSCIOUS BREAKFAST.

If there is one thing which an elephant enjoys above all things else, it is his bath.

The splashing and gurglings and sport of the great elephant at their morning bath in the Frog Pond on Boston Common is one of the favorite sights of Boston children when the big circuses come to town.

In India elephants are used to draw the great gun of the heavy batteries. They take their baths in the barracks, at the troughs where they drink, and they behave much better about it than many children.

They can not duck themselves all over as the travelled elephants do on Boston Common. Instead, they have to lie down and be patient while they are washed by their attendants.

They turn themselves about very promptly to suit their convenience.

The attendant rubs the hide with a piece of stone instead of a sponge; and if the stone slips out of his hand, the elephant politely picks it up with his trunk and hands it back.

After they have have been well scrubbed the elephants give themselves a shower bath, using their trunks to dash the water upon themselves, and they can hit any part of their body with ease.

After the bath they form in a row, side by side, ready for breakfast.

Each elephant has five bundles of straw at this meal, and each bundle has two pounds of rice in it. These bundles are laid down before the elephants. But they are not permitted to help themselves, because they would spill and scatter the rice. At the word "Feed!" each elephant raises its trunk. The attendant then lifts a bundle and lays it in the elephant's mouth. So the great elephants are fed like little babies by the soldier nurses.

Their supper is of sugar-cane and coarse grass.—Sophie Scissors, in Our Little Men and Women.

Everybody Likes Her.

There is a type of girl that everybody likes. Nobody can tell exactly why, but after you have met her, you turn away to some other women and say: "Don't you like Miss Grosvenor?" Now, the reason you like her is a subtle one; without knowing all about her you feel just the sort of girl she is.

She is the girl who is not "too bright and good" to be able to find joy and pleasure all over the world.

She is the girl who appreciates the fact that she can not always have the first choice of everything in the world.

She is the girl who is not aggressive and does not find joy in inciting aggressive people.

She is the girl who has tact enough not to say the very thing that will cause the skeleton in her friend's closet to rattle his bones.

She is the girl who, whether it is warm or cold, clear or stormy, finds no fault with the weather.

She is the girl who, when you invite her to any place, compliments you by looking her best.

She is the girl who is sweet and womanly to look at and listen to, and who doesn't strike you as a poor imitation of a demi-mondaine.

She is the the girl who makes this world a pleasant place because she is so pleasant herself.

And, by and by, when you come to think of it, isn't she the girl who makes you feel she likes you and, therefore, you like her?—Boston Globe.

HOUSEHOLD.

A Chief Cause of Crime.

Often when I have been asked what are the causes, or what is the particular cause, that sends most of our men to prison, I have of late years invariably answered, "The want of family discipline."

The indulgence of the father and mother, who allow the child to grow up without any discipline to form character, leads almost inevitably to evil ways and consequently to prison.

The child, even of tender years, who is indulged in its natural waywardness, and who is allowed to say to its father or its mother, "I will," or "I won't," is in a fair way to become an inmate of our penal institutions.

Parents are also responsible for the waywardness of their children which leads them into crime, from a practice of deceiving them.

The intelligent child, when deceived by its parent in small things, is likely to form evil habits, which in its future life will not be easily eradicated.

This can not be better illustrated than by the growth of fruit and other trees. If they are allowed in the first years of their growth to become crooked, distorted and out of shape, it is found nearly or quite impossible, in later years, to bring them into symmetry and to make perfect trees of them.

So with the child. Its early training lasts for a life-time, and unless there are elements in its character, and will-power, to correct its evil bringing up, it naturally grows worse and worse as it grows older.—Ex-Warden A. A. Brush, of Sing Sing.

What to Teach the Boys and Girls.

1. To be true—to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter in the alphabet, and be true and genuine in intention and action, rather than, being learned in all science and languages, to be false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach that truth is more than riches, more than any earthly culture, more than any earthly power or position.

2. To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and in body. An impure man, young or old, poisoning the society where he moves with smutty stories and impure examples, is a moral leper, a plague spot, who ought to be treated as were the lepers of old, banished from society and compelled to cry unclean, as a warning to save others from the pestilence.

3. To be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comforts of others. To be generous, noble, manly and womanly. This will include a general reverence for the aged and for things sacred.

4. To be self-reliant and self-helpful even from early childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting in the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, and that an idle, useless life of dependence on others is disgraceful.—The Union Signal.

Selfishness does not always prompt to action in the line of self-interest. Selfishness is likely to give the first place to the present moment. Self-interest considers the future as well as the present. If a man would never do anything that he saw was to cost him more than he gained by it, a large proportion of the evil that is now doing in this world would be refrained from. It seems strange, indeed, that men are not readier to choose that course which they know to be for their permanent welfare; but, as a matter of fact, the choice of most men is a deliberate choice of pleasure or interest for the moment, rather than of advantage and profit in the end. Shakespeare asks:

"What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy,
Who buys a minute's mirth, to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to gain a toy?
For one sweet grape, who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with that sceptre straight be stricken down?"

But the average sinner, in his folly, replies: "Give me the present, and the future may take care of itself."—Sunday-school Times.

SCIENTIFIC.

Cyclones and Tornadoes.

The relentless violence of tornadoes is a direct result of their whirling, and the whirling is a habit which they have inherited from the rotation of the cyclonic storms in which they are bred. The cyclones have not of themselves originated the rotation that so universally characterizes them, but in turn have received the habit from the great polar whirl of the general atmospheric circulation in which they are formed; and this has come by immediate inheritance from the rotation of that persistent and inveterate spinner, old Mother Earth. The whirling that characterizes our tornadoes is, therefore, passed down to them in direct line of inheritance from the rotation of their great-grandparent, and you may ask any astronomer if he thinks that they will soon cease. To be sure, there would be no polar whirl if there would be no equatorial overflow, but there would be an overflow as long as the sun shines on the equator; and the permanence of this may also be referred to the astronomers. They will, indeed, tell you that the duration of sunshine can not be expected to reach as far into the future as the endurance of the earth's rotation; but both are enduring enough for all practical purposes. It may be well to mention that most cyclones have no tornado offspring, for which we may be duly thankful; but others have rather a large family. Consider the extraordinarily fruitful cyclonic storm that traversed over this country on February 19, 1884; as its center moved from Illinois into Canada, it gave birth to some forty or fifty vicious tornadoes in the Southern States. Most happily for us, those little whirls are short-lived; they seldom live more than half an hour, although their parents may go on for a week or two, and cross a continent or an ocean; indeed, one cyclonic storm has been traced in apparently continuous progress all around the world. Again, just as it is not every cyclonic storm that gives birth to tornadoes, so even the tornado-breeders do not generate these violent offspring at all points on their course, but have their breeding-grounds; and, alas! the favorite ground is our fruitful Mississippi Valley. As they cross over the superb stretch of country, particularly in the Spring and Summer, the cyclonic indraught brings together the unlike elements from which the tornadoes arise: the warm, damp lower winds from the Gulf, and the cool, dry upper winds from the western or northwestern interior, where the temperature is still low. Nowhere else in the world is there a like opportunity for the crossing of winds so strongly contrasted, and nowhere else do cyclonic storms so often give birth to tornadoes.

The same relation of short-lived offspring and long-lived parent appears between the cyclonic storms, whose life-history we measure in days or in weeks, and the great polar whirl, whose duration we may almost call immortal. The polar whirl has times of great activity in Winter, when the contrast in temperature between equator and pole is at its maximum, and at this season the most and the strongest cyclones are generated in it. In Summer time, when the difference of temperature between equator and pole is least, the whirl runs slower, and its cyclones are fewer and weaker; but it is chiefly in these latter that the tornadoes are produced. The earth must, therefore, already have been, and continue to be for ages and ages to come, subject to cyclones and tornadoes; yet if we take a very long view of the matter, it might be allowable to say that the polar whirl is not immortal, for it presumably was not at work when the earth was growing with its heat; nor will it remain in operation when the heat of the sun, on which it now depends, is exhausted. The polar whirl lives all through that immensity of time in which the sun determines our climate; but the rotation of the earth on which the whirling of the atmosphere depends, is more enduring still. In the ardent youth of the world, long past, as well as in the cold old age, in the distant future, its rotation prevails; we must conceive of the turning being as long-lived as the earth itself. Whence did it come by this persistent habit? The earth turns on its axis from west to east, or, as seen from the North-Star side, from right to left. So do the moon and the sun, and Mars, Jupiter and Saturn, the only other members of the solar system whose rotation is certainly known. They all turn one way. Again the same strong family likeness. Not only so: the moon revolves around the earth in the same direction as both turn on their axes, and the planets all revolve around the sun in the same direction as they rotate day after day. Saturn's rings turn in the same direction. Everywhere the same well-marked habit of turning from west to east, from right to left.—William M. Davis, in the Atlantic Monthly.

A Life Saved!

READ THE TWO STATEMENTS.

An Extraordinary Case!

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Nov. 22, 1890.

Last April I was attacked with Chagres Fever in Spanish Honduras and was given up to die by two physicians. During that spell and since I have used a pound of quinine and quantities of other medicines without any benefit. From three to four days out of every week I have been down and have suffered untold agonies. Between these spells I could scarcely walk more than two blocks at a time. I did not expect to live through the coming winter. Ten days ago I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. I have had no fever since. All the symptoms have entirely disappeared. I have no pain or trouble of any kind. Am gaining strength very fast. Can walk miles at a time. My sudden and rapid improvement is simply wonderful. Germetuer has been a God-send to me. I can not say too much in its praise. Any who wish to do so may call on me. DANIEL PAPPON, 481 Jersey Street.

NEW ORLEANS, June 1, 1891.

My improvement continued, and soon after writing the above statement I was able to go to work and have been working ever since. My health is now perfect. I never felt better in my life. I give this testimony gladly, because I know that Germetuer saved my life.

DANIEL PAPPON.

Chagres Fever is known to be not only a most dangerous form of sickness, but also very difficult to cure. Germetuer has been tried on a number of cases. In every known instance it has cured quickly and completely. It has a similar record as a remedy for Swamp Fever and Malarial troubles of all kinds. Properly used, it is the quickest and most unfailing remedy for Fevers of all kinds, Dyspepsia, Debility, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Diarrhœa, Dysentery and all diseases of the Blood and Skin.

These claims are sustained by evidences from thousands of the best people in the country, and the evidences multiply in our midst every day.

For sale by druggists and country merchants, and at the Germetuer office, 702 Canal St., New Orleans. For full information, circulars, etc., call on or address Kit Williams, Agent, 702 Canal St. $1 bottle; six bottles for $5.

OBITUARIES.

MARTIN—JOHN DAVIN MARTIN was born Oct. 18, 1818, and died June 12, 1891. His early home was near Vicksburg. In 1877, while on a visit to Jefferson county, he was married to Miss Tennie D. Baldridge. Several years after his marriage he united with the Methodist Church as a seeker of religion. In August, 1890, during a protracted meeting at McNair Church, our brother was happily converted. For almost a year God let his light shine among us so brightly that no one could fail to see how the religion of Jesus Christ transforms a true believer. His death was sudden. While chopping timber, he was struck on the head by a falling limb, and, although he lingered some hours, was unconscious until death released him from pain. We sorrow that he could not speak some last words to us; but his life was so consistent that we feel assured that all is well with him. We bid him farewell in sorrow, but in faith we look for a meeting and a happy greeting soon.

Our brother leaves a wife and five little children to grieve for him. We have not words to express our sympathy for them. May God comfort and sustain the sorrowing wife and bring the little ones to follow in their father's footsteps to the glory-land!

F. E. D. BALDRIDGE.

ROBERT—Mrs. ALICE ROBERT (nee Tally), wife of E. P. Robert, was born Oct. 23, 1860; married Jan. 21, 1880, and died June 17, 1891.

Sister Robert leaves an aged mother, a husband, and five children living—three had preceded her to that home above. She was an earnest Christian woman. The church has lost one of its best members, the Sunday-school one of its most efficient workers. She was a teacher, and loved by all her pupils. We feel that the church at Slidell, La., and the cause of the Master has lost a great deal by Sister Robert's death.

Her house was the home of the preacher; he was always more than welcome when it was his opportunity to visit the house. She was a good, obedient daughter, and would never willingly give her mother pain. She was an affectionate, loving wife and devoted mother, always anxious about the spiritual welfare of her children when she was in health. She talked with her husband during her last illness about her children, and asked him to raise them right, and to live himself, so that after awhile they would be reunited in the home above. She was aware that the time of her departure was near, but she was calm and resigned. As she had lived she died—in the fear of the Lord.

J. C. CAMPBELL, P'astor.

WALKER—Mrs. JANE WALKER died on July 5 at four o'clock P. M., at the residence of her son-in-law, L. T. Sanders, near Plain Dealing, La., aged eighty-seven years and six months. Mrs. Walker was born in Rockingham county, N. C., Jan. 19, 1804. Her parents were John and Jane Herron. She was married to Talmen Walker in January, 1829, and was left a widow in 1849, with seven children, five of whom she raised to be grown. Three daughters survive her. She joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church about 1850, in Mississippi, having moved from North Carolina to Alabama, and then to Mississippi. From there she moved to Louisiana, Bossier parish, in 1859, and there being no church of her choice here, she joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1876, and lived a consistent religious life.

Many friends will long remember Aunt Jane. She was a remarkable woman for energy. She was never found idle when able to work. May her friends and relatives imitate her many virtues and her piety, and be prepared to meet her on the other side of the "beautiful river," where there will be no more parting! May the Lord bless the bereaved children and grandchildren, and lead them through the "still waters of life!"

A FRIEND.

ODOM—Sister DOLLIE ODOM (nee Turner) died at her father's, near Grenada, July 20, 1891. She was the daughter of Alexander A. and Kate K. Turner; was born Jan. 17, 1868; professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at about the age of fourteen years. She was happily married to Wm. A. Odom, Feb. 20, 1890. Sister Dollie was a dutiful daughter, was an affectionate and faithful wife, also a kind stepmother.

She lingered long and suffered a great deal with consumption, which brought her to the end early in life; though during all her suffering she was patient, not murmuring. On the morning before her departure in the evening she was asked by her pastor, "Do you feel that the Lord is with you?" She answered: "Yes, I am perfectly prepared. I am safe, safe." Thus passed away another member from the church militant to the church triumphant. We sorrow not as those who have no hope.

D. W. BAUM.

HAMBLEN—Died at her home near Camden, Miss., where she had lived for fifty years, Mrs. LOUISIANA HAMBLEN, aged about eighty-one years. She was born near Rogersville, Tenn., Aug. 29, 1810. She was married to Edwin Hamblen, December, 1826. Her husband departed this life for the better one above in 1874. After a brief illness she followed on, her pure spirit taking leave of this world on June 14, 1891. She was a member of the Methodist Church for fifty years. Her Christian character was unsullied. Her piety was of the solid type.

Sister Hamblen has left on earth ten children to mourn their great loss, six of whom are in Texas. She fell on sleep quietly and peacefully, and rests from all earth's sorrows and cares.

HER PASTOR.

SCHINCKE—JULIUS SCHINCKE was born near Posen, Germany, May 4, 1843, and came to America while still a lad. In the year 1882 he came to New Orleans, where he has since resided until his death on Sunday, July 19, 1891.

Bro. Schincke was brought to Christ through a sermon preached by D. L. Moody, and became a member of Carondolet Street Church, New Orleans, in 1886. He was strong in faith, his Christian experience being one of great peace. He was punctual, regular and energetic in his discharge of duty, counting it all honor to serve Christ. During an illness of several weeks, suffering much, he was patient and trustful, never for a moment questioning his acceptance with God, and when the call came he was ready to go.

PASTOR.

WINGATE—Mrs. FANNIE R. WINGATE, wife of F. M. Wingate, and daughter of R. and E. A. Colton, was born Sept. 21, 1851, in Carroll county, Miss., and died July 20, 1891, after a long and painful illness.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, quite young, and lived a devoted Christian until her death.

She was married to F. M. Wingate, Dec. 5, 1869. She was the mother of eight children. One of them has gone before to wait for the remaining seven, and father and friends, who are left to mourn as children and friends can only do.

Sister Wingate died as she had lived—in the triumphs of a living faith. Our loss is her eternal gain.

R. C. CALLAWAY.

MIDDLETON—In memoriam of my sister, Miss ANNIE HEMANS MIDDLETON, who departed this life at our home, near Midway Church, in Yazoo county, Miss., Saturday morning, July 11, 1891.

Just as the sun had dispelled the shades of night, and we were entering upon the duties of another day; just as the birds had begun to sing their sweet songs, Christ came and claimed as his own one of my dear sisters and my parents' most dutiful daughter. So another home has been made sad by another vacancy that can not be filled, another fair brow has been shaded by the cold and silent grave, and the inexorable decree fulfilled: "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes and dust to dust;" and another star has been added to the Master's crown.

When I left home, two months ago, she was the very picture of health, and no one dreamed of her dying until within a few hours before she passed away. But, blessed be God, for the glorious thought, that, though the dark angel held to her lips the poisoned cup of death, when only seventeen summers had passed over her head, she was ready to go, and now stands waiting near the "pearly gates" to welcome us to our home beyond the skies.

"There is no death! What seems so is transition.
This life of mortal breath
Is but the suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portals we call death."

In earlier life she joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consistent member until death, and died in the triumphs of our Christian faith. Sister Fannie wrote me that "she died, she passed away very sweetly." Yes, she died as she lived, "very sweetly." I can not at this writing recall a single instance when she complained of her lot in life, or spoke unkindly to any member of the family, or uncharitably of her associates and neighbors. She was not only submissive and kind, but she was quiet, gentle, meek and modest in all she did or said. She was developing into such a sweet character and well-rounded Christian womanhood that we were hopeful of her future success as a teacher and happiness as a Christian. But, alas! how often is it that

"Hopes perish that had hung like wreaths
Around youth's buoyant brow,
And joys fade like withered autumn leaves
Dropped from the shaken bough."

She spoke of offering herself to our church as one willing to respond to the many calls for missionaries, and should she have lived, no doubt, one day she would have offered her services for the mission field. To this end she is not lost, for she has really gone as a missionary. She will, as she is, draw us and all who knew her closer to God. I would not call her back, though our loss is very great; yet we know that our loss is her gain, for while we have tears as our inheritance, she has a crown and songs of rejoicing as the reward of her faithfulness. And so long as it is recorded of the blessed Savior that he "wept," so long will our tears be precious in the sight of him who loves us and feels for us a father. But

"Sorrows humanize our race;
Tears are the showers that fertilize this world,
And memory of things precious keepeth warm
The heart that once did hold them."

Thank God she is not dead, only sleeping, for we read, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," for "they rest from their labors."

"There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jewelled crown
They shine forevermore.

* * * * * * * *

"There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them dead.

* * * * * * * *

"Where'er he sees a smile too bright,
Or heart too pure for taint and vice,
He hears it to that world of light
To dwell in Paradise."

She lives, then, in the beautiful light of the day that has neither rising nor setting, for

"Beyond these chilly winds and gloomy skies,
Beyond death's cloudy portal,
There is a land where beauty never dies,
Where love becomes immortal."

To my parents, brothers and sisters I would say: Be patient, be faithful! Look away from this sin-scarred, sorrow-laden, grave-strewn earth to him who alone can sustain, and to heaven, where our treasures are. Let the dust of our sweet Annie rest in the old churchyard beneath the shade of the trees, where sweet flowers will be planted as sacred memorials of our love, and where the old oaks, the gentle breezes and the birds will keep her company till the resurrection morning.

"Tho' she has gone before,
She will not be forgotten."

May the Lord keep us faithful, that we may meet on the "other side," where sickness and sorrow never come and partings are unknown! Amen!

W. B. MIDDLETON.

Barlow, Miss., Aug. 1, 1891.

Last year:

Her eyes were rheumy, and weak and red,
Her breath—you could smell it afar,
She had ringing and dizziness oft in her head,
And the cause of it all was catarrh.

This year:—

Her breath is as sweet as the new meadow hay,
Her eyes are as bright as a star,
And the cause of the change, she is ready to say,
Was the Dr. Sage Cure for Catarrh.

Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will positively cure catarrh in the head, no matter how bad or of how long standing. Fifty cents, by all druggists.

To arrest an importunate appetite, to silence the clamor of a passion, and to repel an assault upon our virtue, are noble instances of force, and handsome proofs of temper and discretion.

Premature baldness may be prevented, and the hair made to grow on heads already bald, by the use of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer.

To be always intending to live a new life, but never to find time to set about it, is as if a man should put off eating and drinking from one day to another, till he is starved and destroyed.

The World's Fair.

The South may claim, without prejudice, to have more than its share of the world's fair. The acknowledged beauty of the ladies of the South is due in a great degree to the use of Creole Female Tonic, the ladies' friend and favorite, and sure cure for all female ailments.

There are two things which ought to teach us to think meanly of human glory; the very best have had their calumniators—the very worst their panegyrists.—Colton.

Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650; and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

James Russell Lowell is seriously ill. It is three weeks since his illness became serious, and since then his condition has been unchanged.

At a meeting of the citizens of Birmingham $102,000 were subscribed to a million-dollar steel plant. The citizens were asked by the promoters for $150,000, and the balance will be raised.

Great Northern Railway officials have been compiling the volume of grain to be hauled, and it is estimated that there will be an excess of 20,000,000 bushels over last year. This will make a total of 70,000,000.

The White Star Line steamer Majestic, which left Liverpool July 29, arrived at New York Aug. 5, thus breaking the record from Queenstown to New York. Her time was five days eighteen hours and eight minutes.

President Baker, of the World's Fair directory, has received a proposition by cable from M. Eifel, the architect of the Eifel tower at the Paris exposition, saying he would like to make a proposition for building a tower on the World's Fair grounds.

The Morgan Line steamship El Dorado, which left New York for New Orleans on Aug. 1, with an assorted cargo estimated to be worth one million dollars, ran ashore on the Bahama banks on the fourth instant. The vessel, which cost originally $350,000, will probably prove a total loss.

The twenty-first annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union was opened in Washington (D. C.), on Aug. 5. Miss Francis Willard and Mrs. S. D. LaFetra, of the W. C. T. U., were present and were invited to seats in the convention as its fraternal guests. Miss Willard, in response to repeated calls, made a short address.

Great preparations are being made in St. Louis for the meeting of the Southern lumber manufacturers. The secretary has mailed 1,000 invitations to lumbermen in all parts of the country, particularly in the South and Southwest. The attendance at this convention will, no doubt, be the largest ever known in the history of the association.

The Farmer's Alliance has settled the political question before it. The compromise between the Anti-Lotteryites and the Union was adopted on Aug. 6, and the Alliance unanimously indorsed President Adams for governor. The farmers are to have the governor, treasurer and superintendent of public education; the rest of the ticket is to be named by the Antis. The Alliance have the naming of the temporary chairman of the convention if the Antis succeed men of all committees.

FOREIGN.

The French have planted works at Havre for utilizing the ebb and flow of the tide to work turbine wheels to generate power for the dynamos to supply Paris with light.

A great deal of apprehension is felt in Mexico in regard to crop prospects. An alarming state of affairs exists in the principal grain-producing districts, owing to continued drouths.

The English Parliament was prorogued on Aug. 5 by the Queen. The two most important measures passed at the last session are the Irish Land Purchase act and the Free Education act.

The projects to draw Switzerland into the Triple Alliance do not prosper. The meeting of the delegates at Vienna has been suspended, the Swiss government having refused to make concessions.

For the first time since the press began transcending its previous record of scandalous mendacity about the German Emperor, the government has deemed it necessary to issue a semi-official notice regarding alarmist reports about the emperor's health.

August 6 was the eighty-second anniversary of the birth of Baron Tennyson, the poet-laureate of Great Britain. Multitudes of friends visited the poet at his residence to tender their congratulations. Many letters bearing messages of love and respect were received.

The National Gazette, of Berlin, has a dispatch from Rome saying that France and the Vatican entered into a new agreement in July by which France undertakes to help the Vatican in its financial embarassment and the Vatican is to support the republic at home and abroad.

Six schools for training socialistic laborers have been opened in Berlin. The object is to give a sound and practical education. Four thousand applications were made for admission, but the schools can accommodate only 1,000 persons. Efforts will be made to open other schools.

The American commissioners of the World's Fair, being interviewed just previous to starting from Berlin for Frankfort, concurred in praising the warmth of the official greeting which had been extended to them. This pleasant state of affairs, they declared, was largely due to the energy of Mr. Wm. Walter Phelps, United States minister at Germany.

Ask Your Friends

Who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla what they think of it, and the replies will be positive in its favor. One has been cured of indigestion and dyspepsia, another finds it indispensable for sick headache, others report remarkable cures of scrofula, salt rheum and other blood diseases, still others will tell you that it overcomes "that tired feeling," and so on. Truly, the best advertising which Hood's Sarsaparilla receives is the hearty endorsement of the army of friends it has won by its positive medicinal merit.

J. Jones, Meridian circuit, Aug. 91: "On Aug. 8 we began a meet- Concord Church, near the par- o, in the bounds of Meridian cir- We had one of the best meetings r attended. I have served this h near four years. I thank God have lived to see and hear the ers of this church talk in their ience meetings, and see them re- together. Bro. J. D. Wood, our leader, is a power in our class ngs. One year ago he promised hurch that he would serve as a in their class meetings. On the we saw the members of this h happy under the leadership of this good man. Our meeting closed on the eleventh. We believe there were several conversions. There was one accession. We feel that God has blessed this church wonderfully. It is to be hoped that every family will take their church paper and read it, and everyone do what they can in meeting the demands that are upon them. For such a revival to continue, self-denial must not be forgotten. We are thankful to Bro. Fiker for good help rendered. Pray for us."

A Well Wisher, Chulahoma, Miss., Aug. 15, 1891: "Our third quarterly meeting on this circuit was held here on last Saturday and Sunday. Our talented presiding elder, Bro. Wheat, was too feeble to be with us. Our circuit rider, W. T. Barnett, presided over the body with dignity and honor to his church; protracting the meeting for a week without any ministerial aid, preaching twice a day, leading in singing and praying, and it looked as if the very God of heaven was sustaining and hearing him onward. When any of his members, in trying to help him, would get too full and break, then he seemed to be in his happiest state. We had a large and attentive congregation, and quite a revival of pure religion. He preached with power and the Spirit of the living God, and his sermons not only pleased the older and classic part of his congregation, but the young also. I remember a little boy returning from service, who was asked what he thought of the sermon. He said, 'It was a good one,' giving the principal ideas and arguments, saying that he didn't even get sleepy. The writer has heard parties, who are not of the same faith and order, unite with his members and agree to memorialize our Conference for his return to this work."

F. G. Wilson, Mount Pleasant circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Aug. 17: "I have been authorized by our pastor, the Rev. Jos. Johnson, to repeat to the readers of the ADVOCATE the result and anticipations of a most glorious revival, which has been in progress for seven days at the New Salem Church, Holly Springs district, North Mississippi Conference, conducted by the Rev. Luther A. McKeown, an able and efficient minister of Blue Springs, Miss. Bro. McKeown worked with untiring energy and great zeal, and God, in his infinite wisdom, crowned his labor with complete success. The church was greatly revived, sinners were converted, and backsliders reclaimed. One of our oldest citizens, an aged sinner, was justified and united to the church. Eighteen accessions to the church was the result of this wonderful meeting, carried on by Bro. McKeown in the absence of our pastor, who was called to the bedside of a dying brother. This able preacher, through his originality and ability, assisted by the divine influence of the Holy Spirit, accomplished a great amount of good at this place. May Christ bless this good man, and send him again into our midst! is the prayer and wish of the people of this community."

R. A. Davis, Downsville, La.: "I closed an interesting meeting at my Ebenezer appointment, on Downsville work, Friday, Aug. 7, 1891, having protracted two weeks to a service. The presiding elder, Bro. J. L. P. Sheppard, stopped with me, and gave us an excellent sermon on the first Friday of the meeting; and Bro. Wm. Gaskins, a Baptist brother, preached for me one time with good effect. With no other ministerial help, I labored night and day with that kind people through the two weeks' service, with the following results: Fifty-six accessions to the church, about thirty or forty professed conversion, church greatly revived into such working order as to carry on the services of the week of prayer last week to Saturday. From there I went, last Saturday week, Aug. 8, to Mars Hill, and continued services until Thursday night, Aug. 13, with results of meeting at Mars Hill appointment: Eighteen received into the church, and several conversions. Am now in the midst of protracted services at Walnut Lane. I am rejoiced to say that 102 accessions were reported at Quarterly Conference, Saturday, Aug. 15, this quarter. Church much improved, spiritually. Praise ye the Lord!"

Geo. W. Huff, North Wilkinson circuit: "My protracted meeting at Hopewell closed yesterday evening, Aug. 14, having lasted seven days. The good Lord blessed us, indeed. His presence was surely with us in convicting and converting power. Men, women and children were convicted of sin. Oh! what wondrous conviction; some cried, 'I am lost,' while others wept, and said, 'What must I do to be saved?' We had 25 accessions, 30 conversions, and baptized 12 children. The preaching was just grand. Bro. Petty was with us, full of the Holy Ghost; his prayers and sermons were enjoyed by all present. Rev. H. Walter Featherstun was there; his sermons were simply grand. His sermon on what a church was enlightened the minds of a great many people. Bro. Featherstun knocked down every apostle that stood in the apostolic succession. Mr. Editor, it was real funny to see that little man Featherstun, with his specks on, stand flat-footed and knock down and out twelve great big apostles; but he did it. Thank God for such men as Featherstun! Bro. Woodward (W. T.) was with us and did valuable work. He is a good protracted meeting preacher and knows how to work. He gained many friends at Hopewell. May God bless these servants of his and make them a power for good in the land. Bless the Lord; I am happy on the way."

J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., Arcadia district: "I have just returned home from a long, wearisome trip, and will have to leave again to-morrow (Aug. 18). Two more weeks will finish my third round, and, with one exception, will finish my week-day Quarterly Conferences, so I will have some little time to recruit between Quarterly Conferences on the fourth round. The reports of the pastors for the third quarter have, in the main, been very gratifying. One preacher reported a large number of bright conversions, and 102 accessions, and I left him yesterday in the midst of a gracious meeting, which will, doubtless, swell the number of conversions and accessions on his charge. I think the aggregate increase since our District Conference will approximate 300, and still the battle goes on, and shouts of triumph are heard all along the line. We expect to come up with our finances, notwithstanding the stringency of the times. We are determined that the interest for which our dear Lord laid down his life shall not suffer because of our stinginess. Having first given ourselves to the Lord, of course we have nothing that is too dear to give to his cause and for his sake. We can afford to deny ourselves every luxury but that of contributing to the cause of our blessed Lord. In this we must be indulged. The health of the country is good, and crop prospects fair. God bless you in your labors!"

R. M. Davis, Vinton, La., Aug. 13: "We have just closed a good meeting at this place. The work began on July 27 by Bro. F. N. Sweeney, P. C., assisted by Bro. A. E. Arrington, of the Congregational Church, who gave us several very spiritual sermons. He then had to leave us, as duty called him to other fields. Bro. Sweeney continued the meeting, however, alone, and was blessed with good congregations until Monday, Aug. 3, when the good Lord sent that well-known Christian gentleman and revivalist, Rev. R. M. Blocker, of Rayne, to our rescue. He was given a very warm reception by our people, who felt drawn to him for valuable services rendered them last Spring; so on the same night of his arrival he commenced the good work. Some of his first appeals were to the Christian people to reconsecrate themselves to the Lord, that they might be useful during the meeting. To this proposition they all acted as a unit, and the Lord blessed our efforts. Result: Eight accessions, ten conversions, many backsliders reclaimed, old difficulties between prominent men settled, and the church gloriously revived, and people generally happy. Our young men pray in public, hold prayer meetings, or do anything the Lord wishes them to do. Our ladies of the different denominations work together, pray together, and seemingly live for the good they can do each other. Too much religion here for denominational fights; consequently, their united effort makes them a power for the Master's cause. The writer is rejoicing over the conversion of his son, who was the only member out of seven in family whose name was not on the church register. We do praise God for his blessings upon the people of Vinton."

J. W. Ellison writes of Topisaw Camp Meeting: "On Thursday, July 13, we closed one of the happiest and most successful meetings ever held at that place. We think there were between twenty-five and thirty conversions, and the attending Christians were greatly strengthened and built up in their faith. Some old difficulties were settled, and a good spirit pervaded all hearts, leaving many anxious hearts to see another such annual meeting at old Topisaw Camp Ground. The children had their hour on Tuesday evening, when, after a very instructive sermon from Rev. A. E. Clay, of New Orleans, many little hearts were humbled before the Lord while they kneeled at the altar for prayer. The religion of children is simply beautiful, because it is so simple and free from unbelief. By the aid of the sweet and mellow tones of the organ, so kindly tendered by Mr. P. Werlein, the music was soul-stirring, lifting many hearts to ecstasies of joy. Quite a number of the aged fathers and mothers in Israel begin to think that soon they will cease to assemble with loved ones here below, and have, doubtless, asked in their hearts, 'Shall I be there in 1892?' But, if not, they have gone down from this mountain experience with their cups brimful. The visiting brethren of the ministry were Revs. H. C. Brown, H. M. Ellis, H. P. Lewis, H. R. Caldwell, J. G. Sibley, T. S. West, A. E. Clay, R. S. Woodward, J. M. Weems, W. D. Dominick, and Bro. King. Local brethren were: J. D. Warner, Murry Felder, Havers and Beeson."

G. A. Guice, Rocky Springs, Miss., Aug. 15, 1891: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits! We have just closed our third protracted meeting for the Rocky Springs charge, and a glorious revival at each place has been the result. More than sixty have been converted, and many of them very bright. We have had seventy-three accessions to the church so far, and still the good work goes on. Backsliders have been reclaimed, family altars established, and we are all shouting, Hallelujah! The devil is on the run, and we expect to drive him to the wall before we quit. We are filling our first appointment, Mr. Editor, and I assure you we started with trembling knees; but if there is a happier man now in the Mississippi Conference than your humble servant, I would like to have his address. I want to go and see him, and rejoice with him, for the Lord has very bountifully blessed us. We have one new church just about completed, and another on which the hammers are now ringing, and we expect within the next thirty days to have completed it. Mr. Editor, we've got religion here—religion that goes down to the pocket; and if you doubt it, I will tell you we took a collection one day this week for the repair of the parsonage, and in about ten minutes we had in cash and good subscription eighty-four dollars, and we expect to leave here a good, comfortable house for the next preacher that comes this way. Surely the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, and good-will toward men!"

Chas. W. Crisler, Washington, Mississippi Conference, Aug. 19, 1891: "'Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name,' for the blessed influence of his Holy Spirit among our people. During our meeting at Locust Grove, Revs. John A. Ellis and M. L. Burton touched the hearts of many by their pure gospel preaching, Bro. Burton preaching most of the time. The church was greatly revived and blessed, being lifted into a holier atmosphere of devotion and service to Christ. Five young men and boys joined on profession of faith, leaving but one young man in the community outside the pale of some one of the evangelical churches. Two children were baptized. The Linwood meeting was wonderfully blessed by the presence and power of the Holy Ghost. A large and serious congregation assembled, from day to day, under a comfortable tabernacle erected by the good people of the community, to hear the glad tidings of good things. Bro. E. A. Flowers, who has borne the burden and heat of the day through many years for our beloved Methodism, assisted by young Bro. Neal, of Wesley Chapel, Natchez, did earnest, faithful preaching. Many strong souls were touched by the light of the gospel truth. Seven united with the church on profession of faith and by baptism. Eleven children were dedicated to Christ through baptism. The fires of Methodism have been rekindled on these shores, and an influence has been stirred that will find an echo in the great heart of God. 'Bless the Lord, all his works in all places of his dominion; bless the Lord, O my soul.'"

R. W. F., Robelino, La.: "Soon after our pastor, Rev. A. D. McVoy, returned from Hot Springs, Ark., whither he had gone hoping to regain his lost strength and health, he began a siege against sin of every description in our town. The first shot was fired the night of July 27. After this regular battles were pitched at ten A. M. and at eight o'clock P. M. of each day up to Aug. 9. Rev. Wm. Schule gave valuable assistance for four or five days the first week. He used the sword of the Spirit so dexterously that some were impressed seriously that they ought to accept the terms of salvation. His gospel guns were charged with ammunition gathered from the Mount of Calvary. Rev. E. C. McVoy fired one gun—the fourth of his ministry. He did not under or overshoot, as new soldiers are apt to do, but his fire was clear and to the mark, and he showed the proper terminal facilities. With the above exceptions, Rev. A. D. McVoy handled the guns alone during the siege. He threw hot and solid shot, grape and canister, and then charged the works of Satan in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Time and again some were almost persuaded to be Christians. But sin here is deeply rooted in the hearts of some; and when those sincerely affected by a sense of guilt would go to the altar for prayer, some on the outside who never go to church, and never permit themselves to be exposed to the fire of the gospel, would use every means in their power to cancel every good impression made. One young man surrendered, however, and joined the church. At Sunday-school, on Sunday evening, two children were baptized. The ceremony was beautiful and impressive, and the place appeared so appropriate to give the dear little ones to God. We never saw congregations more serious or more attentive. Christians were strengthened in faith, confirmed in hope, and perfected in love. Penitents went trembling to the altar for prayer. Prayers are yet going up for their salvation, and something of good may yet survive them, for we know that 'moss will grow upon grave-stones, the ivy will cling to the mouldering pile, the mistletoe springs from the dying branch, and, God be praised, something green, something fair to the sight and grateful to the heart, will yet twine round and grow out of the seams and cracks of these desolate temples of these human hearts!'"

R. M. Evans, P. C., Sallis, Miss.: "On the evening of Aug. 5 the Rev. Geo. S. Inge and little son, in company with Prof. D. J. Evans and son, arrived at our little town, Sallis, Miss., with their big tent—a big thing, indeed, for a little town; but it came, and we were there to meet it. Soon its white wings were fluttering to the music of the breeze as it murmured among the trees. We acted under the promptings of the promise that 'all things are possible to him that believeth;' and again, 'I can do all things through Christ Jesus, which strengtheneth me.' Our hearts being in the cause, our hands were ready unto the work. Ample and comfortable pews were provided for the great congregations, which for eight consecutive days feasted upon the wonderful words of life as they fell alike sparkling with truth and beauty from both sermon and song. As a revivalist, Bro. Inge is biblical, clear, chaste, courageous and invincible. The sinful heart that does not bleed under his sword-strokes must be well-nigh bloodless, while the penitent soul always finds in him a warm heart and a helping hand. We were also reinforced by the very efficient services of the Revs. L. D. Worsham, H. C. Morehead, A. Burroughs, and young Bro. Wendall, who preached with great acceptability to immense congregations. Other brethren called in from time to time, and rendered faithful services, for which we now tender grateful thanks. Prof. Evans sings to conquer, and conquers as he sings. He was reinforced by his little son, Gomar, who promises to take his father's place in due time. Also by Prof. Sanders, of Aberdeen, Miss., who knows how to get all there is to be had out of that sweetest of instruments—the cornet. The piano and organ were in the hands of ladies who did their work as ladies always do—in the latest and best style of the age in which they live and labor. God bless them; we could not move a wheel without them. They are at the top rung of every ladder that leans against God and the right. Hundreds have pledged themselves anew to live as becometh God's children. The work was far-reaching in all directions. No one can tell it all; no one but God can measure it. Seventeen were added to the M. E. Church, South. As to the more to follow, I can't say. They never follow much for me that way. Thanks to a generous community for its liberal hand. And now to God our Savior be all the praise and the glory forever. Amen and amen."

John A. Miller, P. E., Opelousas district: "I have only time to give you a few dots on closing my third round on the Opelousas district. Through the providence of God I have been able to meet every appointment. Have had some good, profitable meetings. The district, generally, is in fine condition—spiritually, numerically and financially building up. At Morgan City, Plaquemine Brulee, Vinton and Grand Chenier there have been gracious revivals, with many conversions and accessions. Still the work is spreading out, and my preachers are occupying new territory. Bro. Webb, L. P., at Lafayette, has been preaching for several months at Huron, a new field, in which there is much promise. Bro. Birwick, L. P., on Johnson's Bayou, has taken in Big Pecan, thirty miles east of Grand Chenier, and organized a church and a Sunday-school, and reports the outlook good in those 'regions beyond.' Bro. Staples, on Grand Chenier circuit, has taken in a new appointment on Johnson's Bayou, and organized a very promising church and Sunday-school. Bro. Upton is enlarging his borders at Lake Charles by organizing a flourishing Sunday-school in the upper end of the city, which will in time be the nucleus of a church. He now wants a young man of piety and zeal as a helper, to enable him to cultivate his enlarging field. The subject of a new church-building at West Lake Charles is being agitated, and in the near future those people expect to have the church built, and are talking of asking the Conference to give them a preacher all to themselves. Bro. Sweeney is doing a good work on Sulphur Mine. Bro. Blocker is still pressing with zeal the good work, going into the 'regions beyond,' and by his profound piety, urbanity and good gospel preaching and music is attracting many of the Creole citizens, and some of them are being saved. Bro. Randle has a large circuit (two thrown together); but he is covering the ground, and accomplishing much good and building up the work. Sorry to report that, owing to the stringency of finances, our new church at New Iberia has not yet been commenced; but the money has been subscribed (the most of it), and Bro. Parker is at the helm, and will push it through as soon as practicable. Bro. Ahrens is establishing the kingdom of Christ at Franklin. Bro. McDonald, at Lafayette, has been somewhat discouraged; but the clouds have been rifted, and the sun shines brightly again. He is holding the fort, and, through God's grace, we trust will gain the victory. We are working and praying for a grand triumph on this district. Hope, through divine grace, to bring up a good report at Conference. I forgot to state that our old 'stand-by,' Bro. Hoeutt, and his excellent Christian wife are striving to work up Abbeville, and are meeting with some success."

A Correction.

In my report of Bethel meeting, in Aug. 13 edition of ADVOCATE, you make me say, "All were in tears after Dr. Woodward left." I said, speaking of Miss Holloway: "She excelled us all; all were in tears. After Dr. Woodward left, Bros. Winborn, Ferrell and Hardin did the preaching." We were delighted with Bro. Woodward; but no crying when he left. Please insert this, to correct an awful blunder in punctuation and capital letters.

WM. HOOVER.

If the brother had written his article as he wrote the above postal, there would have been no mistake. Capitals and punctuation marks are very important; but if a period is wanting, and also a capital, and the sentence makes good sense, how is the editor and printer to know that both ought to be supplied?

THE TOUCH OF A VANISHED HAND

BY MARGARET J. PRESTON.

Oh, why should the world seem strange,
With its beauty round me still?
And why should the slope of my swarded path
Seem suddenly all uphill?

I had gone, with a buoyant step,
So cheerily on my way;
How could I believe so palm a light
Could turn to so chill a gray?

And wherefore? Because the hand
That held in its clasp my own—
Whose touch was a benediction such
As only the blest have known—

Was caught by the viewless hand
Of an angel, and upward drawn.
What hope, what comfort, what guidance now,
Since the stay of my life is gone?

"But a stronger is left to thee,"
Some comforting whisper saith—
"The arm that shall carry thee safe to him
When thou crossest the tides of death."

If Christ in his mortal hour
Had need of the chosen three
To watch him through the awful throes
Of his dread Gethsemane,

Oh, surely his human heart
Will pity and understand
That speechless yearning, too deep for words,
For the "touch of a vanished hand."

OUR CONTRIBUTORS.

Dr. Cottrell at Monteagle.

A respite from labor at Franklin, Ky., being deemed expedient on account of physical disability, there were especial inducements for me to come for a two weeks' rest to Monteagle. Failure of Dr. Lee, of Atlanta, to meet his appointment to preach before the Chautauqua Institute here, on Sunday night, was the occasion of my being substituted for him. The parable of the prodigal son was presented, as apprehension of its central thought and of the special lesson intended by it by Christ has, through decades, given rise to reflection and criticism. Bishop Keener once remarked to me that the benevolence of the father was the salient lesson of the parable. Whilst that is as undergirding of the structure, yet discovery of the fact that ultimate infidelity to what alone is qualification for the sanctities and sacrifices of human relations is there presented under the garb of apparently dutiful exactness, reveals a deeper criticism of life.

That elder brother! Who is it that knoweth not the measure that joint supplieth? "Woman, where are those, thine accusers? Hath no man condemned thee?" "No man, Lord!" "Neither do I condemn thee! Go and sin no more!" It is forgiveness of sin that alone qualifies for effective repentance and reformation. Does this seem to invert the order? Do repentance and reformation antedate forgiveness? Or is there coincidence? Grace, like nature, is in a round—cause and effect alternating. A tree produces an acorn, and an acorn produces a tree; a bird lays an egg, and from out an egg a bird is hatched. In logical argumentation there is what is termed "the vicious circle;" but in the range of philosophic, evolutional ascertainment of that which is above the reach of the discursive, logical understanding, a process of mind, seemingly identical with reasoning in a circle, is legitimate. Wisdom comes of generalization of what are self-evident statements; and this generalization is by no volitional forthput of the reason. It comes of inevitable impulse of mind, analagous to process of crystallization in the realm of the material. Growth of mind is by process of successive generalizations, as knowledge of facts widens. Paul expressed an idea kindred to this when he spoke of "going from faith to faith." Not to discuss this somewhat metaphysical point to prolixity, a statement, merely, of one passage of the Lord's Prayer attests the justness of the criticism offered: "Forgive us our sins as we forgive those who sin against us." So it seems we are to engender forgiveness for ourselves by forgiving.

On the forenoon preceding the Sunday evening I occupied the pulpit at Monteagle, I went down to Sewanee, six miles away, and heard Dr. Hoffman, of New York, in the commencement sermon before that Episcopal University. There were ten Bishops and several other of the clergy of that church, and a vast assemblage of people. The paraphernalia and performances seemed theatrical; and I could not but say in my heart as they proceeded, Thank God for Methodism! Dr. Hoffman's discourse was about an average of that we read and hear regarding the unnecessary antagonisms of science and religion, in a style quite agreeable and impressive.

On Tuesday night following Dr. Lee, of Atlanta, whose place I had filled the Sunday before, met his appointment for a lecture before the institute at Monteagle. His theme was "Henry Grady," the lamented editor, patriot and humanitarian. The portraiture of the man was graphic, and in such terms of commendation as quickened desire for fuller acquaintance with his history and his literary productions. Dr. Lee's nomenclature is highly oratoric, his discourse of reason consecutive and sequential, and his ideals all accordant with the noblest, as pertaining to motive, conduct and character. I do not know that I have ever listened to an address excelling it in rhetorical excellence and judicious criticism. Were the Doctor endowed with oratorical power pari passu with his gifts of intellect and graces of speech, he would rank among the first who occupy the platform.

At Sewanee, on Wednesday, Mr. Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, delivered the commencement address before the graduates of the university. The audience was a large and brilliant one, and well did the speaker meet the requirements of the hour. Apparently about forty-five years of age, well-proportioned, perfectly natural and graceful in his bearing, with a countenance whose expression is a blending of intelligence, amiability and mirthfulness, he has no trouble in taking the mind of an audience, as it were, by the foretop, and leading to the fields and fountains whence the nurture and strengthening of his own intellectual manhood have been derived. There is a pleasing negligé—what approximates conversational abandon—with which he gathers in upon the springs of the theme of discourse; and throughout the entire discussion there is vibration and progression—movement onward in cumulative enthusiasm until there is completion of the lesson essayed to be propounded, with symmetrizing peroration, after the order of a cap-sheaf or crown, to what has been reared. Gleamings of wit and mirthfulness no wise detractive from the dignity and earnestness of his plea on behalf of highest conservation of personal character, were foil to any weariness or satiety that purely didactic deliverance might have engendered. Whilst there may not be claimed for him the specific gift which differentiates the orator, definitely and distinctively, from the numbers who orate, acceptably and instructively, to audiences, so closely do the modulations and intonations of his voice and the distinctness of his orthoepy approach the genuine oratorical chime, one hearing him is kept constantly in expectation that he will break forth in strain transporting, thrilling the inner, central region of his being. The disappointment arising from failure to fulfill such longing and expectation is almost, if not quite, compensated for by consciousness of invigoration and enrichment of mind, perforce of utterance, unmistakably sincere, compacting most pleasingly historic, poetic, critical and aphoristic measures of discourse so symmetrically proportioned as to be a unit of pressure upon the mind of the audience.

The plea of the gentleman was on behalf of the only redeeming, upbuilding motive that really humanizes individual character, so as to secure fraternity and fellowship worthy of beings created after the likeness of Jehovah. That motive is one which appears, in perspective defined, as all the more authoritative and prevailing from the dark background shading of sordidness—a sordidness which leads to simulation of virtues that are only evolved, genuinely and productively, out of heaven-attesting consecration to human weal. Greed for accumulation of money, lust for renown, ambition for official authority—these, and the like of them, were discovered as despicable in comparison of that ennobling principle briefly expressed in the precept, "As ye would have others do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

Mr. Watterson's very pronounced condemnation of the materialistic mammon-serving genius, so prevalent now in domination of the world of mind, was corroborative of what, in the peroration of Dr. Lee's address, he had emphasized most felicitously and effectively, namely: that it is in production of men—of characters compelling admiration and inspiring to noble endeavor after attainment in excellence—that a State or nation is really enriched, rather than in development of physical forces by which merely material prestige and power are secured. Dr. Lee's illustration of this in tangential touches of historic, national example, gave in concrete form what had abstractly seemed demonstrative, thus adding a genial, personal touch to his discussion that was most refreshing. One amply versed in illustrative historic incidents is qualified to lubricate the joints of an oration or essay by linking them in with philosophic speculation and logical endeavor on behalf of the cause he pleads. An audience is ever conciliated and made studious ingenuously of what is propounded when the speaker is personally lost sight of through manifest fact that he is eaten up with the zeal of that he urges, and that it is not himself, but his cause, that is oraculiar. Assertion of self and assertion of truth mark the distinction between speakers who repel and speakers who rivet and rule attention. Water is most relished when it gives no taste of the gourd.

On Sunday morning, the ninth, Bro. Ramsey, of the Memphis Conference, was substituted for Dr. Vincent, who failed to meet his appointment before the Montoagle Institute. His theme was Faith. He was practical and forceful in urging the essential condition of acceptable service and worship. At one point he seemed to advance contradictory statements. He said one might lack everything else except faith, and be accordant with God; and then he declared that faith could not be had without knowledge. Knowledge may be had without faith, but not faith without knowledge. The infelicity of every discussion of the subject of faith I've ever heard came of not defining the principle. When one is faithful—when he exercises faith—he does what he knows to be right; compliea with what he is certain obliges him. Faith is, microcosmically, all that character can unfold of grace and excellence. There was power in Bro. Ramsey's sermon; some passages most inspirative of desire and purpose to full consecration in service of God and the brotherhood. It was a pleasure to meet Bro. Ramsey, and also Bro. Standifer, who was in the audience. These with other Mississippians have been occasion of reminiscent meditations; for it was five miles north of Holly Springs several years of my boyhood were passed. Vegetation 'round about here reminds me much of that surrounding old Sylvestris, through which I hunted with old Watch, in company with my brother Ben's sons, and sometimes alone. The shadows of those old scenes augment their weight upon my soul as the evening of life approaches, and help me to weep as I trudge through or sit alone in this big forest that man had no hand in making. Forest trees seem to strike their roots into my heart. It is not so with orchard trees or vegetation of the vineyards or the gardens. And the creatures of the wild have a charm; there is a witchery of which they are robbed in the taming. JOSEPH B. COTTRELL.

Monteagle, Tenn., Aug. 10, 1891.

P. S.—Since mailing my letter of correspondence, I've had a talk with Bro. Ramsey, telling him of my criticism of the point in his sermon, touching Faith. He tells me I misapprehended him; that he said all else except that that comes of faith might be had by one and he be out of acceptance with God. So you will please add this note as a postscript to my letter, that the correction may be made.

J. B. C.

"Let Us Write It Down in Figures."

So says "J. M. B." in the ADVOCATE of Aug. 13 The wide-awake pastor of the wide-awake Rayne Memorial Church, doubtless, intended to give the figures, and has done so as far as he knows. Never having heretofore shown any very decided interest in the City Mission work, and never having gone to the front sufficiently to stand on the platform of our gospel wagon and proclaim the truth to the eager multitudes of the unchurched masses, and being merely a looker-on, yet possessed withal of a "critical" eye, it is not strange that, in essaying to state facts and figures in regard to that about which he knows so little, he should have fallen into error and made statements wide of the mark.

Though not a man with a hobby, as he protests in the outset, he nevertheless has an aim in view in his article and a theory to establish, and the facts and figures he gives and honestly believes to be true are well suited by contrast with certain other facts and figures stated by him to call attention to the fine feathers in the cap of achievement of the membership of the beautiful church on the avenue. Well, for one, I have no disposition to pull down any man or church, and I would not draw my pen to dim the lustre now flooding the brow of Rayne Memorial Church. Since, however, Dr. Beard has lugged the City Mission and its really glorious work into his innocent article on church extension (so men have been known to fix up a sermon to get off a telling illustration), we will exercise the inalienable right of an American citizen and examine the statements and figures submitted.

Speaking of the Lower Coast Mission, Dr. Beard says: "Through the labors of the present missionary there are the nuclei of Sunday-schools in some portions of that needy country; but without pine-board re-inforcement, they are likely to remain nuclei for all time, or until the same fate overtakes them as two years ago robbed the Felicity charge, in this city, of its twenty-year-old infant which it had neglected to house, and which imminently threatens Carondelet's aged protege on Claiborne avenue." We presume that the Doctor refers to the St. Mary's Market Mission School, that was established by Bro. Werlein when in charge of Felicity Street Church. I found Bro. C. B. Fee and his teachers doing excellent work at that point. One morning while worshipping in the tabernacle (our new church being unfinished), the Felicity people were asked to pay up the debt that had accumulated for the school. They did so promptly and cheerfully, and then all the mission workers agreed to get a place for our school higher up town. That school was not a "twenty-year-old infant," but had been in existence a few years only, and yet it was a success from first to last, having resulted in much good, in conversions and additions to the church and in the gracious development of those actively engaged in the work. That graceful and wise stoppage of the St. Mary's Market school was in 1887, and hence it is incorrect to say that "fate two years ago robbed the Felicity charge," etc. In passing, we submit that it must be news to the earnest down-town workers that fate "imminently threatens Carondelet's" young and vigorous "protege."

Speaking of the City Mission and the employment of the City Missionary, Bro. Beard inquires. "What has been the net gain to New Orleans Methodism of this outlay of money and toil," and says: "Let us write it down in figures. One Sunday-school discontinued and one inaugurated; or as, perhaps, it might be more intelligibly expressed, the Felicity hantling aforesaid transferred from an eligible point in an unevangelized quarter to a spot dangerously near one of our weak churches, and under the shadow of the leading Presbyterian Sunday-school mission of the city."

To show how greatly our Bro. Beard is in error, we need to give somewhat of the history of the City Mission. When I was on the New Orleans district, the City Mission was organized with James. R. Westerfield as chairman of out-door work. The first meeting was held on the ground fronting the depot in Gretna, and Rev. F. S. Parker, secretary of the mission, conducted the services, which were continued for some nights, and out of which the Methodist Sunday-school of Gretna was organized. That school was put in charge of Carondelet Street Church, and Dr. Carradine kept it supplied with a superintendent. Thus it was that things began to look up in Gretna, and the efforts of the committee of the Algiers Quarterly Conference, composed of Bros. Daniels, Werlein, Jamieson and others, together with the very efficient labors of Drs. Carter and Carradine, and the later splendid work of Rev. H. H. Ahrens, resulted finally in the present neat Gretna Methodist Church, dedicated a year or two since by Drs. Carter and Evans. The gospel wagon went from place to place, and hundreds and thousands were told of Christ, and, the Board of Managers requesting it, Bishop Key appointed a City Missionary to do the work of the mission.

The turn of the itinerant wheel had materially changed the state of things, and the City Missionary found himself hampered and hedged in a most wonderful manner; but notwithstanding his difficulties, he stood to his post and manfully and faithfully went on with the work, and a number of Sunday-schools were established and out-door preaching had during the warm months. The Claiborne school was the outcome of the open-air meetings; and so the Gretna, the Gouldsboro, the mission school now called Felicity Mission, the Moreau Street Mission, and another in the Third District, and several up in the Sixth District. It was the policy and practice of the City Mission to turn the schools over to the nearest Methodist Church. At the close of the year the Board of Directors unanimously endorsed the work of their missionary, and, at the same time, by reason of the obstacles in their way and beyond their control, unanimously refused to ask the Bishop to send them a missionary. The next Spring new officers were elected, and Rev. D. L. Mitchel, chosen then, is president still, for the City Mission has never surrendered its charter and has simply been in retirement. Nevertheless the fact remains, which Dr. Beard nor any other man can gainsay, that the following five mission schools (and the Methodists have no others in New Orleans) were established by the City Mission: Claiborne, Felicity, Moreau and Gouldsboro. That all the mission schools established by the City Mission did not continue to live is not to be charged to the mission, for they were turned over to others, and upon others lies the blame. Dr. Walker preached to good congregations at Annunciation Street Mission, which was turned over to Louisiana Avenue Church, and Bro. Campman for months conducted that school. Bro. Fee and myself and others had been looking about for a place for a Felicity Mission School, and, learning of the abandonment of their school by Louisiana Avenue Church, after a lapse of one or two Sabbaths, we took possession. All along that mission and school has had great success. Like all mission work, it has had its difficulties, but it has been a positive blessing to that neighborhood. It has never been overshadowed or injured by the Presbyterian school, and, the entire city being our parish, as Wesley's was the world, we have at no time felt that we intruded upon the rights of any denomination. As to harming Louisiana Avenue, we doubt not we have been of benefit to Bro. Wimberly's church, and his people, so far from being jealous, are our good friends. He has names upon his church book of those who were converted at our meetings. There have been bright conversions at our Felicity Mission, and a number have been added to Felicity's church-roll. A young lady was converted at one of those summer protracted meetings whose marriage I subsequently celebrated, and whom some months after I buried, by her dying request, from the altar of Felicity Church. Seldom in my ministry have I known of a more triumphant death than was hers. Rev. Thos. Carter and his consecrated band are doing noble work now at No. 700 Annunciation Street. The Clay Square open-air meetings yielded Felicity Church some choice members, and others of our churches have benefited by the City Mission work.

As to building at St. Mary's Market in preference to other points, anyone who knows anything of the neighborhood would be slow to give such advice; and as to putting a roof over our present school, there is no necessity, as we already have there an excellent building at cheap rent, a grand work is being done as things are, and, in the view of those having the matter in hand, the time has not arrived for building a new church. Something must be left to the suggestion of Providence, and, no doubt, God will in due time indicate when the work of building should begin. Having been pastor of a noble people for now nearly four years, this writer unhesitatingly affirms that when the time is ripe for it, Felicity Church will build a new church in some eligible locality. In doing so, she will, doubtless, be materially aided by the members of other Methodist Churches, as was the case with both Carrollton Church and Parker Chapel, and the new Felicity as well. I believe that the Methodists will yet make a grand rally and build and finish the Louisiana Avenue Church, and, without a dollar of debt upon it, dedicate it to God. That is the Methodist way, and we trust it will continue—they help each other, and help other Christians, too, whenever they can.

It happens, then, that after all Felicity Church never has had "a twenty-year-old infant" or "bantling," nor Carondelet an "aged protege," but that each has in active operation a vigorous mission, through which souls are being saved and Christ's cause built up. Another fact for all to remember is, that the City Mission is not to be written down as a failure when absolutely all that New Orleans Methodism can show in the way of mission schools is the direct outcome of its efforts. Certainly no one can object to Bro. Beard's plan, and we wonder that, since his "Roman matron's jewels" and "Jupiter's moons" have been housed and set off to themselves, he has not sought another eligible spot and built a house and drawn thereto a hundred street Arabs.

Let the Beard plan (we call it that for convenience) be pushed; but, surely, there is no need to condemn as "faulty" the methods of the City Mission, which are in perfect accord with those of the most successful mission and evangelistic organizations of the large cities of Europe and America. We were not startled by the expressions: "Combined skill and gallantry;" "having reached the top of the mountain, what could they do but descend?" "liquid treasure in a sieve;" "those zealous Boanerges, who prefer a skirmish line for advance, and snuff the battle across populous wastes that are quite as advantageous for retreat," etc. Oh, no, not startled, not in the least; for they are so like our brother, and have a sort of mellon sweetness about them, albeit they can have not the remotest application to the subject of church extension. Such pleasantries are harmless; but this writer must modestly assert that never before was he accused of being a man to "march up hill and down again," and he hardly thinks good Bro. Beard really believes that of him.

In conclusion, and in all love and charity, and praying God's choicest blessings upon all mission work of all denominations of Christians, we must emphatically state that Felicity Street Church is abundantly able to care for her mission, and that her people, having about them "the swing of victory," may still, as in the past, be relied upon, by the help of God, for a good report of work done, no matter what the odds against them.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 15, 1891.

"Achan in the Camp."

The young preacher's blue eyes flashed, his cheek grew pale and his voice trembled with earnestness as he said, "The discipline of the Church" (he said it with a capital C) "shall be maintained. While I am pastor its rules shall not be broken with impunity. We have fasted and prayed that God would pour out his Spirit upon us; we have exhorted and preached, but the blessing is withheld. Achan is in the camp." I knew, good, innocent man, that his thought was of two or three young girls and a lad or two that, rumor said, had attended a dance the previous week.

"Achan is in camp," I mused. "Well, perhaps so," and my thoughts recurred to something I had heard a few evenings before. Said a young man: "I was riding into the country this afternoon and overtook a negro going home from town. I asked him about his crop prospects. 'Oh, Lord,' said he, with a heavy sigh, 'if cotton is only eight cents a pound this fall, I don't know what will become of me. I am paying $1 60 a bushel for corn right now.' I thought," said the youth, "that his merchant must be a Jew, but he named Mr. B., a Methodist." The young man's father here said, thoughtfully, "I was at C.'s last fall," naming a firm of Christian merchants, "and they told me that when they made out the accounts of those they furnished at the end of the year, they always add ten per cent. to the total. Not ten per cent. a year, mind you," continued, "for some of the articles may have been bought only the previous day, and this in addition to the enormous profit, sometimes as much as 100 per cent., placed on the goods at the start, for of course there is risk in the furnishing business."

My mind still roved that Sabbath morn in the church, and I remembered the honest old scales that were in my pantry when I went to housekeeping and which fell into disrepute with me for a long time because they always declared that the two firms of Christian grocers with which I dealt (for I tried to follow the Discipline and prefer the brethren) gave short weight. I don't know that the scales would ever have regained their reputation, but I sent in haste one day for a pound of butter which the messenger got from a Hebrew merchant. I was so surprised by the quantity received that I thought there was a mistake and weighed it on the old scales. It brought them down in the old fashion. "I will try that again," I said, "perhaps the scales are not to fault." I did try it many times and on different articles. The packages from the Hebrew merchant were invariably good measure, pressed down, and almost as unvaryingly the old scale reiterated that the Christian merchants were doing what the Scripture says is abomination to the Lord. Understand, I do not claim this as a rule, but only say that such things are practiced by church members.

I recalled a time when a lady carrying a petition against license approached a member of her church and asked his signature. He took the paper, glanced at it, and said, with a cold sneer, as he handed it back, "It would not look well for me to sign this" (he was a real estate agent) "for I have the renting of seventeen saloons, fifteen of them for Mr. S. Mr. S. was a wealthy old man who had, a few weeks before, joined the church. The lady hastened to her pastor: "Did you know," she asked, "that Mr. S. rents fifteen stores for saloons?" The preacher turned pale with horror and almost fell backward as he gasped, "You don't say so!" "Yes," she said excitedly, "what will you do about it?" His eyes fell, and he answered, hesitatingly, "Well—I can't do anything now, but—if I had known it before he took him in—." And Mr. S. lived unreproved and died weighted with the rents of fifteen saloons and went whither?

I thought of a beautiful woman, a church member "in good standing," a mother of a lovely family, all in the Sunday-school, whose name as a partner is at the head of the advertisement of a large liquor house; of a brother who is loud in prayer at the meeting, but who can never keep from mixing his employer's cash in his pockets with his own until it is impossible to separate them. "Truly," I began to think, "the preacher is right. Achan is in the camp, but Achan is not the little, foolish boys and girls who dance sometimes."

I thought of a good brother, kind and earnest, whose livery stable is open on the Sabbath day; of a poor, ignorant widow with little children who prized her church membership but who, it is said, sold whisky in her little grocery on the country road. Perhaps if the preacher would tell them in plain language how wrong these things are, and enforce it by "thus saith the Lord," and the Bible truth bearing on the case, they might be reached and saved.

O, brothers of the ministry, I believe it is because of your own pure life that you are unsuspicious; you see only the surface, and think that dancing and worldly amusements are the sins that withhold the blessing from Israel; but, believe me, it is not so. The world sees deeper. Do you see the things I refer to do not exist in the church? They do, and more; there are church members who habitually buy lottery tickets, some who speculate in futures, some who rent houses for the vilest purposes. I have seen these iniquities, though not all in one church, in an experience neither long nor varied, and I dare to say that in the eyes of the Just and Holy God the sins of covetousness and dishonesty in the middle-aged and old are worse and more damaging than the frivolities indulged in for a brief space by the young and light-hearted. I have never danced, nor do I advocate or defend it, but I plead for the young that they may be tenderly dealt with. A few years more of life's cares and sorrows will make the heart so heavy that the steps can no longer dance. Then will they remember the words of Savior who said, "My burden is light," and the weary feet will begin to patiently follow him if you do not alienate the generous young hearts by harshness. But ere these evils do come, point them to the more excellent way, and paint its beauties in glowing colors, from a heart so filled with love for them, that the light feet will run to enter upon it and gladly walk it to its shining end.

A SISTER.

Sunday-School Lesson—Aug. 30.

CHRIST AT THE FEAST.

John vii, 31-44.

I. The circumstances of the visit; or when Christ came to the feast? The answer to this question is given in the earlier part of the chapter. Jesus went up to this feast secretly. He was working in Galilee during the time immediately preceding it, and his kinsfolk urged him to go to Judea in a public manner, and by revealing his power, to declare himself to the world. But this was not Christ's plan. "Our Lord foresaw that a public entry into Jerusalem would lead to commotion, and, as afterwards happened, might bring about his death. . . . Until he had accomplished what was given him to accomplish, he took such precautions for personal safety as a prudent man would. . . . For the apostles to have joined the crowd would have been unfavorable for the germination of the solemn thoughts of which our Lord had dropped the seed on his way from the Mount to Capernaum. By going up privately in the middle of the week, these dangers were avoided."—Bethune.

II. What Jesus did at the Feast. (a.) He began to teach openly in the temple: as a consequence, many of the people believed on him; but the Sanhedrim sent to arrest him because of his growing influence with the people. His attempt was, for some reason, unsuccessful; and Jesus uses the occasion to declare that their opportunities of hearing him were very limited; in a short time he would depart, and then they would seek for him everywhere, and be disappointed in their search. His saying causes them great bewilderment; they can not understand it.

(b.) He proclaims to the crowd his Gospel—"If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." He is the satisfaction of all the needs of the soul. Note the special adaptation of the thing to the moment. The feast of Tabernacles (Lev. xxiii.) commemorated the tent life of the wilderness; and it included a ceremonial of pouring out water before the Lord, in remembrance of the miraculous gift of water during their desert journeyings. Christ thus declares that he is the All-sufficient supply for human need; that whatever is necessary for man's deepest and real life is found in him. And not only this, but the faithful recipient of the blessing becomes a helper and succourer of others. "He who drinks of the Spiritual Rock becomes in turn a well a rock from within which the waters flow to slake the thirst of others."—Westcott.

III. The effect of this teaching. It divides men into two classes. Those who receive the word and believe in him, and those who allow any little difficulty to drive them into unbelief. And yet how easily this difficulty could have been met, if they had only made a little enquiry. (Comp. v. 42 with Luke ii, 4, etc.)

Do not men make similar objections now? "Are we to defer going to Christ to satisfy our spiritual thirst, in response to his loving call, until we have settled some miserable objection of this kind; or shall we yield to his power and grace and truth, and accept him—objections and all?"—Preacher's Magazine.

"Weak and weary," describes the condition of many people debilitated by the warm weather, by disease or overwork. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just the medicine needed to build up and strengthen the body, purify and quicken the sluggish blood, and restore the lost appetite.

Louisiana Notes.

Judge Wells, of Lake Charles, gathered 824 pears from one tree in his yard. The tree is the Leconte variety.

The government has finished the Boston levee, having built 400,000 cubic yards. It is situated in East Carroll Parish.

The British steamship Pathan came up to this port Aug. 12, having on board 2,000 tons of tea, the first of this season's crop. She left Kobe, Japan, May 27.

The city council of Alexandria has contracted for two artesian wells, with a daily capacity of 100,000 gallons each, for which the sum of $2,250 each is to be paid.

New Orleans has been chosen as the place of meeting for the next annual convention of the American Public Health Association, to be held some time next Spring.

The Planters' Cotton Seed Oil Mill Company, Limited, with a capital stock fixed at $100,000, has been organized at Alexandria. It is thought that the mill will be in operation within ninety days.

A new paper has been started in West Monroe. It is called The West Monroe Plow-Boy, edited by J. M. Rees. It is published in the interest of the laboring man, and is anti-Lottery.

The Clinton Brick and Tile Company have begun operation. It has a forty horse-power engine, and brick machines of 40,000 capacity per day, and will employ forty to fifty hands. The success of this business will encourage other manufactories.

There is talk that a new company will soon be organized for the purpose of building the Steele railroad. This will run from Arkansas City to Baton Rouge, via Vidalia. There is also a report that work on the New Orleans and Northwestern road will be resumed Sept. 1. This road runs from Natchez up through Rayville, Oak Ridge and Bastrop into Arkansas.

These items in regard to our city all, we trust, be acceptable to our readers.

The census bulletin gives the area covered by the city of New Orleans as 37 09 square miles, or 23,737.60 acres; population to square mile is 6,525.72, or 10.20 to the acre.

The approximate death-rate for the census year is 28.4, being third in twenty cities, Newark, N. J., having a rate of 29 2 and New York City 28.6.

New Orleans has a total of 625 miles of streets, 89 miles being paved. The average width of the streets is 60 feet and of the sidewalks 12 feet. Twenty-five miles of streets are lined with shade trees. These streets are illuminated by 858 gas lamps and 950 electric lights at an average annual cost of $171 317, or a cost of $50 for each gas lamp and $135 for each electric light, being 56 cents per year for each head of population. The waterworks system of New Orleans consists of one reservoir with capacity of 4,000 000 gallons; daily capacity of pumps 35 000,000 gallons; average daily consumption 7,500,000 gallons, or 31 gallons daily to each head of population. There are 75 miles of mains with 1,152 hydrants and 10,311 taps.

Police force of New Orleans contains 173 patrolmen and 93 officers and detectives. An average of 15,000 arrests are made annually. Average annual cost of force is $170 000. One patrolman is accredited to 3 61 miles of streets and makes an average of 86 71 arrests annually.

The fire department contains 27 officers and 817 men, who are supplied with 20 steam engines and hose carts, 5 hook and ladder trucks, 26 000 feet of hose and 69 horses. The fire alarm system consists of 175 miles of wire and 105 boxes. There is an average of 205 fires annually. Largest loss during past year was $51,000, and total loss for year $550,955, or $2 31 to each head of population. Annual cost of department is $160 000.

The World's Fair.

The South may claim, without prejudice, to have more than its share of the world's fair. The acknowledged beauty of the ladies of the South is due in a great degree to the use of Creole Female Tonic, the ladies' friend and favorite, and sure cure for all female ailments.

Mississippi Items.

A horticultural society has been organized at Corinth.

The new hotel in Natchez, costing about $100,000, will be opened early in September.

The assessed value of the personal property in Hinds county shows an increase over last year of $268,000.

Already the good people of Summit are preparing for the South Mississippi Fair, which is to be there Oct. 26.

The second annual meeting of the Grand Camp Confederate Veterans of Mississippi will be held at Natchez, Oct. 6.

An association of the sons and daughters of Confederate veterans has been organized among the young people of Natchez.

Hon. H. C. Niles, of Kosciusko, has been appointed by President Harrison Federal judge, to succeed Hon. R. A. Hill, who resigned.

Edwards is about completing a town hall and high school building. It is thirty five feet front and ninety feet deep, and two stories high.

Alex. Reeves, a prosperous colored farmer of Amite county, carried the first bale of cotton of this season to Summit. He sold it for ten cents a pound, and received a prize of ten dollars.

The inmates of the insane asylum at Jackson, in fifteen years, have consumed 1,037,805 pounds of fresh meat, costing $91 029 14. This is an average of one beef a day for fifteen years. The number of inmates averaged 470 a day.

Colonel Outlaw, the proprietor of Castalian Springs, has purchased from a Mr. Strong, of Texas, a flock of 400 Angora goats. These goats are said to be "white as snow, large and well built, with fleece twelve inches long, and their wool worth seventy cents per pound."

W. B. Hindman has sued the city of Vicksburg for $5,000 damages. In attempting to cross the street railroad his jumper capsized, and he was injured by the fall. That the rails on the streets in Vicksburg are obstructions to travel is evident to anyone who looks at them. If he gains his suit, the city will sue the railroad.

The Commercial Herald says:

Visitors from Cooper's Well report a great crowd there, and it is learned from the proprietors that the patronage of this famous resort is increasing at a handsome rate yearly, and exceeds all past expectations.

The Brookhaven Leader has these two items:

Hon. J. F. Sexton, of Copiah, says he raises two 500 pound bales of cotton to an acre, and 87 bushels of corn. That is good farming.

The next State Legislature, under the new Constitution, will consist of 133 representatives and forty-five senators. On a joint ballot ninety will be requisite to elect a United States senator.

Speaking of the cotton factory at Stonewall, the Clark county Times says:

This cotton factory is a great blessing to this county, and there should be enough of such factories in the South to manufacture all the cotton grown in the United States. If there was, there would be no necessity for a sub-treasury, and cotton growing would be a profitable business, for we could save bagging, ties, and compressing, which would amount to a quite a sum upon eight million bales of cotton.

In Memoriam.

MRS. JULIET WHITE HOLT.

Mrs. Juliet White Holt, widow of the late Dr. David Holt, of Woodville, Miss., died in Columbus, Miss., July 1, 1891. She was the daughter of James and Lucy White, and was born at Pinckneyville, Wilkinson county, Miss., Feb. 27, 1800. Her father, who came to Mississippi from Philadelphia in the beginning of the present century, was related to the illustrious Rev. Wm. White, one of the first three Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. Her maternal grandmother—Sarah Barton, of Pennsylvania—was closely related to Drs. Wm. P. C. and Benj. S. Barton, both of whom were famous botanists, authors of botanical treatises, and professors in the University of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Holt was a woman of quick wit and lively disposition, coupled with extreme modesty and refinement, the concentrated result of inherited intellectuality and careful culture. One of her charms was her dainty neatness and love for order.

She was reared a Methodist, but after her marriage she became a Presbyterian, joining the church of her husband. For more than half a century she and her noble husband stood as pillars in the Presbyterian Church of Woodville.

"Given to hospitality," their home in the suburbs of Woodville was ever open to all who came. Not only were friends welcomed and entertained therein, but it was a refuge for the homeless, a resting-place for the wayfarer, a home for the sick while being nursed back into health; and especially was it the abiding-place for ministers of the gospel.

For many years Mrs. Holt held official relations to the woman's branch of the American Bible Society. She was, in the highest sense, an exemplary and positive Christian.

As a wife, she became a real helpmeet to a man of wonderful activity, whose place was ever in the front rank of public enterprise and social progress. As a mother, she trained for usefulness a large family of sons and daughters, some of whom have attained distinction in the higher walks of life, and all of whom are valued and honored members of society. That she reared her sons amidst the temptations of town life, and yet reared no godless ones, is a fact that speaks volumes for the beautiful and positive Christianity of her teachings and her life. That she reared her daughters, surrounded by many of the follies and senseless fashions of society, and yet reared no frivolous ones, speaks volumes for her motherly tact, her wide culture, and her fine intellectual and moral strength.

Mrs. Juliet Holt was one of those noble, modest, deeply pious Southern ladies of the old type, great without ostentation; strong in heart and mind, without a tinge of masculinity; queenly, without royal pretensions—the most beautiful type of womanhood the world has ever produced.

Mrs. Holt grew old gracefully, and in her later years she appeared to those who knew her then as a sweet and beautiful saint, chastened by years of faithful service, tender and loving to all, gentle as angelhood, only waiting her translation to her proper sphere.

She had been gradually sinking since an attack of illness in the Spring. On Sunday, June 28, she did not waken as usual. Her physician was called, but saw no cause of alarm, as her sleep was natural and sweet, and her pulse normal. Thus she slept on until Wednesday morning, when the soft, sweet slumber passed quietly into that long, long sleep which only the angel of the resurrection can break. Once during this period she partly waked, and murmured:

"Tell me not in mournful numbers—
Life is but an empty dream."

What a magnificent commentary upon a life which had run its unchequered course for more than fourscore years! Her last word was "Julie," the name of a lovely daughter who had died in beautiful girlhood. Did the glorified "Julie" meet her on the threshold of heaven? "Julie" was the last utterance of her dying husband some years ago. Was the beautiful "Julie" the bright celestial commissioned to open the pearly portals for father and mother?

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and enres the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, August 27, 1891.

Briefs.

Our readers will see that we have made some changes in the "make-up" of the ADVOCATE. Our "Home Life," on the sixth page, appears in a new type, and, though smaller, we think none of our readers will fail to see that it is very plain reading. We have transferred "News from the Work" to the first page, for two reasons. There is nothing more interesting to Christians than the progress of the cause of Christ, and we let them see that first. Then, by putting the church news on the first page, we will be able to give each week the very latest that comes in. "Our Contributors" will be found on the second and third pages. The editorial department remains as it was. We trust these changes will be acceptable to all our readers. We are working only for their good.

According to the late census, there are in this country about 65,000,000 people. There are 151,281 churches, 103,203 ministers, and 21,757,071 communicants. That is, one-third of the people are church members. If that one-third would do its duty, how long would it be before that other two-thirds would be brought into church fellowship?

The whole Methodist world is now looking forward with eager anticipation to the coming Ecumenical Council of Methodism. It will be a notable Conference, in that it is the representative body of one of the largest religious denominations of Protestantism. It will represent a membership of over 5,000,000, and a constituency of at least 20,000,000. This body will convene in Washington City, Oct. 7, and hold its sessions until Oct. 20. The program has been arranged and subjects assigned to speakers and essayists. Doubtless an influence will go out from that Conference which will affect the fortunes of Methodism for generations to come. Perhaps you ought to visit that Conference!

The "Holy Coat of Treves" is now agitating all Catholic Europe. It is said that thousands upon thousands of pilgrims will journey to Treves to behold this sacred relic. This coat is said to be the one worn by the Savior throughout his passion, his trial before Pontius Pilate, and his journey to Calvary. It was obtained by the Empress Helena, the mother of Constantine, during her sojourn in Palestine, some time between the years 314 and 334, and was presented by her to the cathedral at Treves, which was at that time the capital of Belgic Gaul and the residence of the Roman emperors. It has been exhibited to the public only a few times during all these years. The thousands who have visited it before and who will visit it this year are evidences that nothing has a stronger hold upon the human mind than religious superstition.

Death of Rev. J. M. Gann.

The Rev. J. M. Gann, a superannuated member of the Mississippi Conference, fell asleep in Jesus, at his home in Poplarville, Miss., just at twelve o'clock on Friday night, Aug. 21. I suppose some one of Bro. Gann's old comrades will write a suitable obituary. We buried him at Poplarville. Peace to his ashes. We expect to meet him again. H. D. HOWELL.

Aug. 22, 1891.

There were six transfers from the Denver Conference last session. As there are only about twenty appointments, that looks a little ominous.

The Great Enemy.

We mean the great enemy to the church in this country; not only to the Methodist Church, but to the church of Christ in all its branches. There are very many enemies to the church, and all of them are big and strong and malignant. But we call attention in this brief article to "the greatest of these," the biggest, strongest and most malignant of them all—that is, the liquor traffic! The devil seems to have concentrated the accumulated wisdom and tact and skill of six thousand years' experience into this branch of human, or, rather, inhuman, trade. The saloon is Satan's latest epiphany. Here he exhibits himself, a tower of strength and malignancy, and defiantly throws down the gage of battle at the feet of the church of Jesus Christ.

One fact is to be noted and emphasized above all others, and that is, the saloon—this chief agency and representative of the devil in modern times—is no longer on the defensive. This mighty power, flinging its banner to the breeze, has marched out of its entrenchments and taken the open field! Wise and powerful and unscrupulous, it has marched and countermarched, from position to position, until at last it has taken its stand upon the battlefield of its own choosing. And here the church has to meet it and overcome it, or be overcome by it. It is the deliberate opinion of many thoughtful persons that the line of battle extends across the whole front of Christianity, and that no general forward movement can be made until that line is broken and hurled back upon its own supports in inextricable confusion. There can be no further general progress to Christianity in this country till this foe is put down. One of our ablest exchanges says:

We can expect no more great revivals in the church until we get rid of this awful evil. The responsibility for the continued existence of this colossal wrong rests upon the professing Christians of this land.

Sometimes we fear the church has not yet a clear idea of the gravity of the situation; does not see the constant and imminent danger threatened; is not using, upon every opportunity, voice and vote and influence to break down this power. The church seems slow, oh! so slow, to recognize the fact that this agency of Satan is doing more damage to souls and placing greater obstacles in the path of social and civil progress and limiting more the advance of Christianity than all other agencies combined. On this point hear one of our exchanges:

The licensed liquor traffic is, beyond all question, the worst hindrance to the eternal purpose of Christ to save the world, and the most powerful and unscrupulous enemy to the coming of his kingdom. For every young man that is saved at the church altar, at least fifteen are destroyed by the saloons. For every three dollars given to evangelizing work, thirty-nine dollars are spent for strong drink. For every missionary sent to Africa with the gospel, 30,000 gallons of New England rum are shipped over there to demoralize and debauch that heathen people, whose moral condition now is darker than their skins. And the effort is being made on the part of the government to aid United States brewers to extend their trade to the Central and South American states.

Such being the case—and everybody knows it to be so—how can Christian people divide and quarrel over minor matters? How can they rest at ease when such havoc is being wrought all around them? When this traffic is threatening the individual life and the home circle and the civil institutions and the integrity of the Republic itself, why can't the twenty millions of Christians in this land forget everything else, and come together and in their irresistible might overthrow and destroy this monster?

Mansfield College.

As the time is approaching for the opening of Mansfield College—Sept. 9—a word to those who contemplate sending their daughters will be in season. The first thing the president did, after the close of the last session, was to secure a good faculty of experienced teachers. Miss M. E. Hough, who taught with such great success last session, and endeared herself to pupils, patrons and friends, will probably return. Miss Stella Charles, from Kentucky, who is an accomplished Conservatory teacher, will be associated with Miss Hough. This brings the music department into great favor with patrons and friends. Miss L. E. Hays, a distinguished artist and portrait painter, will have charge of the art department. This is a guarantee that this department will measure up to what it was last session. Miss Julia Stiff, of Virginia, has charge of mathematics. Miss N. C. Padelford continues to hold her chair of English and Belles Lettres, which she has filled with such marked success for the last three years.

Other teachers will be announced later. The building has been repaired, kalsomined and painted, so that it will be very attractive. A large underground cistern will soon be completed and ready for use. Everything is being done to promote the health and comfort and welfare of students. The success of this institution for the last three years, and especially last year, has been very marked; so much so, that the friends of the institution are greatly encouraged to put money into the college to build the hall so greatly needed, and to give the college a liberal endowment. A gentleman said, the other day: "I like to see girls going to Mansfield, for I know it is the best place for them in the world, and it seems to me that a good providence follows a girl who goes there, judging by the success that attends the graduates; for if they teach, they make good teachers, and if they marry, they get good husbands: so you can hardly make a blunder if you take a Mansfield girl." A tree is known by its fruit. What I like most about the college is the decided religious tone of the school, not sectarianism; but the predominating influence promotes piety, perhaps, more marked than elsewhere. As preacher in charge, I know whereof I speak.

O, you Methodists, here is your school; concentrate your patronage on it; make it a grand and successful institution by sending your daughters where they will be properly educated under the best influences in the world. Some of you are making woful mistakes judging from where you are sending your daughters. Put them at Mansfield, under that noble faculty of Christian teachers, and you will be justly proud of your daughters. You can not find a safer place for your girls than you will find in this first-class institution that can not easily be excelled anywhere.

Let the Methodists of the State wake up to the interests of this, our college. The president is doing his utmost to bring up the school in all its departments, and he is succeeding, and his success in the future will be much greater, if the whole church and Conference, to whom it belongs, will sustain him and co-operate with him in his efforts. Every preacher's charge ought to be represented here by, at least, one pupil.

In this issue about 300 accessions to the church and about 250 conversions are reported. Send on the news, brethren, and be brief. We want facts rather more than reflections.

Letter from Bishop Wilson.

Miss Hughes, one of the missionaries in China of the Woman's Board, is by this time at her home in Mississippi. Her return is compelled by failure of health. It is possible that she may be called on by societies in connection with the Woman's Board to give her experience and observations in connection with woman's work in China in writing or speech. I write this to entreat that she may be let alone absolutely. Her only hope of recovery and return to the work she loves, and from which she is sorely missed, is to be found in complete rest. I need not detail her symptoms. It is sufficient to give the words of her physician, a thoroughly trained man, whose judgment is as sound as that of any to be found. He writes that "she should be, as far as possible, dissociated from everything connected with her work here (in China)." I am not a medical expert, but my judgment concurs entirely with this opinion as the result of personal observation and very careful examination of her condition.—She is too valuable a servant of the church in mission work to be lost through enthusiasm and imprudence. I hope that she will not be seen or heard in a woman's missionary meeting while she is in this country, and that she will not answer any letter touching mission work or affairs in China. If she is allowed to rest, she may be able to resume her work. If not, her case is hopeless. I speak advisedly, and trust that my words may be heeded in her own neighborhood and everywhere else. I do not want to lose her.

It saddens me to say that Mrs. Kate Hearn, wife of Rev. T. A. Hearn, of our China Mission, is dead. I married her to Bro. Hearn when I was in China last Fall. She was settled in her new life in Suchow before I left, and gave promise of great usefulness.

The disturbances which threatened our own, as well as other missions in China, have subsided. In God's gracious providence we have suffered no loss. Our missionaries in Suchow and other interior towns are at their posts, far more distressed by reason of the withdrawal of the supplies necessary for their work than by the riots. It is difficult to see how they can continue. Much of the work will have to be stopped—and that not new work, but part of the old, established and indispensable agencies of the mission. Unless there is speedy and generous response to the demand, we shall suffer heavy loss and be retarded in our operations for an indefinite period. It is painful to be deprived of the fruit of such labors and of the means of advance just at the moment when every indication is favorable to the success of our plans. May the Holy Spirit move the church to a truer appreciation of the value of the mission and to a larger liberality!

Yours truly,

A. W. WILSON.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 18, 1891.

The Second Blessing Theory.

BY "Z."

1. Methodists believe in perfect love, Christian perfection, scriptural holiness. In this we agree with the second blessing theorists. But the two disagree in the means employed and the methods adopted in its acquisition.

2. If we wrest scriptural texts from their connection, giving them a new meaning, one not intended by the Holy Spirit, there is no absurdity, no matter how preposterous, which can not find suitable scriptural support.

3. Conversion constitutes a renewal of the heart. It is either that, or nothing at all. If nothing at all, there can be no second blessing, inasmuch as there was no first. When born of God, man is a new creature; the Spirit bearing witness with our spirits that we are the children of God. Henceforth the hearts of the converted are temples of God, the domicile of the Holy Spirit.

4. When born of God it behooves us to go on to perfection. When conditions are favorable, the infant, in due time, becomes a man. Many struggles, tears and heart-aches between those two periods of life! No patent nutriment, no hot-bed growth can undo the laws of nature. In the kingdom of grace similar laws obtain.

5. I believe in the second blessing — as a numerical fact. Was converted at midnight. Tongue can not express my comfort and peace. In the morning at nine there was a love-feast. I told the people what the Lord had done for me. Friends shouted. I joined them in the shout. That was my second blessing. The following Sunday I was privileged to partake of the Holy Communion. Had neglected the Lord's table for years. Was overcome with joy. That was my third blessing. Since then — numberless have been my baptism from the Holy One.

6. Sometimes thought that parties, not conscientiously scrupulous in the choice of means, had adopted the second blessing theory from reasons of expediency. No doubt many imagine themselves converted, but deceive themselves. Their names are in the list of conversions reported during a revival superintended by some evangelist. How set them right? They are manifestly wrong. Induce them to seek the second blessing; finding that, they actually find the first. I hold that honesty is the best policy in religion no less than in business.

7. In our day, goods are largely sold by sample. On the same principle, any movement, religious or worldly, is judged by the characters of its promoters. This being true, I turn away—I will not say in disgust—from the second blessing theory. There are exceptions, but most Christians who submit to the manipulations of said theorists soon develop into self-complacent accusers of their brethren, giving way to unchristian censoriousness, not to say acrimony.

Dr. Weems, our missionary in Mexico, who has been recuperating his health in Alabama and Mississippi, spent last Sabbath in our city, en route to his work, accompanied by his wife and daughter. The Doctor spoke in the morning in Rayne Memorial Church, and at night in Carondelet Church. Both addresses were on his work, and were delivered to attentive audiences. Sister Weems also made an address in the evening in Rayne Memorial. A special collection resulted in nearly $200.

Bro. Weems and family left on Wednesday for the City of Mexico, accompanied by Miss Hardenia Norville, of Livingston, Ala., who goes out to study the Spanish language and engage in mission work. These missionaries carry with them the prayers and good wishes of New Orleans Methodism for their success in their difficult field.

Mississippi State Chautauqua.

Amid great enthusiasm a State Chautauqua was organized Aug. 22, 1891. The stockholders are among the most prominent men in Mississippi. The Board of Control has secured the use of the Crystal Springs Camp Ground. Everything will be put in first-class order, and no pains will be spared to make the institution one of the best. The officers elected are as follows: I. W. Cooper, president; Hon. Mr. Newton, first vice-president; Hon. Mr. Mims, second vice-president; Editor Abey, of the Crystal Springs Meteor, secretary; J. M. Eagan, treasurer; Hon. J. S. Sexton, attorney; Hon. John F. Sexton, chairman of the Board of Control.

Notes.

Georgia now has a law prohibiting the sale of liquor within three miles of any church or school, except in incorporated cities. This means practical prohibition for all the rural districts.

We have received the "advance sheets" of "Life, Wit and Wisdom of Spurgeon," by Rev. R. B. Cook, D. D. R. H. Woodward & Co., Baltimore, publishers. No biography can be more thrilling than that of the great London preacher. The volume will contain many selections from Mr. Spurgeon's popular writings, and will be illustrated. It will be ready in the early fall. Price, $1.50.

The editor of a church paper is the servant of the church, and the church has the right to work him for all the be is worth. But there are two ways only to get all out of him that is to be. One way is to treat him like some human people treat a faithful horse: prod him and thrash him and kick him and jerk him. This course will soon get out of him all that's in him. The other way is to encourage him by kindness and good treatment and gentle words, and to these he will respond with all his power. Which of these courses does a genuine Christian adopt?

Converting power is the attraction that draws churchward. The fact that men and women are changed by grace and made new creatures to the eye of the world will draw people to the place where that strange power was exercised and realized. A genuine revival of religion never failed to draw a crowd. When the first revival broke out in Jerusalem "the multitude came together" in wondering curiosity. That curiosity was soon changed to conviction of sin, and that resulted in penitence and that issued in a holy contagion—converting power by which three thousand souls were brought into the kingdom of Christ. The same means will effect the same thing now. If you want to "draw a crowd," get this converting power at work in your church. If you want to "hold a crowd," hold this converting power in your church.

It seems that some of the Wesleyan preachers are guilty of the same impropriety which we have noticed in every Conference which we have attended. The new president of the Wesleyan Conference, Dr. Stephenson, in his opening address, referred to this impropriety thus: "May I ask my brethren to make it a matter of duty to be present at the opening of the sessions? Many are lodging at a great distance, but I venture, in a brotherly spirit, to remind you, that if you can get here to talk outside, you might be here in time to pray inside, and I believe this would promote the advantage of our proceedings during the day." The preachers who are guilty of that abominable practice of talking outside during the opening services of a Conference session are not much qualified for the work of the session—that is, if praying qualifies for the work.

The Wesleyan Conference had a committee to enquire into the expediency of changing their method of stationing the preachers. The Wesleyans have a "Stationing Committee" which does this important work. There has grown up among them some dissatisfaction as to the way this committee does its work. Hence a committee was appointed last year to see if something could not be done to remedy the defects. While the committee did not recommend any change, it made some suggestive suggestions. One was this: The Stationing Committee should at all times recognize the principle that ministers exist for circuits, and not circuits for ministers. We are free to say that we have long considered the failure to recognize this principle as the cause of a great deal of the friction that attends many of the appointments made by our Bishops. When the appointing power thinks more of the man than of the work, then in many cases the church suffers.

We have received the program of the second Ecumenical Methodist Conference, to be held in Washington City, Oct. 7-20. This program contains the rules for the government of the Conference and the topics to be discussed, but not the names of the speakers and essayists. Our readers may be interested in reading the topics, and so we give them in the order in which they come: Ecumenical Methodism; The Christian Church—Its Essential Unity and Genuine Catholicity; The Church and Scientific Thought, The Church and her Agencies, Education, Romanism, Temperance, Social Problems, Missions, War and Peace, The Church and Public Morality, The Outlook. Doubtless there will be many things said that will be of great interest. The Evangelical Association, a branch of Methodism in this country, has withdrawn from participation in the Conference for the reason that the General Conference of that body will be in session at the time of holding of the Ecumenical Conference.

Sundries.

BY "GILDEROY."

The wise men say there is a terrible commotion on the surface of the sun at this time. Great black holes form in it large enough to hold our world, with room to spare; great columns of flame shoot up from it, and hot rocks, or balls of gas, fall back on it and stir the fires of that burning ball. I partly believe all this. Some god, good or bad, must be poking the central fire of the solar system. The sparks fly and the heat grows intense. The increased heat from God's fire-place reaches our corner of his hearth-stone. It is awfully hot in this corner. I am longing for the angel, good or bad, to lay down his poker and let the fire alone. Ten days in this sweltering heat takes all the life and sap out of me. My supply of energy is about exhausted. I sit, and sweat, and swelter, and mop my brow, and fight mosquitoes, and try to kill the plaguy flies. I can't read or write only in the top of the morning or down on the shank of the evening. It is too hot to sleep, or to rest anywhere, or anyway. Visiting is out of the question. The ladies do not want to see company. They dress to keep cool, as they ought to do. When I put on my collar, coat and vest the heat grows hotter mighty quick. Starched goods become sticky before one has gone ten rods.

I have managed to pull through "Credentials of the Gospels," by Rev. Joseph Agar Beet, of Wesleyan College, Richmond, England. This book makes me long to see his commentary on Romans, just out. Paul's letter to the Romans is the greatest letter ever written. I never tire reading it and all good expositions of it. I have also read "Judge Longstreet: A Life Sketch," by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. The Bishop has the gift of biography. In this case he had a great subject. This book is sketchy, scrappy, and good from end to end. It suits for hot weather; only that some of the "Georgia Scenes," as "Ned Brace," are too humorous and laughter-provoking for a hot day. Laughing that is laughing is hot, hard work. "Ned Brace" is a side-splitting story. I have gone pretty well through "Man, Money and the Bible," by Rev. John R. Allen, D. D., of Fort Worth, Texas. This is a thoughtful and thought-provoking book.

Bro. Allen, son of Rev. A. C. Allen, D.D., was born and born again and began his ministry in North Mississippi. He was converted and joined the church at Wesley Chapel, Houston circuit, in a meeting I held there. In less than two minutes after he arose from the altar to tell what God had done for his soul, I called on him to lead in prayer. What a prayer it was! Some five or six souls came out into the light while he prayed. It was a grand time, and a great meeting we had at that place. Bro. Allen, then a boy in his teens, was a good worker in the vineyard of the Lord from the word "go"—just as all young converts ought to be. He was the greatest bookworm for a boy I ever saw in my life. He took to books from his cradle up. He preached by first intention—started like he had been used to it. The fact is, he had been getting ready for it from his infancy. He held meetings and preached for the children when he was a little boy under ten years. It was play to the hearers, but serious, earnest work with the young preacher. I verily believe he was called to this work from childhood—before he was converted, as we use the term "converted." His life was as consistent and as orderly before his conversion as it was afterwards. Personal faith in Christ set him to active work for God. That was the only change I could see, and I knew him, as I knew the members of my own family, intimately. His book is an application of Bible principles to the present discussions and contests between labor and capital. Bro. Allen had a passion for political economy when he was a boy. The last two books named are published for their authors by our House at Nashville, Tenn.

So you see I am putting in part of my time during this hot weather in a profitable way. I am too dull to get up a lively sermon, and the weather is too dull for any other kind. "My drowsy powers, why sleep ye so?" would be appropriate, if not awakenlog, in most churches just now. The heat and the lamps make the night services a melting time. A pulpit is too high up in the hot air for me a season like this. I want to stand on the floor where I can have as good a chance at what fresh air there is as those who hear me. I do not like to be perched up in the top of the house, where I will have to live for an hour on air that has had all the life sucked out of it by a hundred or more other people. Stale air is the stalest of all stale things. Plenty of fresh air in a church on a hot day is a means of grace. Air that is not fresh, sweet and pure will stifle the congregation and the Word of God. Oh! that sextons would learn how to pull down the upper sash as well as to run up the lower one. But enough, if not too much, for a hot day. GILDEROY.

Personal and Otherwise.

We did our best to get in all the "News from the Work" this week, but had to leave out a few notes. How do you like our first page?

Rev. Joseph Emery has been elected president of Santa Rosa College. We suppose Dr. Kelley has declined.

Rev. C. McDonald, presiding elder of the Woodville district, will preach the opening sermon at Centenary College, Sept. 2.

Rev. R. A. Venable, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Memphis, has been elected president of Mississippi College, in place of Dr. W. S. Webb, resigned.

Rev. J. G. Sibley writes, Aug. 21: "My health is greatly improved and my charge is moving along nicely. The prospects are fine for a sweeping revival here in Summit."

Our missionary women and friends in Mississippi are respectfully referred to Bishop Wilson's exhortation to them in regard to Miss Hughes, now at home from China for rest and health.

The publisher's offer of the paper for the balance of the year should be pushed by all the preachers. But let them remember it is for cash only. He can't afford to give it so cheap on a credit.

Bishop Keener was in our office last week. His sojourn at his summer home at Ocean Springs has recuperated him greatly. We were glad to hear from him that his estimable wife has entirely recovered from her long indisposition.

Rev. P. H. Dieffenwierth, Largo, Fla., Aug. 17, writes a note in which he says: "My strength is diminishing. I endeavored to preach yesterday. If it were the Lord's will, I would sooner die in the church while preaching than to die in my bed."

President Hunnicutt, of Centenary College, gave us a call last week. He and wife have spent several weeks in Georgia, enjoying the fellowship of old friends and taking on strength and vigor for the duties of the next session of his admirable school, which begins Wednesday, Sept. 2.

We regret to see in the Alabama Advocate the death of Dr. W. C. McCoy announced. For four years Dr. McCoy edited the Alabama Advocate, and did it ably, being a versatile and forcible writer. He was also a preacher of much power. For many months he has suffered, and finally succumbed under the influence of a deadly disease. He was a very prominent man in his Conference.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTIONS.

A Sunday-school Convention composed of the preachers whose charges lie south of Lauderdale county, local preachers within the same boundaries, and of Sunday-school superintendents duly elected by our Quarterly Conferences, and one delegate from each Sunday-school, will be held at Shubuta, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 21 and 22. Rev. C. G. Andrews is requested to preside.

Another convention will be held at Lauderdale for the benefit of the pastoral charges north of Clarke county, the membership to be constituted as above, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 24 and 25. Rev. J. W. Chambers is requested to preside.

Experienced Sunday-school workers will be in attendance and interesting programs will be prepared and carried out. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

Who Will Help?

MR. EDITOR: You will permit me to call on the good people to assist Bro. A. B. Nicholson. It is known by your readers that Bro. Nicholson was hurt by a fall; confined to his bed and house about six months; his wife sick also. While he was sick, had a large trunk of books stolen, which he had bought to sell. He is still feeble; wife sick. The people all are indebted to Bro. Nicholson. No preacher has been more faithful. He being a great worker, an organizer, faithful, he was put on what we term "hard circuits;" hard work, little pay; he could not save money as some. It is credited to him that he has more spiritual children than any preacher in our Conference. Has been successful as a preacher, preaching grand sermons, though he never made one of them things (sermonettes) in his life, as he put it. This way of turning off from the old, sick, worn-out, faithful preacher of God. Never. Come, all good people; make his last day bright. Send to editor of ADVOCATE, or Rev. A. B. Nicholson, Hazlehurst, Miss.

HOME LIFE.

HOME AND FRIENDS.

There is a power to make each hour
As sweet as heaven designed it;
Nor need we roam, to bring it home,
Though few there be that find it.
We seek too high for things close by,
And lose what nature gave us;
For life hath here no charms so dear,
As home and friends around us.

We oft destroy the present joy,
And future hopes, nor praise them,
While flowers as sweet bloom at our feet,
If we'd but stoop to raise them.
For things so fair still greater are
When youth's bright spell hath bound us;
But soon we're taught that earth has naught
Like home and friends around us.

The friends that speed in time of need,
When hope's last reed is shaken,
Do show as still that, come what will,
We are not quite forsaken.
Though all were night, if but the light
From friendship's altar crowned us,
'Twould prove the bliss of earth was this—
Our home and friends around us.

—New York Ledger.

The Days to Come.

One of the most painful experiences of life is watching one whom we love, and who has always led a life of activity in the home and for the family, drop into a life of inactivity, not because of ill health, but because the sources of activity have been taken out of her life. Her children marry and establish homes of their own, and their mother, never having cultivated society for herself, though she encouraged her children in making the home the center of their social life, finds herself, when scarcely past middle life, without social interest, the children having drawn into their new home the social set they created in their old home.

The menage established to meet the social wants of the children is reduced to meet the new conditions, and the reason for the mother's activities is still further lessened, and life becomes less interesting. Lack of interest brings dullness, and dullness old age. Old age is an early visitor to the man and woman who no longer feels the need of his or her active participation in affairs.

There is a happy medium between Mrs. Jellyby and the woman who excludes all outside life from her interest. Surely, if a business or professional man needs a hobby outside of his business or profession in order to keep body and mind fresh and healthful, a mother who is also a housekeeper, with all the duties that both positions demand, stands in far greater need of some outside interest that will change the current of her thought. The women's clubs are a great benefit to woman for this reason. A woman need not belong to half a dozen, but it will make her more companionable to husband and children if she belongs to one. She need not attend every evening, nor should she feel that absence is an offense against duty.

As children grow into manhood and womanhood, the wise mother will develop a hobby that will furnish food for thought in the not far distant day when the home will be left without the young life which seems to give a reason for its being. Fancy work should not be allowed to become that hobby; the hobby should require thought more than muscles—a language, photography, some form of art, something that will keep the mind employed and furnish employment.

No woman in good health should ever find life dull or uninteresting, and she never will if she remember that old age is the one inheritance inseparable from life that passes middle age, and that all life that precedes it is given as a preparation for it.—Christian Union.

FARMERS' WIVES.—Too many farmers' wives are wearing out under the strain of mind and body. They say they can not find time to visit, to read, or to write; but if these same women would arrange their plans, instead of letting things go hit or miss, they would find time for some recreations.

Each day's work should be arranged the previous evening, and carried out next day as far as circumstances will permit.

To be an agreeable life-partner, the wife should not overtax herself. She should not give up all her former friends and live only in the atmosphere of home. To be able to do the best for her family and self, she needs to mingle with others outside of the home. The wife who rises early, and has her hands and mind both taxed, needs a short nap daily, and time for reading in the evening. Thus strength will be retained, the body better able to perform the labors, and the mind at ease, thus securing happiness in the home. Real troubles may find their way there; but we should not always be "meeting them half-way," and then we shall have reserved strength to bear them more bravely when they do come.

The wife should be ready to go with her husband to dine, or to a picnic now and then, or to spend a social evening out. We should keep ourselves interested in our friends while we work. With pleasant surroundings the life of a farmer's wife need not be the dull, monotonous one, which it is thought by so many to be.

Farmers' wives, see to it before it is too late. Learn to enjoy. Take time to admire the view which surrounds you. Enter into the pleasures of social life. Enjoy the luxuries of your home. Look upon employment as the best preventive of worry, and you will look better, live happier, and die better than some others whom fortune has smiled upon and the world deems more enviable.—Christian at Work.

THE ROYAL LAW.—It is the Apostle James who takes Christ's great commandment to love one's neighbor as one's self, and sets it forever before the Christian world as "the royal law." And is it not worthy of such characterization? Is it not truly a royal law? Think of the royal qualities of character which it involves—the nobility of soul, the breadth of interest and love, the graciousness, the willing acceptance of the representative nature of the individual, who merges self in the good of the many. It takes a regal soul to be thoroughly unselfish.

The first law which the young Christian should write upon the tables of his heart is this royal law of universal love. It is fundamental to Christian usefulness. Work for others without love for others, is like trying to start up a roomful of machinery with no fire under the engine-boiler. Love is the great motive of service. There is no good which you can not do for others, if you only love them deeply enough.

Put the royal law of love into your efforts to make the world better. Show every man, woman or child whom you are trying to help, that you come to them, not in any perfunctory or official way, but because your heart is really full of the divine fire of Christian love. Love means humility; be humble. Love means self-abnegation; be unselfish. Love means sympathy; be tender-hearted. If you have the true, outreaching spirit of Christian love to all, your work can not fail to be successful and blessed of God.—Zion's Herald.

"GET CLOSE."—Among old Hebraic proverbs is one not easily forgotten: "Get close to the seller of perfumes, if you want to be fragrant."

It is the whole creed and fulfillment of the Christian Church militant, in axium. Christ, who sells, without money or price, purity, clean hearts, eternity in the city of the jasper walls is called the Lily of the Valley and the Rose of Sharon—two of nature's chastest perfume-bearers; one whose stainless chalice is emblem of the pureness of Christ; the other typifying, by its warm color, his love. They accentuate his character, fragrant with all earth-known virtues and the mystical attributes of God.

"Get close." He permits you, entreats you; so close that you may cling to his hand all the way; so close that, from the fragrance of a loving, simple, daily living, men shall know that you have been with Christ.

Religion does not tarnish with use. It must not be folded in fine linen and laid away. That is burial—a dead religion. It is for constant, homely use; to go to church to worship God and unburden the soul; not merely to listen to the minister, and criticise and disparage his worth, or his ability, or his lovableness as a man, but to worship with reverent eyelids that God whose anointed minister the man is.

Religion can not wear out; true religion. Its source is exhaustless. It simplifies the cowl, dignifies the homespun. It is for all; sweet-tongued, sweet-spirited, full of the tenderness of that charity that beareth another's burdens, that hopeth and believeth and endureth all things.

"Get close to the seller of perfumes if you want to be fragrant."—Western Christian Advocate.

THE LITTLE CHILDREN THAT ARE GONE.—Why do they come, these little ones that enter our homes by the gateway of suffering, and that linger with us a few months, uttering no words, smiling in a mysterious silence, yet speaking eloquently all the time of the purity and sweetness of heaven? Why must they open the tenderest fountains of our natures only to leave them so soon, choked with the bitter tears of loss? It is impossible wholly to answer such questions of the tortured heart, but one can say, in general, that these little temporary wanderers from a celestial home come and go because of the great love of God. It is an inestimable blessing to have been parent of a child that has the stamp of heaven upon its brow, to hold it in one's arms, to minister to it, to gaze fondly down into the little upturned face, and to rejoice in the unsullied beauty of its smiles, and then to give it back to God at his call, with the thought that in heaven, as upon earth, it is still our own child, a member of the household, still to be counted always as one of the children whom God hath given us. Such a love chastens and sanctifies the hearts of the father and mother, carries them out beyond time and sense, and gives them a hold upon the unseen. As things of great value always cost, it is worth all the sorrow to have known this holy affection, and to have this treasure in heaven.—Chicago Advance.

MAKING HOME A SCHOOL.—Make home an institution of learning. It is the cheapest school you can find. Provide books for the centre-table and for the library of the family. What is learned at home from good books will not have to be learned abroad. See that all the younger children attend the best schools, and interest yourself in their studies. If they have the taste for thorough cultivation, but not the means to pursue it, if possible provide for a higher education. Daniel Webster taught at the intervals of his college course to aid an elder brother in the pursuit of a classical education, and a volume of his works is dedicated to the daughter of that brother, who early closed a brilliant career. Feel that an ignorant brother or sister will be a disgrace to your family, and trust not to the casual influence of the press, existing institutions and the kind offices of strangers. If the family becomes, as it may be, an institution of learning, the whole family will be educated.

Do not think of finishing your education. Learn as long as you live. Keep up habits of study, and, above all, remember that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and that the Holy Scriptures are able to make men wise unto salvation.—Exchange.

From Father De Smet, the Great Indian Missionary:

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 9, 1872.—Messrs. J. & C. Maguire: No remedy can be more effectual for complaints of the bowels, such as Cholera, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, etc., than Maguire's Benne Plant. I have always found it such.

P. J. DE SMET, S. J.

WHAT TO DO WITH A BAD TEMPER.—Starve it. Give it nothing to feed on. When something tempts you to grow angry, do not yield to the temptation. It may for a minute or two be difficult to control yourself; but try it. Force yourself to do nothing, to say nothing, and the rising temper will be forced to go down, because it has nothing to hold it up. The person who can and does control tongue, hand, heart in the face of great provocation is a hero. The world may not own him or her as such, but God does. The Bible says that he that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city.

What is gained by yielding to temper? For a moment there is a feeling of relief; but soon comes a sense of sorrow and shame, with a wish that the temper had been controlled. Friends are separated by a bad temper, trouble is caused by it, and pain is given to others as well as self. That pain too often lasts for days, even years—sometimes for life. An outburst of temper is like the bursting of a steam boiler; it is impossible to tell before what will be the result. The evil done may never be remedied. Starve your temper. It is not worth keeping alive. Let it die!—Selected.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

WHAT A BOY CAN DO.

These are some of the things that a boy can do:
He can whistle so loud that the air turns blue;
He can make all sounds of beast and bird,
And a thousand noises never heard.

He can crow or cackle, or he can cleck
As well as a rooster, hen, or duck;
He can bark like a dog, he can low like a cow,
And a cat, itself, can't beat his "me-ow."

He has sounds that are ruffled, striped and plain,
He can thunder by as a railway train,
Stop at the stations a breath, and then
Apply the steam and be off again.

He has all his powers in such command
He can turn right into a full brass band,
With all of the instruments ever played,
As he makes of himself a street parade.

You can tell that a boy is very ill
If he's wide awake and keeping still;
But earth would be—God bless their noise!—
A dull old place if there were no boys.

MR. EDITOR: This is my second letter to the ADVOCATE. I did not see the other one in print, so I thought I would write again. I am a little girl nine years old. My papa is station agent at this place. My mamma has been sick a long time, but I know she will get well, for I read to the Bible, last night, where Christ told his disciples that whatsoever they asked for in faith it would be given unto them. My papa and I went to the city not long ago. We visited the ADVOCATE office, and Bro. Mitchel gave me The Little Worker for a birthday present. I want to tell the little cousins I saw that horrible waste-basket. Hoping to see this letter in print, I will close. Your little friend, Stirring Boys.

Children of force, vitality and individuality will quarrel more or less in spite of everything. Grown people possessing these qualities do so. The aggressive man was an aggressive boy; the enterprising, energetic man was an enterprising, restless boy, often a very uncomfortable boy to get along with. Selfishness properly regulated is a very necessary part of the successful individual. Sensitiveness and impatience are by no means inconsistent with a fine and noble character.

There is not a mother alive to the interest of her children and her own responsibilities that can help exclaiming: Who is sufficient for these things? But when we have done our best the wisest thing we can do is to leave events with God, and not cripple our energies nor waste our time in the contemplation of our own inefficiency and the weight of responsibility resting on us. When we have done all we can to form right habits in our children and correct their faults they leave us, and the world takes them in hand. The impatient man finds that he must control his temper and repress his hasty words, or he loses by it; the careless man finds that to succeed he must be careful; the arrogant man is taught by snubs to temper his arrogance with civility; the dishonest man finds that "honesty is the best policy," though he may not reduce the maxim to practice in his own life.

When we have implanted an earnest desire in the hearts of our children to grow every day more and more true; when we have kindled within them the fires of earnest and unquenchable aspiration toward whatever dignifies and exalts human character; when we have given them an habitual impulse upward and forward, we have done well by them. The heaven once hidden in their measures of meal will work till the whole lump is leavened. It takes God himself, not to speak irreverently, ages to make such a world as this, ages more to bring the human race to its present state of improvement. He bears with criminal and human hyenas, and waits for the good to triumph over the evil. Can not we wait for our children to mature into a ripened manhood and womanhood?—Golden Rule.

GOOD SERMONS FOR CHILDREN.—Most boys and girls do not like sermons; they say they are too long for their highnesses. Perhaps they may like these short sermons. They will give food to think over, and must not be read too hastily. A Swedish boy fell out of the window and was badly hurt; but with clinched lips he kept back the cry of pain. The king, Gustavus Adolphus, who saw him fall, prophesied that the boy would make a man for an emergency. And so he did, for he became the famous General Baur. A boy used to crush the flowers to get their color, and painted the white side of his father's cottage in Tyrol with all sorts of pictures, which the mountaineers gazed at as wonderful. He was the great artist Titian. An old painter watched a little fellow who amused himself making drawings of his pot and brushes, easel and stool, and said, "That boy will beat me one day." So he did, for he was Michael Angelo. A German boy was reading a blood-and thunder novel. Right in the midst of it, he said to himself, "Now; this will never do. I get too much excited over it. I can't study so well after it. So here goes!" and he flung the book into the river. He was Richter, the great German philosopher. Do you know what these little sermons mean? Why, simply this, that in boyhood and girlhood are shown the traits for good or evil that make man or woman good or not.—Selected.

A five-year-old boy had been spending the afternoon at the home of one of his playmates. The little fellow came home full of stories about Jennie's wonderful nurse, who, it appeared, had said many curious things in the afternoon. "Well, well," said the boy's father at last, "what is the nurse—French, German, or what?" "I don't know," answered Harry, "but I guess she must be broken English; it sounded like that."—Evangelist.

John was building a chicken-coop, while little Budge stood by looking on. John bruised his thumb, and exclaimed: "Oh, gracious!" "What makes you say that?" asked Budge. "What should I say?" retorted John, for his thumb ached. "Well," said Budge, after reflecting a little, "you might say the 'mandments."—Exchange.

Pupils who learn "by ear," without thought as to the meaning of things, contrive to afford a good deal of amusement to their teachers. Recently a teacher in a grammar school asked one of her boys: "What is the meaning of 'topaz?'" "A topaz," said the boy, "is where the mules walk when they are drawing a canal-boat."

SCIENTIFIC.

The Pioneer of the Future Ship.

The vessel of aluminium, the next great revolutionizer of commerce, of which we had thought we were as yet but dreaming, has come. It is small in its first form, being twenty feet long, with a beam of five feet. It is moved by a naptha motor of two-horse power; but hull, machinery, and screw have been made from that almost magical "metal of the future," which in strength and lightness is as superior to steel as Hercules was to the earth-born Antæus. The first venture to realize the vision that has been flittering before the shipbuilder's mind since the processes of science have been steadily drawing forth this omnipresent, but evasive, metal with greater and greater ease, was built at Zurich, for an exhibition to be held in Frankfort, and it was successful on its trial trip. Such is the report of our esteemed and trustworthy contemporary, Iron.

The formula for computing the time when this aluminium creation shall have grown into the full size of an ocean-going steamer is simple, though somewhat vague in its factors; but it points to the certainty of such a result. The aluminium ship offers such advantages that it can be built with profit even at an immense advance in cost over one of steel. So when the price of the white metal, which is constantly hurrying downward, falls within the limit involved in the very high figure that may be considered admissible for building a great boat at it, the new craft will appear, and it will make five days across the ocean seem slow.

How soon will that be? Little pioneers like the Zurich craft do not come out nowadays without giving an immediate and powerful impetus to the movement they chance to represent. Improvement is quicker to start and then goes with a more tremendous rush than ever before in the history of the world. Aluminium is so lasting, and the pressure to obtain the peerless prize of getting it cheaply is so strong and ceaseless, that it would not be to forecast an expectation were we to see the full development of aluminium, or of some almost as revolutionary alloy of it, accomplished on the sea before the Zurich naptha launch goes out of service.—New York Sun.

INTERESTING DISCOVERY IN EGYPT.—The result of the recent explorations near the Temple of Queen Hatasu, at Thebes, is of a character to arouse the keenest interest of all students of Egyptology. Indeed, it is one of the most important and remarkable "finds" ever made in Egypt.

The Temple of Queen Hatasu stands at the head of a bay on the river bank, close under a steep bluff of limestone. Near this temple is a shaft, descending through the solid rock about fifteen yards, and out of this shaft have been hoisted 160 mummies. Their cases and wrappings were painted at least 3,000 years ago, yet the colors are as brilliant as when first laid on. The bodies are chiefly those of male and female priests, and of members of the royal family. What makes this find of special interest and value, is the fact that it is an entirely new one. These mummies have remained undisturbed since the day when they were first laid away in their rocky chambers. What wealth of historic information may be gleaned from them and from the jewels and manuscripts found among their wrappings! The number of manuscripts is great; for not only are there many within the mummy cases, but many others have been found in the tombs laid upon or among the coffins. It is believed that these were not placed there at the same time as the mummies, but were thus hidden at a later day by the priests who possessed the secret of the tombs, to save them from the thieving hands of some invaders of the land. Indeed, it is suspected that the entire tomb was not originally intended for that purpose, but that the mummies were removed hither from the temples, where they were originally placed, to save them from spoliation.

RESULTS FROM AN INVENTION.—Dr. Lardner, writing of the steam engine, said: "To enumerate its present effects would be to count almost every comfort and every luxury of life. It has increased the sum of human happiness, not only by calling new pleasures into existence, but by so cheapening former enjoyments as to render them attainable by those who before could never have hoped to share them. The surface of the land and the face of the waters are traversed with equal facility by its power and by thus stimulating and facilitating the intercourse of nation with nation, and the commerce of people with people, it has knit together remote countries by bonds of amity not likely to be broken. Streams of knowledge and information are kept flowing between distant centers of population, those more advanced diffusing civilization and improvement among those that are more backward. The press itself, to which mankind owes, in so large a degree, the rapidity of its improvement in modern times, has had its power and influence increased in a manifold ratio by its union with the steam engine. It is thus that literature is cheapened, and, by being cheapened, diffused; it is thus that reason has taken the place of force and the pen has superseded the sword; it is thus that war has almost ceased upon the earth, and that the differences which inevitably arise between people and people are for the most part adjusted by peaceful negotiation."—Scientific American.

SIRIUS.—Sirius, because of its great brilliancy, may no doubt be supposed to be the nearest of the stars. Although it is not the nearest, yet it is among the nearest. We doubt if we can give a very distinct impression of how far Sirius is away; but let us see. From here to the sun is about ninty-three million miles. If we could travel toward the sun at the highest speed of an express train—say, at the rate of sixty miles an hour—without stopping day or night, and bearing with us a charm against old age, we should reach our destination in about one hundred and sixty years. Now, the distance to Sirius, according to the latest estimates, is fully six hundred thousand times the distance to the sun. Express train speed would hardly suit us on a trip to that star. Suppose that we were to travel with the enormous speed of light, which reaches us from the sun in a little over eight minutes. We would hardly care to travel faster than that; but even at this inconceivable rate, it would take us ten years to reach our journey's end, and alight upon Sirius. And what should we find when we reached our journey's end, and, indeed, long before we reached it? Not a star, as you can easily imagine, but a sun, and a very enormous sun, too. The exact size of Sirius is not easily determined; but in all probability it is a stupendous fiery globe, having a diameter six, or possibly, eight or ten times that of our own sun.—Selected.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affection. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hafflefinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

Another Answer.

Not as a solution of the question, "Can it be cured?" asked in the issue of July 16, but as connected with the subject discussed under that head, I offer a few thoughts that have long since matured in my own mind. In the first place, preaching is God's method of saving the world—so declared in his Holy Word; while the Sunday-school is only man's invention, of recent date, to supply a present want. If children were as diligently instructed at home, in Scripture truth, as God has commanded they should be, there would be no necessity for Sunday-schools at all. There is no divine command for them. The church got along nearly eighteen hundred years without them, and had they been a necessary part of the church, there would have been a divine command for them. There is a special command for the diligent instruction of children in the home, in God's holy ways, which, if faithfully obeyed, would, in a large measure, do away with the necessity for Sunday-schools. They, doubtless, serve a good purpose, and I do not wish to be understood as opposing them; but their present necessity is largely due to the shameful neglect of parental Christian training of children at home.

The public worship and preaching of the Word is of divine origin, and if a choice between this and the Sunday-school was forced upon me, as a means of converting my child, I would certainly choose the former.

Another important consideration is, that Sunday-schools, oftentimes for lack of better, employ notoriously ungodly and irreligious teachers, whose teaching and influence for good, even as such teachers, can not be compared to that of a faithful man of God (as all preachers are supposed to be). Let parents think of that fact. For no man can teach a child to be any more pious than he himself is.

The Sunday-morning service, immediately following that of the Sunday-school, is too long for the patience of a child, and both should not be required of it. What arrangement could be made, so that children could have the benefit of both, I can not tell; but by all means have the children at public worship.

J. W. L.

Jackson, Miss. Aug. 18, 1891.

Another Remedy.

The Sunday-school is an ordinance of the church; the church is of God. Attendance upon the ordinances of God and of the church is enjoined upon all the members by the General Rules and the Form of Recognition. If the duty of attending upon "the ministry of the Word, either read or expounded," and of "searching the Scriptures," does not include the work of the Sunday-school, as teacher or scholar, we have no method of giving the needed help in the study of the Scriptures. Let all the members of the church be taught that it is their duty to attend the Sunday-school and take a part in it. It is more consistent with reason and religion to expect this of grown people than to expect children to attend the Sunday-school and preaching, both without requiring it of church members. Do this, and the children will hear preaching. J. W. SANDELL.

Two Questions.

Ques. 1. When one or more members is under report of immoral conduct, and the investigating committee can not find sufficient evidence to get a hill of charges, yet rumor is so great that it causes a dead-look in the church, what is the proper course for the pastor to pursue?

Ques. 2. If one or more members is under report of immoral conduct, and they agree to abide by the voice of the church without a trial, has anyone of them the right to withdraw his agreement and demand a trial in the church?

J. B. HOWELL.

Ans. 1. Appoint a new committee to investigate the rumor afresh.

Ans. 2. That would be a curious agreement to make; but, we suppose if made, it should be carried out. The fifteenth Psalm settles the matter of agreements.

What is lacking is truth and confidence. If there were absolute truth on the one hand and absolute confidence on the other, it wouldn't be necessary for the makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy to back up a plain statement of fact by a $500 guarantee. They say—"If we can't cure you (make it personal, please) of catarrh in the head, in any form or stage, we'll pay you $500 for your trouble in making the trial." "An advertising fake," you say. Funny, isn't it, how some people prefer sickness to health when the remedy is positive and the guarantee absolute. Wise men don't put money back of "fakes." And "faking" doesn't pay.

Magical little granules—those tiny, sugar-coated Pellets of Dr. Pierce—scarcely larger than mustard seeds, yet powerful to cure—active, yet mild in operation. The best Liver Pill ever invented. Cures sick headache, dizziness, constipation. One a dose.

An Enquiry.

MR. EDITOR: Is it true that the "Acts of the Apostles" is the only book in God's Word that teaches us how to be saved?

This is a doctrine I hear preached often from the pulpit. I heard, not long since, a minister say, "We are not instructed how to be saved only in Acts." Is this the doctrine of the Scriptures, or is it some new dogma? What about Mark xvi, 16; Eph. ii, 8; John iii, 18; Luke vii, 50; Rom. x, 13; Luke viii, 12, and many more passages? Of course, Acts tell us how to be saved; but if the rest of the New Testament is silent on this important subject, and does not instruct us in holiness and point out the road to heaven, what profit are we to derive from it?

I ask these questions not only for my own good, but for the benefit of others. J. D. E.

[We answer the question by asking, If we had nothing but "The Acts of the Apostles," how would the case stand?—EDITOR.]

OBITUARIES.

MAGRUDER—HEMAN BANGS MAGRUDER, son of Prof. W. H. N. and Mary Bangs Magruder, was born at Centenary College, near Brandon, Miss., Sept. 27, 1841, and died in San Antonio, Texas, Aug 7, 1891; so that he was nearly forty-seven years of age.

Like all Professor Magruder's children, he received a superb education, being graduated with distinction from the Southern University, at Greensboro, Ala. During the war he served in the Signal Corps, and won fresh laurels in that difficult and dangerous field. After the close of that memorable struggle he engaged in the practice of law in New Orleans. The writer married him to Miss Hattie Fuqua, the oldest daughter of Hon. James O. Fuqua, of Baton Rouge, and from this union there came three children, who with the stricken wife are left. He remained several years in New Orleans in the practice of his profession in partnership with F. D. Richardson, Esq. His health breaking down, he sought the genial climate of Southern Texas, and located in San Antonio, where he pursued his calling. During the last few years he has been an editorial writer for the San Antonio Daily Express. Of his work in that connection that paper says, "his work has been of the very highest order of merit," and adds:

He was a man of unflagging industry and courage. To a ripe knowledge of men and affairs and a thorough classical education he joined a singular facility of composition and a singularly broad comprehension of State and national issues. He was regarded as one of the most valuable members of the staff, and all who knew him part from him with regret.

Unfortunate associations for a time drew him into practices that caused pain and sorrow to his friends; but, as the end of his life came into view, the home teaching and the prayers of parents and grandparents and Christian friends asserted their power, and he died trusting in the Savior of sinners. The writer knew him well, esteemed him for his worth, sorrowed over his errors, rejoiced to hear of his recovery to the faith, and expresses with unfeigned sincerity his sympathy with the bereaved ones. May God temper this blast to the good of the stricken! C. W. CARTER.

RAPE—Mrs. ANNIE RAPE (nee Hancock), wife of A. S. Rape, was born in Lancaster district, S. C., Nov. 24, 1813, and died in Jackson parish, La., May 2, 1891. Sister Rape professed religion in early life and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she lived an exemplary Christian life.

With Sister Rape old age was beautiful, full of kindly deeds and good works, mellow and fragrant with the ripe fruitage of matured grace and Christian virtues. She walked in the path of the just, and the light of her Christian experience shone brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. No wonder she was ready when the summons came! When Jesus called, she was ready to lay aside the weapons of warfare and go home, ready to lay down the cross and take up the crown, ready to quit toiling in the vineyard and go home to rest. God favored her. Her last illness was not protracted; only a congestive chill, and her pure spirit went home. The writer was her pastor in 1889, and oft did I hear her testify that the Lord was precious to her soul, and she smiled to her son a few days before her death that she was ready to go at any time.

Sister Rape was the mother of six children—four of whom with her husband preceded her to the better land. May God sanctify her death to the good of those still living, and may they follow her as she followed Christ!

C. F. STAPLES.

COBB—Mrs. CELIA COBB died at her home in Franklin, Miss., March 18, 1891. Sister Cobb was born in South Carolina, June 27, 1802. She moved to this State in early childhood and spent a long, useful life in the service of the Master. She joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and was an earnest Christian worker up to her death—a period of nearly sixty years.

Sister Cobb's husband, Bro. James Cobb, was born Aug. 14, 1797, and passed peacefully to his reward April 29, 1874. He was a Holy Ghost Methodist and rejoiced in the hope of the glory to come. He and his wife walked with Christ continually; carrying their religion into their home and business.

Thus passed to rest two faithful servants of God. And though they are dead in the flesh, they "yet speaketh," for one by one their children are being gathered into the kingdom of Christ—that righteousness, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost. E. A. FLOWERS,
CHAS. W. CRISLER.

BAYS—ARABELLA BAYS (nee McQuaig) was born in Marion district, S. C., Aug. 21, 1818, and died in Wayne county, Miss., Jan. 21, 1891.

Sister Bays was an exemplary member of the M. E. Church, South, fifty years. She loved God and loved his church and the ordinances of his house; ready to help in every good work; of a kind disposition. She was always a welcome guest to the sick and suffering; but she rests from her labors; her record is on high. Her life, being hid with Christ in God here, will appear with him in glory. L. P. MEADOR, Pastor.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

A Superior Home Training-School.

Speaking of Prof. Emery's school, hear what Bishop J. C. Keener and Col. W. R. Stuart wrote the president of Centenary College.

"I write to strengthen the application of Prof. Emery. He has been teaching for some time, has good credentials and is a thorough Methodist. He has been for several years principal of a Mississippi high school (Yazoo City). His family are delightful."—J. C. Keener.

"It gives me pleasure to say to you what Prof. Jones, of Oxford, said to me six years ago. He said, 'The young men sent to the University of Mississippi from Prof. Emery's school were the best prepared and entered the college more easily than from any other school.'"—W. R. Stuart.

The above extracts from private letters are published by permission of the writers. For further information see advertisement elsewhere, and address,

Centenary Female College.

The following are some extracts from letters endorsing Centenary Female College:

"There is no college to which I would commit my daughter with more confidence than to Centenary. Your curriculum is thorough, your faculty complete, and, above all, the home comforts given our daughters there commend the college to the young ladies themselves."—Rev. Sam P. Jones (Evangelist).

"In Centenary, our daughters of the South will find one of the best colleges in America. I have been among you, and remained with you, and I know whereof I affirm."—T. T. Fishburn (Banker), Roanoke, Va.

"The place may justly be called a well-appointed home for those sheltered within its walls. The rule of work is thoroughness. Having been a patron of the college, I can cordially testify of its high character."—Mrs. M. E. Riggs, McLendon, Texas.

"Indeed, it is the ideal college within the range of my observation."—John B. Boyd, (Merchant), Sonoraville, Ga."

"It is just such an institution as all sensible parents desire for the education of their daughters."—Henderson H. Benson (Pres. Bank), Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Home comforts unexcelled by any school of my knowledge."—Rev. J. A. Jones, Vicksburg, Miss. (Pastor Pres. Church.)

An Excellent Training-School.

Students Admitted to the Leading Universities Without Examination.

On recommendation of the Principal, graduates and proficients of The University School, Monticello, Ark., are admitted to the higher classes of the University of Tennessee, and other leading universities, without examination. Speaking of the Principal of this school, Prof. T. C. Karns, A. M., says: "I have known Prof. Hinemon several years. He is a most excellent teacher and Christian gentleman. His ability in his chosen line is very marked. Fathers can intrust their sons to him without any hesitancy. He will make scholars and good citizens of them."

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting is announced for Sept. 11. Now, as this is a new enterprise, it may be important to describe its location. It is in East Feliciana parish, eighteen miles east of Slaughter, and five miles west of Grangeville, and on the west side of Amite river. It is some twelve miles southeast of Clinton. The above figures may not be exact, but will, at least, approximate. C. MCDONALD.

The Leaf River Camp Meeting will begin Friday before the second Sunday in October. This camp ground has just been inaugurated on the Estabuchie circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, and is located 1¼ miles west of Tuscanola Station, on the Northeastern R. R., four miles north of the town of Estabuchie; and twelve miles south of Ellisville, Miss. Those coming by rail will get off at Tuscanola. Ministers are earnestly requested to attend, as well as all others who may so desire.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

There will be a camp meeting at the Palmer Camp Ground, Whittington circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, beginning on the first Sunday in October. Preachers are invited and urged to come. Preachers coming on the L. and N. R. R. will stop off at Gulf Port, Miss., and take Gulf and Ship Island R. R., and stop off at Redmon's Crossing, where they will be met Saturday with conveyance to carry them to the camp ground. There will be a sleeping-tent on the camp ground for the accomodation of men, free of charge.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Rev. C. S. Hedges, D. D., rector of Mount Olivet Episcopal Church in Algiers, La., celebrated the threescore years of his service to the church on Aug. 21.

A tornado struck Kansas City and vicinity on Aug. 21. Much damage was done to telephone and telegraph wires. Many horses and cattle were killed by the storm.

The Arkansas State Farmers' Alliance has passed resolutions indorsing the Ocala demands and favoring their enactments into laws, and especially the land loan and sub-treasury features.

The new bridge across the Ohio river, between Newport, Ky., and Cincinnati, making the fifth structure of the kind connecting Cincinnati with her Kentucky neighbors, is to be opened for public traffic Aug. 29.

The sudden collapse of a building in New York City, on Aug. 22, followed by a fire among the ruins, caused the death of nearly twenty persons. The building was condemned thirteen years ago. Upon investigation it was discovered that there was practically no mortar between the bricks.

The soldiers of the First Regiment, Ohio National Guards, who live in Cincinnati, have set a precedent by determining to march to camp at Woodsdale Park, a distance of 28 miles. This, in spite of the fact that a good railroad could carry them to their destination in an hour. They prefer the experience of marching and of bivouac.

The Philadelphia Record, of Aug. 20, says: "More than $2,000,000 worth of grain has been purchased in this country on French account. Part of it went away yesterday on the British steamship Thordisa, which cleared this port with 114,115 bushels of red winter wheat, valued at $125,526. Six steamers bound for France will soon follow her."

The Texas State Alliance, in session, last week, in Dallas, passed resolutions revoking the charters of all the sub-Alliances who refuse to expel members who participated in the Fort Worth anti-sub-treasury convention and those connected with the publication of the Farmers' World, the organ of the anti-sub-treasury element. The entire Democratic press of the country was also denounced for the alleged traduction of Alliance leaders.

A question has risen that is of interest to three of the departments of the government—the treasury, war and interior departments. It is in substance whether there is anything in existing laws to prevent the sale of lager beer in the Indian Territory. The only statute bearing on the subject prohibits the introduction of "ardent spirits" or "spirituous liquors" in the Indian country, and this, as effects beer, has been differently construed.

Remarkable discoveries have been made at the Lick Observatory in California. Prof. Holden, the director, has secured through the big telescope better photographs of the moon than have been taken anywhere else, and the work of photographing goes on every hour when the satellite is visible. By studying the photographs with a magnifying glass and comparing them, any changes taking place on the surface of the moon may be discovered.

FOREIGN.

The British government has notified the government of China that from this time forth no British officers will be allowed to serve in the Chinese navy.

Martinique, in the Lesser Antilles, has been visited by a cyclone. Many persons were killed, and every ship at the island was wrecked or disabled. The numerous sugar, coffee, cotton and cocoa plantations which have felt the force of the tornado have been utterly destroyed.

The international congress on accident insurance, which will be held at Berne, on Sept. 21-26, next, will be of much importance. Among the governments that have promised to take part in the deliberations are those of the United States, England, Germany, France, Switzerland, Norway, Belgium and Austria.

Bloody battles are being fought near Valparaiso between the government troops and the insurgents in Chili. Defeat is said to mean ruin to either party, and the full strength of both is being exerted. The insurgents' army, with the aid of six warships, have advanced and driven the government forces before them.

The government organs in Italy assert that if the next conclave is held abroad the government will occupy the Vatican and exclude the new Pope from it. It is rumored that the Pope has ordered the Italian bishops to report on the number of Catholics in each diocese entitled to vote who are opposed to the monarchy.

The French fleet was received with great honors at Portsmouth. On Aug. 20 the Queen, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh and the Duke of Connaught, viewed the French fleet in Osborne Bay. The spectacle was one of the most magnificent ever seen in English waters, the British squadron of escort, however, furnishing most of the magnificence.

The British delegates to the International Socialists Workmen's Congress, in Brussels, adopted resolutions which in effect declare that strikes and boycotting are the workmen's only weapon, but that arbitration should be employed whenever possible without loss of dignity, and demands that the right of combining be guaranteed by law.

The craze to view the Holy Coat of Treves seems incredible. It becomes a serious problem what the Treves people are going to do for the accommodation of the multitude. The almost incredible statement comes from Cologne that 100,000 people passed that city on Aug. 22 on their way to Treves. The railways are utterly unable to furnish prompt transportation for the pilgrims, and their carrying capacity is taxed to the utmost.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is unquestionably the best preservative of the hair. It is also curative of dandruff, tetter, and all scalp affections.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. B. Stono, P. E., Aberdeen district, North Mississippi, Aug. 25: "I am glad to report glorious revivals all over Aberdeen district."

Rev. E. H. Moon, Stone, Ala., Aug. 25: "We closed a good meeting at Memphis, Ala., last week. The membership was very much revived. We had nine accessions; and some of the young converts, whose parents are Baptists, will join that church. Bro. J. W. Luter was with me, and did earnest and efficient work."

Rev. R. A. Davis, Downsville, La., Aug. 24: "Since my last report, have closed my meeting at Walnut Lane, Downsville circuit, with quite a number revived, and four additions to the church; and another at Ebenezer, last Saturday, in said work—which makes the total number this year to date, 125 additions since I came on this work. To God be all the glory."

Rev. Jas. G. Cammack, Carthage, Miss., Aug. 28: "Have held one successful meeting on this charge; ten accessions. Have three other meetings to hold. I assisted R. H. Barr, of Hillsboro, last week, where we had a gracious revival; nineteen accessions. We are indebted to J. C. Ellis, of Byram, and R. H. Barr, of Hillsboro, for faithful assistance on this work."

Rev. M. L. White, Vancleave, Miss., Aug. 26: "While I have been silent, God has been blessing us on this (Vancleave) circuit. I have just closed a meeting at Shiloh, near Ocean Springs, which resulted in twenty-four accessions to the church, about twenty conversions, and membership revived. Have five more meetings to hold, expecting all to result in great good."

Rev. B. R. East, Saltillo, Miss., Aug. 22: "We have just closed a glorious revival at Mossville. Twenty-seven conversions, nineteen accessions to the church, and more to follow, and the church wonderfully revived. The fire on the altar still burns. Four meetings to hold yet. I go to Allen's Chapel to-morrow. I have four new subscribers for the ADVOCATE. We are hard at work on all the lines. Pray for us."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Rayne, La., Aug. 31: "Just closed a gracious revival at Roberts' Cove. Results: 31 conversions, 20 accessions, and entire membership wonderfully revived. Whole community shaken from center to circumference. Revival spirit abroad throughout the circuit. Am now engaged in a meeting at this place, with every indication of a successful revival. Will storm the citadel of Satan in a tent meeting at Church Point, beginning next Sunday. Pray for us."

Rev. N. J. Roberts, Utica circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We have just closed our third revival meeting on this charge with glorious results. The last was held at Bear Creek, where we had thirteen accessions to the church, and the membership greatly blessed. We had with us Bro. E. T. Denson, of the Louisiana Conference, at Bear Creek. He did all the preaching; God honoring every sermon in the convicting and converting of souls. We have received fifty up to date, and baptized ten children."

Rev. W. F. Sanders, Floyd, La., Aug. 25: "We have had three revivals—in fact, the revival has been going on since May. My third quarterly meeting closed Sunday, Aug. 23, at which I reported 59 members, all received during the third quarter; still 10 to be baptized. Received in all this year, 88; infants baptized, 16; organized 2 churches, and hope to have a new church at Floyd by Conference. Bless the Lord; he is present at every meeting and in every sermon. I can not number the conversions."

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, Cookrum, Miss., Aug. 31: "Closed a meeting at Greenleaf on Sunday, Aug. 23, which resulted in forty conversions, a warm church, and faithful workers at this appointment. . . . Last week we held our meeting at Cockrum, and were assisted at this place by Bro. T. B. Clifford, a local preacher from Pleasant Grove, who did good work for us, and we shall always remember him with feelings of love and affection. Results: Church revived, nine conversions and seven additions. Praise the Lord."

Rev. J. T. Howell, P. C., Pleasant Hill, Miss., Aug. 26: "Have just closed a profitable meeting at Lewisburgh. Four accessions to our church. The Lord counts the conversions. The presence of the Holy Spirit was manifest at every service. Many cold church members became convinced of their inconsistent lives, and have started out anew for the kingdom. One brother felt that he was moved by the Holy Ghost to preach, and will be licensed at next Quarterly Conference. Rev. T. J. Newell was with us two days, and preached three telling sermons. God bless him, and spare him for many years."

Rev. H. Bradford, Blairstown, La., Aug. 28: "We have just closed our third protracted meeting at Olive Branch. Result: the church revived, about ten conversions. Almost everyone in this vicinity are members of some church. On account of sickness in my family, I was not able to conserve the fruits of the meeting. I hear they have organized a prayer meeting since the meeting. We are in debt to Bros. H. D. Knickerbocker, W. C. Carroll, Jack Haney, Wiley Brown and W. Roy for good help in these meetings. Our camp meeting at Bluff Creek commences on Sept. 11, and will continue (D. V.) ten days."

Rev. George E. Greene, Brodnax, La.: "We have had two more good meetings since my last card, namely: at New Hope, near Arkansas, and at Mt. Carmel. There were 12 accessions at New Hope, and 22 at Mt. Carmel. So far 91 persons have applied for membership during the four weeks, of whom 88 have been received. The most joined at the church whose Sunday-school did not disband last Winter. The smallest number of accessions was where interest in Sunday-school work was least. I am sorry to find some opposed to children joining the church, even when they so desire. But good Sunday-schools will dispel this unscriptural notion."

Rev. W. T. Beall, Moss Point, Aug. 27: "Having been called on Aug. 23 by telegram to come to Bro. C. A. Powell as quick as possible, I reached him that night at twelve o'clock to find him very ill with bilious fever, but am glad to be able to report him much better this morning, though still very sick. Without some untoward occurrence, I think he is in a fair way to recover now. Please give this a place in your paper, that his many anxious friends may hear from him, and send their united prayers for his speedy recovery up to a throne of grace. What a solace in our afflictions to know we are carried on the hearts of praying friends to our heavenly Father!"

Rev. J. H. Evans, Williamsburg, Miss., Aug. 28: "We have held our third Quarterly Conference, Aug. 22 and 23, 1891, which was protracted, and we had Rev. E. L. Rawls with us, and he did all the preaching until Rev. E. H. Mounger, the presiding elder, came, and he then preached two sermons to the delight of all. The audience was large Saturday and Sunday. The communion was administered, and we had seventy communicants there at the table, and the church was very much revived. Four joined by letter, and two children baptized. We are very much behind with our collections; more so with our quarterage. Times are hard here, and likely to be harder. Pray for us."

Rev. J. L. Gibson, Lake Arthur, La., Aug. 29: "We commenced a meeting at this place on the ninth, and continued it until the nineteenth, holding services only at night, except on Sundays. The population of this place does not exceed 150, and our church membership live mostly in the country—many of them too far away to attend night service. Yet, all things considered, we had a good and profitable meeting. The Lord was with us. Four persons professed conversion and united with our church; also two by certificate—making six in all. The people were very attentive and serious, and we hope that more good fruit will soon be gathered from the good seed sown during those services. Bro. M. F. Johnson, L. P., of this place, gave efficient help during the meeting."

Rev. J. M. Henry, Shreveport mission, Aug. 27: "When I returned from a visit to my parents in South Carolina, I found my people in good shape, working away just as hard as ever. The church was not closed and the Word was not withheld from the people on account of the absence of the preacher. Bro. Pierce was kind in giving my people his spare time. We have now about forty members—net increase this year. Nearly all, if not all, these pray in public, and will do whatever work they are asked to do. They work because they have religion. Thus the work is spreading. We have conversions every week, not holding up hands, but experiences of the divine visitation. Our class meeting is the place where most of the work is done. We have a good Sunday-school, which has held up wonderfully well during the heated term. We are putting forth every effort to increase our success both in Sunday-school and church."

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, P. C., Eureka Springs, Miss., Aug. 16: "We have just closed a very successful revival meeting at Mt. Tirza Church, in which we were assisted by Bro. J. Arnold, an efficient local preacher. There was a great awakening among the ungodly, quite a number converted (twelve, I believe), and the church most powerfully revived. The whole church seems to have taken on new life. Many cold and lifeless members came to the front and took up the cross. Several family altars were established. The members say that this was the greatest revival that has been held here in ten years. Our meeting at Mt. Olivet was quite a success in every way. Had eight conversions and six additions, with more to follow. In this meeting we were assisted by Rev. J. A. Braswell, of Coldwater mission, whose sermons were excellent and full of power. Long will he be held in pleasant remembrance by the people of Mt. Olivet. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. J. J. Wheat, was with us at the close, preaching excellent and powerful sermons, which will tell in eternity. May the Lord bless him and prolong his usefulness many years!"

Rev. H. M. Banks, Bayou Chicot, La., Aug. 25: "I wish to say that we have just closed a good meeting at this place, resulting in several conversions, eight additions to the church, five children baptized, and a gracious baptism of the Spirit upon the church. Family altars have been erected, and a prayer meeting is to fill the eleven o'clock service on Sundays, except the regular monthly appointment. The meeting continued almost from the first day with unabated interest for thirteen days, or rather for thirteen nights, as we only had preaching at night, Sundays excepted. Ministerial help was very much needed; but, unfortunately, we failed in our efforts to secure aid, except two very efficient sermons by Bro. Fred White just at the time when help was needed most. I send you five new subscriptions for the ADVOCATE, four of which were received during our meeting at this place. So you see we are having a revival on this line. I wish to remind the brethren of the district of the promise we made at the District Conference to renew our energies and double our efforts for the ADVOCATE. Finances are low, as yet; but I am hoping to come out well in end."

"G." writes, Jackson, Miss., Aug. 25: "Rev. Wm. Moore, pastor of the Columbia circuit, held a series of meetings at Hopewell Church, Marion county, Miss., which continued one week. It was my pleasure to be present to partake of the bountiful spread prepared through two Sabbaths by the good people of his charge, as well as to enjoy the feast of spiritual things. Bro. Moore is a strong preacher—strong in the faith, strong with his people, and strong for God. Thirteen accessions blessed the special effort made on this occasion. It filled me with pleasure to note the generous, broad spirit of the man, as well as his spiritual devotion, and I could not but feel that the Methodist Church had a chosen vessel in him. Hopewell met all her assessments last year, and was ready for the blessing. Quite a number of new home altars were set up, and quite a number of young men engaged for the first time in public prayer. A new building will soon be erected. The lumber is now on the grounds, and loving hands are ready to rear its walls. May a covenant-keeping God always be with old Hopewell, her talented pastor, and her consecrated, liberal people!"

Rev. D. P. Bradford, Forest and Morton charge, Aug. 25: "The Lord has done great things for us. Our meeting at Pelahatchie was attended with gracious results. Several family altars erected, the church revived, a goodly number of conversions, and six accessions. Last night we closed a meeting at Forest. The preachers that have served this charge will rejoice with us when I say we have had a gracious revival at Forest. Bro. Penn did nearly all the preaching at both of these meetings. He stood firmly by the customs of Methodism. At first no one would come to the altar seeking salvation; but the interest increased with every service, and very soon the children of Presbyterians, Baptists and Methodists were pleading around the altar for salvation. Miss Lillie Smylie, the daughter of our sainted J. J. Smylie, was with us from the beginning, and aided by Sister Harmon, of your city, conducted a ladies' prayer meeting every afternoon, which did much toward bringing about the results. The entire community was enlisted in this effort. There were about thirty conversions and eighteen applicants for membership in the three churches. Bro. J. J. Smylie was with us part of the time, preaching and working with zeal. The 'dancing master' came to Forest to organize a class during a revival in the Baptist Church; but, blessed be God! he and experimental religion couldn't live together."

Rev. A. D. Miller, Bowerton circuit, Aug. 25: "We have held two meetings on my work, the first at Pleasant Valley. Had a good meeting, church revived, and six members received. I was assisted by Rev. V. V. Boone, of Beauregard, who preached some very fine sermons to the edification and delight of my people. Our second was held at Rehoboth. Had only tolerable good meeting. Was assisted in the first part of the meeting by Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., of Hazlehurst, Miss., and he delivered some able sermons, and my people were perfectly delighted with his visit and labors among us. Was assisted the last part of the meeting by Revs. C. W. and Casey Campbell, father and son, both of whom labored zealously and efficiently. Also our local brother, Rev. G. A. Smith, labored earnestly in the meeting, with many zealous laymen. May God bless them all, and the women! Please say to the friends of the Indian Mission that one Indian has joined our church, and is now studying for the ministry. Also that since my last report I have received from Rev. J. P. Drake, of Shubuta, Miss., $5; and $3 from an elect lady of Alabama. I believe she wishes her name withheld. This makes $6 for her, with more to follow. May God bless all that contribute to this important work! I can also state that we have the promise of a missionary this Winter to take charge of the work. May God hasten the time for the work to begin! And now, brethren and sisters, let me beg you to send on the money at once, so that we will not have to draw on our Mission Board. Let us keep this separate, and let it be a special contribution to the cause of Christ. The money already on hand and received will be in safe hands; so please send it on."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Sulphur Mine circuit: "I began a meeting at the town of Vinton on July 27. Bro. A. E. Arrington, of Welsh, preached two sermons for us, which was the only help I had the first week. On Aug. 3, Bro. Blocker, of Rayne, came to our assistance and did good work, as usual. The result was twelve conversions and eight accessions, and the church greatly revived. I had the privilege of assisting him at Prairie Hayes a few days, where I met with many warm Christians. My quarterly meeting being on Aug. 15 and 16, I was compelled to leave in the midst of the meeting. I reached Bagdad, Saturday morning, and found Bro. Miller at his post. At our Quarterly Conference, as I read my church report, I heard Bro. Miller say, 'Amen!' I continued the meeting at that place the following week, assisted by Rev. T. J. Upton, of Lake Charles, and Rev. Jas. Ellis, of the M. E. Church. These brethren did good work, and the result was four accessions and quite a number of conversions and the church greatly built up. Seven or eight heads of families promised to erect the family altar. We expect to hold two more meetings: one at Westlake and at Calcasieu. We have just finished a neat church-building at Calcasieu, 30x50 feet, with steeple; ceiled and painted. Have a lot at Westlake, and have some money already made up for a church-building there. So you see, Mr. Editor, the Lord is blessing us down here. We have received during the year forty-three members, and have baptized seventeen infants, and we hope to be able to make a good report financially also. But I had better close, for there might be too many of our young preachers disappointed in not hearing their names read out for Sulphur Mine circuit at our next Annual Conference."

Rev. A. W. Moore, Winnsboro, La., Aug. 21: "Bro. Reneau, our pastor, began a meeting at Bœuff Prairie on the first Sunday in this month, and closed on Friday evening following. The writer came in on Monday and remained till Wednesday. A more soul-stirring and heart-felt revival of 'pure religion and undefiled before God the Father' has not been seen at Bœuff Prairie for, lo! these many years. The church was wonderfully revived. Twenty names added to the list of members—several of whom were converted; the exact number not known to the writer. Those who were added were young men and women of sterling worth, and bid fair to be great benefit to the church and country. The preaching was in much power and demonstration of the Spirit. On the next Sunday Bro. Richardson, the assistant preacher, commenced a meeting at 'Big Creek.' Bro. Reneau got there on Monday and remained till the following Sunday. The writer did not get to this meeting till just time to preach the last sermon. During this entire meeting—at every service—the Holy Spirit descended in copious showers of divine love and filled the souls of preacher and people, even to overflowing. There were eighteen accessions to the church at this place, and many happy conversions. The church was strengthened and re-consecrated. The hearty handshaking, the streaming eyes and joyous shouts that 'made the welkin ring' in response to the song, 'O brother, will you meet me?' etc., at the close of this meeting, will not be forgotten soon by those who were there. On Monday morning a large number of people assembled on the bank of Bœuff river, where the writer administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to a young brother. This service was solemn and impressive. To God be all the glory."

Rev. J. R. Whittington, Meadville, Miss., Aug. 29: "We have just closed a remarkable meeting at Cool Springs, which makes the fourth grand revival on old Meadville circuit for this year. I left the Sam Jones Camp Meeting last Saturday after listening to some grand sermons from God's embassadors, full of vim, and the love of God burning on the altar of my heart for the salvation of sinners. I arrived at the church at eleven o'clock, Sunday, and found the multitude there. The revival commenced at the start. Had no preacher to help me that day, but next day two Baptist brethren came to my help, and a glorious meeting we had. The Spirit came in converting power, and there were thirty conversions. Sixteen additions; three for the Baptist. Seven new family altars erected. Money raised to build a new church, 30x50, and all made happy. Methodists and Baptists shouted together, and all is peace between the two, and this is why it is remarkable. This people have all intermarried until, Baptist and Methodist, they are nearly equally divided. It was a strange sight to see my Baptist brother at one end of the altar to receive the Methodist applicants, while I stood at the other end to receive the Baptist. Have had about sixty conversions and forty-five new members, and two protracted meetings to be held yet. I go to New Providence to-morrow, to knock Satan out of the ring. I almost forgot one thing about the Cool Springs meeting, and that was our sermon to the children on Tuesday evening. Put all the 'amen' fellows on the back seats, little boys and girls on the first seats, and it would have done your soul good to have seen them weep for joy. All the praise be to God, for Christ's sake."

Rev. C. McDonald writes of Sam Jones Camp Meeting: "The Sam Jones Camp Meeting began on Friday night, Aug. 14, and continued ten days. The congregation was unusually good to begin with. Preachers love to attend here and take home a blessing. A goodly number of our district preachers were here, and of those outside we make special mention, viz.: F. N. Parker, E. T. Denson, and C. A. Coombs, of the Louisiana Conference, and J. W. Chambers, I. B. Robertson, J. W. Brown, D. F. Guice, M. L. Burton, W. D. Dominick, J. A. B. Jones, N. J. Roberts, R. Bradley and J. R. Whittington, of the Mississippi Conference. Bros. Parker and Chambers preached once a day during their stay of five days. I left the camp ground on Friday morning, Aug. 21, to meet other engagements, and up to this time there had been present twenty itinerant and fifteen local preachers. Twelve had joined the church. It was estimated that two thousand, or more, persons heard preaching on Sabbath morning, Aug. 15. Good order usually; the best, I think, I ever saw on a camp ground. The large new hotel, managed by Mrs. Warren, met the demand nicely. The music was very good; three professors, viz.: Parkins as organist, Jenkins as cornetist, and Coke as leading vocalist. Those who know this trio would feel that good music was assured. Besides these there were a great number of excellent singers, who contributed no little to the singing. The meeting was good from the beginning. The preaching was as good, at least, as we ever had. The children's service, on Wednesday evening, conducted by H. W. Featherstun, was of special interest. Great good was accomplished. Bro. Featherstun was in his proper sphere. He looked as if he had a pair of wings, he would have left for the heavenly world. People must not think a college president is necessarily a cold, dry preacher. There were many improvements on the grounds. A new hotel, with ladies' sleeping apartment up stairs. A new preachers' tent, with other tent improvements. There are two large springs. The one inside the inclosure has a new curb 6x6 feet, and stands about 2½ feet deep in water, and bold enough to furnish water for at least 2,000 people. The trains stop at camp ground during the meeting."

Notice.

I wish to say to the preachers of the Jackson district, that so far I have heard from only three of the charges in regard to the Ecumenical Conference collection, to wit: Capitol Street, Jackson; Edwards Station and Flora and Brownsville circuit. Remember, brethren, that this Conference will assemble in October.

A Correction.

In my article on "J. M. B.," in the last ADVOCATE, I made the mistake of saying "1887" instead of 1888. This mistake is immaterial, yet I correct it for the sake of accuracy. The St. Mary's Market Mission School was stopped early in 1888, or about three and one-half years ago.

ENIGMATA.

I wanted the sweep of the wild wet weather,
The wind's long lash and the rain's free fall,
The toss of the trees as they swayed together,
The measureless grey that was over them all;
Whose roar speaks more than a language spoken;
Wordless and wonderful, cry on cry—
The sob of an earth that is vexed and broken,
The answering sob of a broken sky.

What could they tell us? We see them ever—
The trees and the sky and the stretch of the land.
But they give us a word of their secret never;
They tell no story we understand.
Yet haply the ghost-like birch out yonder
Knows much in a placid and silent way;
The rain might tell what the grey clouds ponder,
The winds repeat what the violets say.

Why weeps the rain? Do you know its sorrow?
Do you know why the wind is so sad—so sad?
Have you stood in the rift 'twixt n'day and a morrow,
Seen their hands meet and their eyes grow glad?
Is the tree's pride stung at its top's abasement?
Is the white rose more of a saint than the red?
What thinks the star as it sees through the casement
A young girl lying, beautiful, dead?

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

III.

2. Sin is the unpardoned transgression of the law of God, whether by any act or purpose of man.

It is not my purpose to change the Pauline definition of sin. I have prefixed and affixed words to meet, as I conceive, all the possible phases of transgression. Besides, Paul speaks of a certain sort of sin, specifically denominated personal sin, which now exists, and does not apply the definition to that state known as "original," or inherited sin. I prefix the word "unpardoned" because the penalty is on the transgression, and not on the act by which the transgression was accomplished. The act of Saul of Tarsus in persecuting "the church of God" was to him no sin after his conversion; otherwise he would have been a sinner after his conversion, and in the same sense, too, that he was a sinner before his conversion, because he, or grace, could not undo the act by which he became a transgressor of the law. Until the transgression was forgiven, he was held accountable for the act; but with the pardon, although the act remained a fact, it ceased to be a sin. Hence, although his acts were still standing out as an historical fact, he could claim "a conscience void of offense," and enjoy "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound," not to the undoing of the act by which the law was violated, but to "the pardoning" of the offense—the forgiving of the transgression. Transgression is of the very essence of sin. "Where there is no law there is no transgression." "Sin is the transgression of the law." As long, therefore, as the transgression is unforgiven, the sin remains; but when the transgression is pardoned, there is no more sin, on account of that particular act. Uzzah was not smitten because he touched the ark, but because, by so doing, he transgressed the law of God. The touching was the act; the effect was transgression. Peter was not esteemed guilty because he spoke falsely to the girl, but because, by so doing, he transgressed the law, "Thou shalt not bear false witness." The act of Peter is a fact "unto this day;" but when the Master forgave his transgression, and took him back to the fold, the sin ceased, and Peter was restored to his place as an under-shepherd, and charged with the care of the sheep. The fall of Adam is one of the pillar facts of religion; and while it is still a fact, and large results still follow it, yet it is a universally conceded truth that the transgression has been pardoned in Christ, and that no human being is now held to answer to the sin resulting from the act of Adam.

If these conclusions are correct, it is to be hoped that some one may be able to reconcile to them the theory that infants are "fallen and depraved."

Exodus xxxiii, 7, seems to sustain the theory above outlined. So Job (vii, 21) prayed for the "pardon of his transgression," not the undoing of the act by which he had transgressed. The Psalmist (xix, 13) prayed to be kept back "from presumptuous sins," that he might "be upright" . . . and "innocent from the great transgression." Ibid xxxii, 1: "Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered." The transgression is "forgiven"—it is "blotted out." The sin is hidden from view—"is covered"—although the original act remains.

From these passages it is clear that transgression is the result of an act, or a purpose, and that pardon consists in blotting out the result, and not the act or purpose which produced this result. By universal consent there can be no sin where there is neither act nor purpose. Sin must exist before the act; but without a purpose, never. The entering in of sin is in the purpose. If not, then every temptation, whether or not there be a purpose to yield, is sin. There was no sin in heaven till the angels purposed rebellion; none in Paradise till Adam purposed taking the forbidden fruit. A stone may be thrown and a man killed; but as the stone neither acts nor purposes, the stone commits no sin. The act or purpose, or both, lies behind the stone, and there, and there only. The effect is all the same as if the stone acted or purposed—the man is killed; and whatever natural consequences follow the killing of a man will flow on in all their want and tears and heart throbs until some kind providence interposes to set aside these effects. This is what Jesus did for humanity. The sin was Adam's; the effects of it were entailed to us. We were all in the transgression until we were "redeemed, not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, as a lamb slain from the foundation of the world."

"With pitying eye the Prince of Peace
Beheld our helpless grief;
He saw! and O, amazing love,
He ran to our relief."

"He sent his Son to redeem the world" from the effect of an act in which the unborn millions of earth had neither part nor purpose. We were "made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope;" and that this unbidden transgression might be forgiven, and an alienated race restored to him, he "laid help upon one that is mighty"—one who "bore our offenses," by whose "stripes we are healed"—that we might be "redeemed from the curse of the law." By this act of a gracious providence our ancestral transgression was pardoned, and "the world was reconciled unto God." "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ Jesus shall all be made alive." All died in Adam without act or purpose; it was a result of another's "offense." But as the result of the "righteousness" of another, all were made alive again—the effect was set aside, and a lost race restored to God.

A Methodist Confession of Faith.

I have read Dr. Tillett, in the July number of the Nashville Quarterly, on a "Wesleyan Arminian Confession of Faith," and Bro. D. G. W. Ellis in reply thereto, in this ADVOCATE, of July 23, and I beg the privilege of saying a word or two.

By "Wesleyan" I presume these gentlemen mean Methodist—at least, I prefer that term. Ours is a Methodist Church. I agree with Dr. Tillett as to the expediency—hardly the necessity—of such a production, and for the reasons he so clearly sets forth, but am obliged to differ with him a little as to the size of the volume. Instead of "a duodecimo volume of one to two hundred pages," I would suggest about twenty pages of our Discipline, or, in other words, revise and abridge our present Articles of Religion.

I have long since entertained these views, and am obliged to those gentlemen for furnishing me this opportunity of expressing them. Articles of Religion and Confession of Faith are one and the same thing, except that the latter would be expected to be more full as to opinions of doctrines, and the former mere dogmatic affirmations scarcely admitting of difference of opinion. Such "confessions" as we have had are largely polemical. Articles should not be. And so, under this rule, I would revise our Articles about on this wise:

1st. Let it stand.

2nd. For "reconcile his Father to us," let it read, "To produce reconciliation between the Father and us."

3rd. Let it stand.

4th. Let it stand.

5th. Let it stand.

6th. Take out all after and including "wherefore," in line 5.

7th. Take out the first three lines ending with "but it."

8th. Substitute "assisting us" for "preventing us."

9th. Let it stand.

10th. Let it stand.

11th. Remove it altogether.

12th. Remove it altogether.

13th. Take out "visible" in first line.

14th. Remove it.

15th. Remove it.

16th. Let it begin: "The method of administering the sacraments ordained," etc. And let the first paragraph on page 19 read: "There are two sacraments—that is, obligations—naturally and necessarily, and no more, in religion. They are administered respectively as ordained by Christ, by baptism and the Lord's Supper," and remove all the remainder.

17th. Let it stand.

18th. Let the first paragraph stand although it is poorly expressed, and remove all of the three remaining paragraphs on page 21.

19th. Let it be removed.

20th. Remove all after "alone," beginning with "wherefore."

21st. Let it be removed.

22nd. Let it be removed.

23rd. Let it stand without the foot note.

24th. May be removed, and let 25 be rewritten and better expressed.

Dr. Tillett and the Quarterly have removed all the semi-sanctity hitherto hovering over the phraseology of these Articles, and opened them to ordinary newspaper criticism. I like Dr. Tillett's views about them. Those things which I suggest to be expurgated is not because they contain anything erroneous, but because this is not the place for snob arguments.

It seems to me that "one or two hundred pages" of creed would leave us where the Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Baptist Churches are now, viz.: suffering and searching for a creed that will explain and define what the creed is. We need a creed that will define itself.

Bro. Ellis says: "The fathers intended to make these Articles of Religion binding for all time to come." Then they were very unwise men. They forgot two things: first, that the world "moves;" and, secondly, that we live in its crude, early beginning period. In these early centuries nothing can be "binding for all time to come" but pure mathematics and the uniformity of nature's laws. Anyone who undertakes to stereotype opinions has something yet to learn.

I am not able to see either the "revolution," or the dangers resulting from it, that Bro. Ellis fears. Did the General Conferences of 1828 and 1832, in forming the Restrictive Rules, possess any but ordinary legislative power? They said what they had to say, but with no power to close the mouth of the church forever thereafter.

No earthly power can
Bind the churches fast in fate,
Leaving free the human will.
(Paraphrase.)

Far more legal force is generally given to the famous first Restrictive Rule than is necessary.

"The General Conference shall not revoke, alter or change our Articles of Religion, or establish any new standards or rule of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine."

This is very good advice, as seen by good men three-quarters of a century ago; but, as we have no known and specific "standards of doctrine," who is to compare and decide whether this or that new measure does or does not conflict with the standards? Indeed, we have no legal standards, nor never will have, so long as men continue to improve in moral, mental and natural science.

There is much that might be said, and more that may be said, on this subject. But a polemical creed, embodying men's opinions, where others are certain or likely to differ, would, in my judgment, embarrass us, and do more harm than good.

Yazoo City, Miss.

Letter from Monteagle.

The ninth annual session of Monteagle Assembly, now in its seventh week, though exceedingly interesting throughout, has spread no finer feast than that of the past few days. Previous to this Bishop Vincent had failed us for the appointed exercises of C. L. S. C. "Recognition Day," Aug. 11, but sent Miss Kimball, the office secretary, who conducted the necessary ceremonies most efficiently and gracefully. Her address was beautiful, instructive and inspiring. The graduating class was small, but through the efforts of Miss Sally Battaile, of Yazoo City, Miss., in charge of C. L. S. C. matters at Monteagle, a large number have this year been added to the circle—all of whom, it is hoped, will graduate here in 1895. The meeting around the "camp fire," on the night following Recognition Day, was picturesque and memorable. The night was perfect, the camp fire a brilliant success, the music fine and the impromptu speeches stirring—Dr. J. I. D. Hinds, of Cumberland University, calling out the orators.

Tuesday brought Col. L. F. Copeland, of Pennsylvania, the notable platform lecturer. His first theme, "Seeing the Elephant," is based on John G. Saxe's story of six blind men going to see the elephant; and well did he make us "see ourselves as others see us"—despite his reiterated protestations that the follies ginhated so mercilessly inhered solely in the other fellows—not in his audience! Col. Copeland spoke again the afternoon of the following day, addressing himself to teachers, and exalting their high office and responsibilities, while holding up to scorn and contempt the unworthy and mercenary of the profession. His tribute to the old maid teacher, long gone to her reward, by whom his own childhood and youth were redeemed, was beautiful and touching. Friday night the same fluent speaker delighted a large audience with his second lecture on "Handsome People," a dissertation in which humor and persiflage sugar-coated a wholesome kernel of truth needed by almost every daughter and son of Eve. As a lecturer, Copeland is a spicy mixture of sense and nonsense, elegance and audacity, learning and laughter, seldom met with, never giving his enthralled audience a moment's pause in the swiftly changing and irresistible flood of his unique oratory.

Bishop Galloway, of Mississippi, joined his family here on the fourteenth, remaining but four days. He preached Sunday morning from "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he"—a sermon heard with profound and delighted attention by an audience worthy of the occasion. Many there had come from far, especially to hear Bishop Galloway. His first comment—that there evidently is a thinking not of the heart—led him to clearly differentiate, by way of introduction, between heart and mind and soul in the metaphysics of Holy Writ; then, passing direct to the main theme, he made a subtle and powerful analysis of human character in God's sight, indicating man's own high and responsible province in the formation of that character. The sermon was like the man — solid, luminous, masterly. Bishop Galloway is the youngest man holding that high office in the M. E. Church, South, being only thirty-six years old when chosen to it six years ago; but in learning, in orthodoxy, in consecration and in personal qualifications he is a Bishop every whit. Though but five feet eleven, he looks full six feet in stature; has a fine presence and voice, with all the gracious dignity and benignance of a spiritual father; all the ease and cordiality of a brother beloved. There was a simple christening scene under the trees, Sunday afternoon—the infant of a hard-working pair who modestly asked that favor—of which I chanced to be a witness, and the noble man of God never looked more so than when in the august presence and Sabbath stillness of the summer woods, with only Mrs. Galloway and the parents and immediate family of the babe for auditors, pronounced the holy ritual of his church and administered the simple, solemn rite, holding the little one in his arms. His lecture, Monday night, on "The Mother of the Wesleys," drew a large crowd to the amphitheatre. Susannah Wesley, he said, was like Monica, the mother of St. Augustine, better known by the branch of her issue than by the root of her parentage. Nevertheless he gave a succinct history of Dr. Samuel Annesley, the orthodox English rector, blessed of God with great talents, distinguished usefulness and a quarter of a hundred children!—of whom Susannah was the last, the ultimate and perfect flower, one may suppose, of his domestic vine. Among the young students and ministers seeking wisdom at the feet of old Dr. Annesley came Samuel Wesley, and there met the youthful Susannah, a beautiful, gifted, devout, and carefully educated girl who became Mrs. Samuel Wesley at the age of nineteen, and bore her husband nineteen children, of whom ten reached maturity. Touching skillfully on the salient points in her husband's character and history, and the leading events of their united lives, the speaker developed the finished portrait of a model woman, wife and mother, in Susannah, the illustrious and honored mother of John and Charles Wesley. She was indeed

"A woman nobly planned
To warn, to comfort and command," and has left her impress on the centuries. In the humble rectory at Epworth, where as queen regnant she held in subjection her own spirit and triumphed over every adverse circumstance for over forty years, was born and nurtured and schooled and inspired a remarkable family, among them those twin motors of thought and genius destined to revolutionize and vitalize, by the aid of God's Spirit, the English-speaking religious world. Charles Wesley wrote six thousand hymns—many of them destined to immortality. John Wesley—the noble son who inspired his aged mother to declare that had she twenty sons, she would gladly give them all (to the mission work in America)—has immortal fame for this world and the next. (I do not pretend to quote the Bishop's language.)

Yesterday morning was given up to the little people and young folks' classes under lead of Miss Anna Johnson, teacher of primary Sunday-school methods here. The large double stage looked like a terraced garden, filled as it was with lovely children framed in a setting of greenery. The theme of the beautiful entertainment was "Character Building," founded on the rock, Christ Jesus, and further illustrated by a four square building-block—Kindness, Honesty, Obedience and Trust—and by appropriate recitations and singing by the children. There is no clap-trap or useless machinery about Miss Johnson's admirable Bible teaching for children; and yet there is wonderful fascination and power, born, I verily believe, of God's Spirit, in forming and guiding a young teacher of unusual natural ability, training and consecration. It is her second season in public work at summer assemblies. Her "Little People's Class" here had seventy members, and the "Young Folks' Class" forty-five. Of the last-named thirty completed the summer's course in general Bible study, and yesterday received diplomas signed by Bishop Vincent, Lewis Miller and others of the Chautauqua Bible School.

This morning Rev. Thos. F. Gailor, vice-chancellor of the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., delivered a scholarly lecture on John Ruskin, whom he characterized as preeminently the apostle of art, as well as philosopher, poet, philanthropist, etc. . . . "The high priest of nature, discovering its secrets to us under the charm of rythmic language." Prof. Manning, of Boston Conservatory of Music, completes, to-morrow night, a delightful series of "Musical Conversations," in which he has introduced successively most of the great composers, giving brief sketches of their several histories, with descriptive outline of the selection about to be played. Prof. Manning is a rare interpreter, both by word and touch on the keys.

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey.

I see from a memoriam written on the death of the Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, by Bros. T. C. Wier and J. Bancroft, that they were under the impression that he was converted during the revival at Demopolis, Ala., in 1843, which is a mistake. He was converted two or three years previous, whilst a student at the Alabama State University, at Tuscaloosa, under the pastorate of Bro. Hardy, who died in Tuscaloosa, the same year, with typhoid fever. Bishop Andrew had a talk with my dear brother, some months after his conversion, about preaching. He told him that he had been somewhat impressed in that way, but was not fully satisfied as to a call to the ministry.

He went from college to Demopolis, Ala., and studied law under the Hon. Frank Lyon; completed his course and was admitted to the bar. Shortly after this Dr. Jesse Boring held the first Quarterly Conference there that was ever held there, and organized the first Methodist Church at that place, consisting of five members, namely: T. Y. Ramsey, Bro. Taliaferro, wife and daughter, Bro. Lewis McCarty. The meeting was continued, and such a revival as it never has been my fortune to witness since, and never forgotten by the few that are left who witnessed it. At that meeting he was wonderfully revived, and decided to take up his cross and enter the ministry. He then joined the Alabama Conference the following Winter at Columbus, Miss., and was sent to Rembert Hill circuit. From that time, during his long life, he took work from the Alabama and North Mississippi Conferences up to the time he was superannuated, which I think was about two years previous to his death, excepting three years he taught in the Centenary College, at Summerfield, on account of a throat trouble.

There never lived a better man. He was true and good from childhood, loved and honored by all of his family. I visited him last winter, and found him a ripe shock ready for the garner. How sad it is to know that we shall see him no more in the flesh; but it will not be long before we shall meet at Jesus' feet to part no more. We know where to find him. God bless his precious family!

His loving sister,
MARY G. BANCROFT.

Beautify Parsonage-Homes.

I heartily enjoyed T. C. Wier's article, "Summer-Tide at the Parsonage." It was so different from the article of T. L. Mellen, last year, where he describes a parsonage-home upon his district, whose roof permitted its occupants to gaze upon the stars at night.

The minister is God's ambassador; his home must glorify God, externally and internally. Neatly-painted parsonages, enclosed with secure fencing, and then white-washed, reflect credit upon the community adjacent. Room for beautiful flowers is not wasted space. It should be stocked with the choicest roses, crysanthemums, hyacinths, tuba-roses, violets and other out-door plants. A "pit" ought to be located in a sheltered spot to protect pot plants during the cold of Winter.

It would be well in securing parsonage property to think about room for peaches, plums, apples, pears, walnuts and pecans. Preachers' children appreciate a bountiful supply of these toothsome delicacies. Let every pastor guard carefully the fruit and nut-bearing trees, and be sure that the parsonage horse and calves find pasturage outside of the flower garden and orchard. Let every preacher keep up a succession of trees of all kinds for the benefit of those that follow. When preachers will take proper care of the parsonage-homes, the people will delight to provide them.

The trustees of parsonage property ought to prefer charges against the character of any pastor that allows stock to destroy or children to mutilate the trees and shrubbery of the parsonage.

Oh! for more parsonages like the one at Starksville, Miss.

Sprouting the Pecan.

Last week's ADVOCATE contains an interesting article about planting pecans, from Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D. Go over to his country home in Harrison county, about seven miles north of Mississippi City, and you will perceive that he practices what he preaches. For many years of my itinerant life I have been planting nut and fruit trees in our parsonage-homes for my successors.

The pecan will readily sprout if buried in the ground as soon as it matures. If kept out of the earth until as late as February, by placing the nuts in an open glass or porcelain jar filled with water, kept fresh, and allowing them to remain until so watersoaked that the nuts fall to the bottom, then planted, they will sprout the same Spring.

This April I was at Col. W. R. Stuart's home in Ocean Springs, Miss. He gave me three nuts of his choicest varieties; but alas! it was too late to sprout them this year. Coming home April 5, I resolved to experiment with them. With a sharp knife I pared both ends and two sides, until I laid bare the spongy inner coating, not touching the kernel. On the sides I left part of the shell intact. Next they were placed in water to soak, and on April 15 placed in the ground. During a dry spell that followed I kept the earth about the nuts watered. In about four weeks I was rejoiced to see my experiment a success.

I say Amen! to Dr. Walker's advice. Plant pecans, but don't waste time and space on small nuts.

The Clara Chrisman Memorial Volume.

I have just read the touching memorial of Clara Chrisman from the pen of her sister, Miss Agnes Chrisman. I perused it with moistened eyes and a throbbing heart. There is running through it a touch of sadness as well as tenderness, which appeals strongly to the sympathies of the reader. At the same time the splendid and heroic example of the peerless Clara Chrisman is an inspiration to flagging zeal; and no heart which is in sympathy with our work can fail to be stirred by the touching story of her young life, with its sudden and tragic ending.

As I read I said to myself, "Oh! that this little volume could be scattered broadcast among our auxiliaries!" It would stir within us new spiritual impulses.

Even the steel-plate portrait possesses a sweet, subtle charm as we gaze upon it, and there is that in the face, with its sensitive, expressive mouth, and the calm, pure look in the dark eyes, which is more beautiful than beauty. Let every young worker in our missionary societies procure and read this tender tribute from a sister's pen and heart.

Woman's Work.

Wesson Auxiliary organized five years ago with twenty members. Growth in the knowledge of the work and its need increased the interest, and it now numbers sixty, and is one that might be called "a live one."

After the opening exercises of the July meeting the president opened a nice experience meeting with a beautiful talk. At roll-call the members answered with a verse of Scripture. They resolved to raise $75 this year to furnish a room in the training-school; and quite a nice sum was contributed.

Meridian Auxiliary rejoiced to welcome home their missionary, Miss Bettie Hughes, Aug. 18, who was called from China on account of her health. Her prostration has caused anxiety. She is very weak, but says her voyage was a great benefit. Time and much care will be required to restore her health.

Received from Mrs. Elliot, ex-president of W. M. Society and P. and H. M. Society, Martin, Miss., $4 dues, $1 self-denial. Societies dead.

Bishop Marvin on Professing Holiness.

We were struck with an expression of Bishop Haygood, quoted by a writer in the last number of the ADVOCATE: "Those who have the most holiness make the least noise about it." We heartily endorse this sentiment; and, in this connection, we desire to call your attention to a remark once made to the writer by that sainted man, Bishop Marvin. If there ever lived a man whose every-day walk was an exemplification of holiness or Christian perfection, he was that man; and, in a conversation with him upon this subject, we remarked that we could find nowhere in the Sacred Scriptures an injunction to profess before the world sanctification, in the sense of Christian perfection, and we shall never forget his reply: "My opinion is that the best way to profess sanctification is to live it."

THE TRUE CHILDREN OF GOD.

LESSON TEXT.

John viii, 31-47.

MEMORY VERSES.—33-36.

CRITICAL NOTES.

BY PRESIDENT TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

Verses 31, 32. At the close of the account of the discourse of Jesus as given in the preceding verses, the evangelist says, "As he spake these things, many believed on him." It is to these persons that Jesus now addresses himself, or, rather, to a part of them, who belonged to the body called in this gospel "the Jews;" that is, the hostile body which was hostile to Jesus. Some of this body had been so far impressed that they were ready to believe, for the moment at least, that he was the Messiah. Their belief, however, as we see by what follows, was not the true faith which Jesus asked for. He knew what was in man, and, therefore, he did not trust himself to them. He shows, by his very opening words, precisely what was wanting in them. They must come to know the truth by abiding in his word if they would have the freedom essential to the soul's true life; that is, freedom from the bondage of sin. The abiding in the word of Christ as the sonroe and sphere of the life is the characteristic of permanent and real discipleship. The abiding in such discipleship gives assurance of the attainment and possession of the knowledge of the truth. This possession frees the man from the dominion of evil.

Verses 33-36. The persons who answered Jesus here are the persons who have just before been mentioned. They affirmed themselves to be already free. They were, in the full sense of the words, "Abraham's seed." As such, they knew no experience of bondage. The meaning which their words conveyed was, according to the best explanation which we may give, that they were possessed, and always had been possessed, of freedom in their individual life. The dignity of a free man, as Godet says, shone on the brow of everyone who bore the name of child of Abraham. Their words had no reference to the subordination of their nation to the Roman power. This, of course, they could not have denied. The answer which Jesus gives draws their minds at once to the spiritual sense of his words. He was speaking, not of the slavery of the civil condition, but of the slavery of the spiritual condition. The bondservant, who needs to be made free, is the man who commits sin. From such bondage deliverance comes through the knowledge of the truth which is gained in the discipleship of Christ. By the words of verse 35, Jesus suggests the thought that, as committing sin, they can not expect to abide permanently in the kingdom of God. They must become free from sin's power through the gift which the Son bestows upon them, if they would possess the freedom which secures and assures such permanent abiding.

Verses 37, 38. Jesus now, in the development of his discourse and its thought in the spiritual sphere, affirms that he knows their descent from Abraham in the outward and physical sense of the word; but denies it in the deeper and truer sense. You are not Abraham's spiritual children, he says, for you do not, in your actions, exhibit his spirit. Your actions, which you do and desire to do, are suggested from another source. As I speak from my Father and his impelling power, you get from the impulse given by your father—another father than mine, another father than Abraham. Ye seek to kill me: There is a difficulty in supposing that these particular persons whom he was addressing, and who are described as "those Jews which had believed him," were themselves seeking to kill him. But the party to which they belonged had such designs and desires, and he saw that they were ready to turn back to their old party when their superficial faith failed. Hath not free course: Or, as the margin renders it, "hath no place in you." The word finds no place for working or abiding, or no possibility of making progress, because of the sin which is in their hearts. Verse 38 gives the reason and ground of the last statement. The totally different source of your actions as contrasted with that of my words is the reason and ground of the result. The origin of thought and action is presented, by reason of the course which the conversation has taken, as starting from the phrase "Abraham's seed," under the figure of children and a father. Who their father is, is set forth afterwards.

Verses 39, 40. The Jews again affirm, and apparently with a repelling of his charge against them as both false and insulting, that they are Abraham's seed. "Our father" is none other than Abraham. Jesus presses still farther his own thought, in the same line as before. The relationship of children to a father has a deeper significance than the mere physical connection. The son of the father may not be the son of that father when the spiritual relationship is considered. They were ready to kill a man who told them the divine truth. Their spirit was the very opposite of that of Abraham. He presses upon them what they were conscious of as a fact—their own evil desire and purpose. The works of Abraham spring from the spirit of Abraham. They had no such spirit.

Verses 41-43. The thought of the Jews, in their answer to Jesus' declaration that they do the works of their father, turns from the direct line of the preceding verses. As Jesus denies their relation of sonship to Abraham, and evidently affirms such a relation to another, notwithstanding all that they have said, it occurs to them that he may be referring to sonship in another sense. But, in this other sense, as legitimate children of Abraham, they were and must be children of God. We are the true descendants of Abraham, and so we are true sons of God. He is our Father. Jesus again presses them with the spiritual idea. The spiritual children of a common father love one another. If you were children of God in the true sense, you would love me, the Son of God, the one who came forth from him. This expression "came forth" indicates a pre-existent state in union with God. For: The sentence now introduced gives a ground and proof of the sentence preceding—the same ground and proof which we find presented elsewhere in this Gospel. The fact that he does not come of himself, and thus of his own self-determination and choice, indicates the truth of his assertion of his coming from God. Why do ye not understand? Jesus now presses upon them the reason of their failure to get any true apprehension of the significance of what he had said. The word "speech" seems, as distinguished from the following "word," to refer to the expression of the thought—the language in which the thoughts were uttered. The "word," on the other hand, is here equivalent to the contents of the word, the doctrine. "In the state of mind in which you are," Jesus says, "you can not hear, with appreciation of its meaning, my doctrine; and, as you can not do this, you must also fail to understand my speaking."

Verse 44. Jesus now plainly declares his meaning, and charges them with being children of the devil; and in the second sentence he again brings out the spiritual relationship which is indicated by their desires and actions. It is your will to do what you are inspired to do by your father; his desires are yours. He was a murderer from the beginning: The reference in these last words is more commonly supposed to be the introduction of death into the world through sin. And stood not in the truth: Or, as the margin has it, "standeth." The connection of the spirit of murder with falsehood, as opposed to truth, corresponds with the thought already presented in the discourse.

Verses 45-47. The word "I" in verse 45 is emphatic, in contrast to "the devil" spoken of in verse 44. The first clause of verse 46 contains the evidence of the truthfulness. He fearlessly challenges them to show any sin in him. The only explanation of their attitude toward him is, and must be, that they are not of God.—Sunday-School Times.

The record of cures accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilla can never be completely written. The peculiar curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are successful when everything else has failed. If your blood is impure, your digestion out of order, try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Louisiana Notes.

Baton Rouge is getting ready to have a "free delivery of the mail."

Bossier parish has property amounting to $2,260,255, of which $960,955 belongs to non-residents.

New Iberia is engaged in raising $2,000 to erect a commodious and handsome public school building.

At Centerville an organization has been effected for the purpose of raising funds to sustain a public school throughout the year.

The Evergreen levee, three miles below Plaquemine, has been completed. It is 3,400 feet long, containing 76,806 cubic feet, and cost $20,000.

A dispatch from Washington says that the Courtableau River Mills were put in successful operation last week. This is a fine comment on the energy and enterprise of that section.

Plaquemine's town council has decided to hold an election to determine whether or not a special tax of five mills on all assessable property in the town shall be levied to insure waterworks. The election will be held Oct. 1.

The sugar refinery in process of construction at Lake Charles, the Echo says, will be a great benefit to that growing city. "Besides giving employment to a good number of people, it will naturally make all sugar cane productions cheaper."

Vicksburg Herald:

Capt. H. B. Thompson, of Louisiana engineers, is in the city, and reports a reasonable certainty that work will be commenced on the levees in the Fifth Louisiana District in the next thirty days, under government, State and district auspices. There is a great deal of work to be done in this district, and it is desired that the beginning shall be as early as possible.

The Telegraph-Bulletin has this:

The Monroe Compress and Warehouse Company is making preparations for increased business and better facilities for handling cotton. In addition to the already large warehouse facilities, another warehouse, 91 feet wide by 384 feet long, is to be built fronting on Walnut street. This will insure the protection from weather, without the use of tarpaulins, of all cotton shipped to the press.

The Telegraph-Bulletin, of Monroe, says:

The ordinance passed at the last session of the city council, and published in the Telegraph-Bulletin last week, providing for uniform sidewalks of non-combustible material, is a step in the right direction, and, if properly enforced, will soon give us good and durable sidewalks on all of our principal streets. Our sidewalks have long been an eyesore and disgrace, and it is with pride and pleasure that we note the proposed improvement.

The American says:

On last Saturday we visited the Lake Charles foundry and machine shops, and witnessed the second "heat" of the foundry, which was a complete success, and resulted in over three hundred perfect castings of all sizes and descriptions, from a common window-weight to a large fly-wheel. Mr. Ellis, the president of the company, feels perfectly satisfied with the start he has made and the prospect for business at this place.

"Don't Kick If You Are Sick."

Creole Female Tonic makes the weak woman strong, and sends new blood bounding through the veins, imparting new life and strength to the weakened parts.

It stimulates nature to its work with the happiest effect. We commend it to suffering women everywhere, as a sovereign remedy for their peculiar ailments.

Mississippi Items.

A hotel and five stores were burned in Carrollton recently. Loss estimated at $25,000.

H. Kernaghen has been appointed to the United States Land Office in Jackson, in place of R. C. Kerr, deceased.

Ex-Mayor R. C. Beck, of Vicksburg, died recently. He is said to have been a man "foremost in all public affairs, and will be greatly missed."

Washington county, according to the Greenville Times, has now only 1,736 voters—500 colored and 1,236 white. The old registered vote was 7,750.

The Board of Aldermen for Meridian has passed an ordinance ordering an election to authorize the issuance of $75,000 in bonds for sewers and street improvements.

Miss Susie G. Kilbourne has leased the Female Academy at Fayette, Miss., and will conduct that well-known institution with the help of able and experienced assistants.

The directors of the Madison County Fair have elected Dr. George Smith secretary, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Capt. E. L. Ross. Superintendents were appointed for the various departments, and everything is now in good working shape for the next fair, which begins Nov. 3, and continues four days.

The West Point Forum talks of a lady in that section who has a side-saddle made in 1817, and has been constantly in use and is well preserved. She also has a table-cloth and coverlet spun and woven by her mother over sixty years ago, both in good condition. She also has a husband who "has one of the best kept, best cultivated and most productive farms in Mississippi." What a fortunate woman! Her name is Mrs. Joseph Hill.

Clarke county Times:

The ladies of the Methodist Church at Stonewall have formed a Wesleyan Aid Society, with twenty-one members, with Mrs. W. M. King, president; Miss Mamie Morgan, secretary, and Mrs. Charles Roseberry, treasurer. They will serve cake and ice cream every Saturday to the public for the benefit of the Methodist Church.

Our national game without Johnson's Anodyne Liniment to rub the heroes? Impossible!

Sabbath Reform.

The American Sabbath Union is divided for field work into districts. The territory east of Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi is under the supervision of the general secretary, Rev. J. H. Knowles, D. D., 23 Park Row, New York, and the corresponding secretary, Rev. Wm. J. R. Taylor, D. D., Washington, D. C. Eighteen central States are under the supervision of Rev. Jas. P. Mills, of Chicago, Ill. The territory west of the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and Texas, are under the supervision of Rev. Edward Thompson, D. D., of San Francisco, Cal.

Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, who was field secretary the first year, resigned all official relation to the Union, March, 1890. Under the supervision of the efficient general secretaries and the able corps of district and local field secretaries, the work of organizing auxiliary societies is progressing rapidly, and the friends of the American Sabbath have much to encourage them in their opposition to the encroachments of the degrading, vice-engendering influences of the continental Sunday, and the tyranny of Sunday commerce, business and traffic.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

WINDOW SHADES!

Our offering of dropped styles of shades at half price was so successful last summer that we have concluded to repeat the same this year. By dropped styles we mean the styles which will not be made this coming fall and which we will, therefore, be unable to get duplicates of. The goods are perfect and on the best quality of spring fixtures with a handsome band. We will sell and others in proportion. The larger sizes of shades are what they use principally in the South, and there has never been an opportunity of buying them as low as this. We will accompany the drive with standard makes of Table Oil Cloth at 15 cents per yard. Floor Oil Cloth, Wall Paper, Matting and Rugs we are running out at very low figures, and you will save money by buying now.

A 7x42 Shade at 75c.; worth $1.50,
An 8x38 Shade at 100c.; worth $2,

Briefs.

"To learn what a man is," said Dr. Channing, "it is not enough to dissect his mind and see separately the thoughts and feelings which successively possess him. The question is, what thoughts and feelings predominate, stand out most distinctly, and give a hue and impulse to the common actions of his mind. What are his great thoughts? These form the man."

Dr. R. Q. Mallard, a Presbyterian minister of this city, is in the fore-front of the Lottery fight, and doing valiant service for the cause of right. He has laid upon our table a little tract, entitled, "It Is a Black Man's Question," in which he shows that the Lottery question is eminently a matter in which the colored people are directly and vitally interested. This tract ought to be circulated among the colored people. Copies can be had free from E. S. Upton, 94 Camp St.

One of the best illustrations of good example is the following:

The Rev. T. R. Stephenson says, in a sermon quoted in the Chinese Recorder, of February, 1891: "During a recent visit to Japan I met with a gentleman who mentioned an incident which I can never forget. One rarely hears anything more impressive. He knew a missionary in China who one day encountered a Chinaman. The latter had been in the habit of watching the conduct of the former, and that very narrowly. He said, 'I want your God to be my God.' The missionary answered, 'What do you mean?' 'I wish to be of the same religion as you.' 'Why do you?' 'Because if your God is like you, he must be good.'"

If every Christian would live that sort of an example, the world would be turned upside down in a month.

Some of our friends do not accept everything that Prof. Drummond has said; but we think he is about right in what follows:

"It is not worth while being religious," he says, "unless you are altogether religious. It won't do to be merely playing at religion or having religion on us as a bit of veneer. It must saturate us. Some seek first the kingdom of God; others put it in a second place. Then prayer meetings are dull, and fellowship gatherings are uninteresting; but the moment a man begins to seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness, all things are right. To any man who has not heartily thrown himself into the kingdom of God, but who is seeking secondly the kingdom of God, he may be religious; but there is something he loves more, and both worlds are spoiled to him. He has neither the cream of the one nor of the other. The great desideratum of the present day is not more Christians, but a better brand of Christians."

A Monument to Mrs. Bishop Key.

Prompted by the love I bear for the Master's cause, and for the memory of our now sainted sister, I have been moved to raise a sum for the purpose of erecting a building on the grounds of the Polytechnic College, at Fort Worth, in memory of her. This is done without the knowledge of any who may seem to be concerned in the material interest of the college. This is simply the announcement. My plans will be published in the future. In the meantime, if any of her friends desire to contribute anything, let them write me at this place. Let us honor the memory of our dead in a substantial way. We want none only free-will offerings. As soon as my plans are developed I will publish them.

I. Z. T. MORRIS.

Fort Worth, Tex., Aug. 25, 1891.

Too Highly Seasoned.

It appears that some of the preaching of the present day is getting to be too highly seasoned. Some preachers use too much intellectual condiment. The idea seems to be that the intellectual palate must be aroused and stimulated very highly before it can appropriate and assimilate gospel truth. As some persons sprinkle a great deal of pepper and spread much mustard on their meat to make it palatable, so some preachers appear to think that the truth of God must be sprinkled over and covered up with a sort of moral condiment to make it palatable to the hearers. Too much pepper or mustard on food interferes with, if it does not arrest, the process of digestion, and the power to produce healthy muscle is greatly weakened. So gospel truth that is highly seasoned with words and thoughts and illustrations and dramatic action to produce a mental or spiritual sensation is not of much account as a producer of healthy moral muscle! The mental and spiritual apparatus is worked to complete weariness to assimilate the sensation, so that when in this process of assimilation the truth is reached, there is not left enough power to digest it. All the vigor is expended on the high seasoning. As far as we have observed it, sensational preaching produces very little lasting effect. The reason is plain enough. As the body is not, and can not be, nourished by condiments, so the soul is not, and can not be, nourished by sensations. Physiologists tell us that condiments tend to destroy the tone of the digestive powers, and, therefore, impair their vigor and vitality. Observant and thoughtful men and women say the same thing in regard to sensational preaching. They say it destroys the tone of the spiritual powers and impairs their vigor and vitality to extract nourishment from the truth of the gospel. The more sensational the preaching, the more this serious impairment goes on, until the hearer actually considers the plain truth as insipid and refuses to take it.

High seasoning is not good for building up. It is true, it makes the eyes open wide and sometimes causes the tears to flow copiously, but it tends to sear the membrane of the mouth and throat and stimulates the organs to so high a degree that they can not perform their functions properly. So sensational preaching opens people's eyes with astonishment and tickles their ears with wonderful sayings and startles their minds with its unexpectedness, but it fails to lay the great, balmy truths of the gospel upon the sore and bleeding heart of the sinner. The result of such preaching is degeneration of spiritual experience and deterioration of spiritual life. The gospel that results thus is not the gospel that men need. Men are degenerate enough and their lives are inferior enough at their best. They need a gospel that regenerates and improves. The simple truth of God alone can do such work. It don't need any high seasoning. The spiritual apparatus will digest the simple truth best. So let us eschew the sensational and present the truth—the simple gospel of Jesus Christ.

The Missionary Debt.

We were meditating an article on the above subject when our eyes fell upon Bro. Dubose's editorial on the same subject in the Pacific Methodist Advocate, of Aug. 20. This being so much abler than any we can write, we transfer it entire to our editorial columns and ask our readers to give it a careful reading.

Much is being said and written about the deficit of one hundred and eighteen thousand dollars in the missionary collections for the last fiscal year. Much is always written about such things, and much more is said than written. Alas! we are too much given to taking such things out in ink dashing and vocal gymnastics. A multitude of plans have been proposed by which the debt is to be speedily liquidated. We Methodists are great to plan, and often swift to execute—but not always, because some plans are not feasible and some not even rational. Some Methodist plans for paying missionary deficits are not.

We are particularly impatient at the plans which propose to pay this sum in a given number of pence per head of all our Methodist household. That would weave a cloak for parsimony and meanness. Let it not be thought of. The saying of Jabez Bunting: "Methodism is justification by faith and a shilling a week," was a wholesome rule for the days when the people called Methodists were poor; but now that they have grown rich and have great possessions, it has no meaning except in reminiscence. The only way to pay this debt is to pay it, or rather not to pay it, as such. Let our great church gird herself for a new movement.

Let the Conferences, soon to meet, make new and large pledges, new and larger assessments, and let one great cry, as of an archangel in mid-heaven, ring through the church from sea to sea, and let a great spirit of cheerful, thankful giving take possession of the ranks, and this deficit will be swept down the tide of our unselfishness like a handful of dust over Niagara. When we begin to haggle and make provision for a deficit, we shall lose sight of the wider meaning of Christian giving.

But we would not depreciate the significance of this debt. It is a bitter, almost insupportable, feeling to have a debt of this nature on hand and not be able to discharge it. But we can not but fear that too much has been made of it. It is a reproach to the manhood of the church, to say nothing about the piety and loyalty of our profession. We know six men in the laity of the church who could discharge the whole sum and never feel it. There is but one way to pay our debt, and that is to pay it.

Our Domestic Mission Work.

MR. EDITOR: Your leader of this week contains a couple of sentences that are very suggestive, because they touch the economy of our church at a very vital point. You say, speaking of the presiding elder: "He said there was not a circuit with a preacher on it that was unable to support that preacher well." Then you comment by saying: "Let the Board in distributing the domestic (mission) fund remember that, and give out the money where it is most needed."

It is hardly necessary that I should warn the Board against a rash action of this kind, for this presiding elder is not likely to claim less than he can get to assist some of these able circuits. If he is a man of experience, he well knows that in the order of grace it is often out of deep poverty that liberality abounds, and not out of wealth. He will not be willing deliberately to sacrifice a preacher to the greed of those who have nothing but ability as a guarantee of his support. No one doubts the ability of the church to pay at once the hundred-thousand-dollar missionary debt, and in full all the current assessments. But will it do it?

There is a growing feeling (or ought to be) that our domestic mission policy is wrong. It is wrong because its results are not satisfactory. The foreign mission work, no doubt, is managed with great prudence and business tact. That field is entered which seems most inviting, the workers are chosen with special reference to their adaptation, liberal support is given, and all is carefully and constantly supervised.

Our presiding elders are expected to look after the unoccupied territory within our bounds and to have men assigned to it at our Annual Conference sessions. But how is it done? If we have a brother for whom we have no other use, we put him on a mission, and to reconcile him to his fate we give him a hundred or two dollars. He fills the appointment and gets his money, and that is all there is of it. It is a mission still, and not likely, by the grace of such a policy, to ever be anything but a mission. It is thus preserved as a sort of Siberian waste to which to relegate the unacceptables. This policy is a wrong to the mission, for it is a mere pretence of giving them the gospel. It is a wrong to those who give the money, for it is a waste and misapplication of the money. It is an abuse of opportunity and a neglect of souls. The church is thus kept from expansion and legitimate growth at home.

Our Baptist brethren are wiser. They give as much or more to their State mission work as to their foreign work. They put a strong man in the field as secretary, strong men to occupy the territory as missionaries, and the result is progress at home.

Let us put our domestic mission work under a wise and progressive management. Is it wise for us to become so absorbed in our foreign work as to allow others to supplant us at home? Let us put strong men to work in the unoccupied territory at home, and support them. Is a man unwilling to take this work? What sort of zeal is that that will carry one to China or Mexico to save souls, and will fail him at home? J. W. MEDLOCK.

[We have seen nothing in the prints that has pleased us so well as the foregoing brief article from Bro. Medlock. We trust that the reader will ponder it well. The real fact seems to us to be, that if we do not change our method of domestic mission work, some one else will be called of God to take our place. EDITOR.]

"Wresting the Scriptures."

BY "X."

In your issue, for Aug. 27, I see an article by "Z." on "The Second Blessing Theory," in which, in paragraph 2, he speaks of "wresting the Scriptures," and making them mean what they, manifestly, do not mean in support of this theory, and of other preposterous notions. If I am not mistaken, this is an evil all too common in this day and time. By way of illustration, I give you the outline of a sermon I heard on the "second blessing" from this text—James i, 8: "A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways." It is to be understood that I write from memory, and give the impressions made on my mind and on the minds of others. By way of introduction, the preacher said this Epistle was addressed to the church, and was intended for Christians, or converted persons, only. He dwelt on this at some length, but why he did so did not appear till later on. Now, said he, it is well known that sinners, unconverted persons, have but one mind—a mind to serve the devil, and so they are not double-minded, and, hence, they are not unstable in their ways. He bore down on this point heavily. His next proposition was that as soon, or soon after, one was converted, or regenerated, he found in himself a double mind, or two minds: one to serve God and one to serve the devil. This, he said, accounted for the instability of church members, and even preachers of the gospel—they are double-minded and unstable in all their ways. For three-quarters of an hour he painted the present condition of professors of religion and preachers in the blackest colors.

He said, in so many words, "I can match any sin committed by the worst of men by one of like character committed by a church member—perhaps by a preacher." He named a long catalogue of sins from murder down to white lies. All this, said he, comes of being converted, regenerated and going no further. What we need is a "second blessing" — sanctification, another and complete work, to take the "devil-mind" out of us, and so to leave us with only one mind, a mind for God. If we seek and secure this blessing, we will then be stable in all our ways. This is the only cure for the ills that now afflict us. Here he detailed his own experience as an illustration of his exposition of this text. His experience and his exposition harmonized most beautifully. Whether the experience was made to harmonize with the Word, or the Word with the experience, exercised my mind greatly.

I understood this brother to say that the confusion and apparent contradictions of Mr. Wesley grew out of his having made too much of regeneration; he left no room for sanctification. He said that the statistics showed to a demonstration that ninety-five per cent. of those who came into this blessed state came by faith, as a "second blessing," and instantaneously. He said that the only way to retain this blessing, when once obtained, was to profess it at all times, in all places and under all circumstances. Here he gave his experience in having obtained it, and having lost it from a failure to profess it, and then of having obtained it again, and having enjoyed it for some years past.

I paid the closest attention to this discourse, and I have tried to set down fairly what was said. I have put down exactly the impression made on my mind. I know how difficult it is to report exactly what was said, and know how ready a reporter is to attribute to the speaker thoughts and impressions that passed through his own mind. I regarded this sermon as a shameful, if not sinful, perversion of God's Holy Word—the "wresting of Scripture"—in support of a theory. To my mind it smacks of falsehood to say a text of Scripture teaches thus and so, when any well-informed fifteen-year-old boy or girl can see at a glance that such things were not in the mind of the Spirit when the text was written.

To the Prohibitionists of Mississippi.

I cordially endorse the call of the chairman of the Executive Committee for a non-partisan Prohibition Convention, to be held in the city of Jackson, Sept. 9, 1891. It is hoped that as many counties as possible will be represented. There is need for consultation and important action. Much has been accomplished—large vantage-ground secured; but in order to conserve the fruits of past labor and push forward the great reform, there is demand for revived interest, united purpose and more thorough organization. Believing most profoundly in the wisdom of keeping this movement disentangled from party politics—assured that the speediest and largest results will thereby be achieved—I would urge an earnest and jealous continuance of that general policy. Party prohibitionists have their Executive Committee and have held a State Convention. Their convictions should be respected and their high patriotic purposes unquestioned. That the widest harmony may prevail and the most perfect unity inspire zeal and effort, it seems eminently proper that we should work under different organizations, avoid controversies with each other, and keep our faces to the common foe. We have nothing to dispirit us. Under the changed conditions imposed by our new Constitution our cause may soon become a conquest.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss.

Notes.

Christians ought to be people who remind others of Jesus Christ.

"The missionary work of a church is both fruit and measure of its inner spiritual life."

New terms, some expressive and some impressive and some repressive, are continually coming into use. You don't now say that "he preaches a long sermon;" you say, "He lacks terminal facilities."

The Methodist itinerant who threatens to locate if he does not get an appointment in a certain section is evidently breaking, by anticipation, the spirit of his solemn vow, voluntarily made to the church.

Talmage says:

If our young men in the ministry want large audiences, let them quit philosophizing, and hair-splitting, and botanizing, and without gloves take hold of men's sins and troubles, and there will be no lack of hearers. Stagnation is worse than sensationalism.

A modern writer on economics says: "Half our woes would disappear if all classes would forego the lust of wealth." That may be true, but we may be sure that "half our woes" will not disappear, for all classes are not going to "forego the lust of wealth."

The Richmond Christian Advocate calls attention to a "trio of great orators," of whom the people think too little. They are, "The Lust of the Flesh, the Lust of the Eye, and the Pride of Life." You have read of them; have you never listened to their eloquent pleading?

We find this going the rounds of our religious exchanges:

By a recent meeting held in New Orleans resolutions were adopted declaring that if nothing else could accomplish the purpose, the people of Louisiana would resort to violence to destroy the Lottery.

No such resolutions were ever passed by any meeting held in New Orleans.

Prohibition—temperance conviction run into the mold of government—waits upon majorities. In a republic, law must be written upon hearts of flesh before it can be transcribed upon the stone, tablets of the State. Could it be enacted without, it would be unavailing, for government, without at least majority consent of the governed, will always breed rebellion upon republican soil. Prohibition with the people behind it is never a failure.—Union Signal.

The thing to do then is educate the people to get behind prohibition and keep it strong and going ahead.

We have received from Rev. J. S. Clower, of the Arkansas Conference, a little pamphlet containing two of his sermons; one on "Christian Education," and the other, "The Ideal Man." The sermon on education is a fresh and vigorous discussion of that well-worn, but still important theme, and we think will do good service. The other is a masonic sermon, and reads well, we suppose, to members of that fraternity.

From a sermon:

My sister, you don't allow your fourteen-year-old girl to prowl about on the streets at night! Why do you let your boy do it? You that are raising your sons in idleness and allowing them to loiter on the streets by day, and remain out at night, would do the world less harm if you gave your time and attention to raising rattlesnakes and turning them loose on the community. Where one man in our land has been killed by a rattlesnake, one hundred has been slain by a badly raised boy.

If faithfully followed, this prescription will do some of our readers good. Try it and see.

Take one ounce of personal examination; three grains of think-twice-before-you-speak-once; eight ounces of tend-to-your-own-business; eight ounces of let-other-people's-alone; two ounces of gossip killer; ten ounces of the golden rule; mix well with faithful prayer. Shake well before using, and take an hour-glass full every two hours.

It is the deliberate opinion of a thoughtful writer that thousands of people "are swamping their brains in a sea of newspaper reading." The way they do this is by permitting the newspapers to do their thinking for them. Newspaper reading is good if properly utilized; but if it supercedes thinking on our part, it is undoubtedly harmful to the mental powers. Thinking is the normal process for strengthening and enlarging the mind. To allow it to be done by others results always in dwarfing.

We have often wondered why there is apparently less of fasting and self-denial among Christians of to-day than among those of former generations. Lately we came across this paragraph which seems to explain the why:

The very conditions of modern sanctity may be said in a sense to have changed, so changed are we. To our generation uncompromising facts and severities of conduct are found to be piteously alien; not because, as rash censors say, we are too luxurious, but because we are too nervous, intricate, devitalized. We find our austerities ready-made. The east wind has displaced the discipline, dyspepsia the hair-shirt. We require spurs to being, not a snaffle to rein back the ardor of being. Man is his own mortification. It would be strange, therefore, if so tender a mother as the church had maintained the rigidities of discipline evolved for a race at once ruder and hardier than ourselves.

Rev. C. A. Powell.

Tuesday morning we received notes from Bro. Harmon and Bro. Beall in regard to the condition of Bro. Powell, our pastor at Moss Point. Since the report last week, he has been attacked with sciatica and is "almost helpless." Let the prayers of the church go up for him.

Personal and Otherwise.

Over 350 accessions to our church are reported in this issue!

The postoffice address of Rev. H. M. Banks is now Babb's Bridge, La.

"Subscriber" is respectfully informed that we can not publish his article until we know the author.

Our country exchanges are so full of politics that we can give our readers but few "Mississippi Items" and "Louisiana Notes" this week.

Prof. Robert Frazer, LL.D., of Anniston, Ala., has been elected president of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss.

We regret to learn from a private note that Bro. N. S. Cornell, our pastor at Waterproof, La., is in rather poor health. We trust the autumn winds and weather will effect an entire recovery.

We rejoice to know that our brethren in Oxford, Miss., have their new and handsome church-building well on to completion. Bro. S. D. Long and his people deserve all praise for the success of their efforts.

Dr. Potter, one of our missionary secretaries, has been in the West for some time, visiting the Conferences and stirring up the church in that region on the mission work. We need stirring now if we ever needed it.

A very interesting and informing document is the fifth Annual Report of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society, for the year ending March 31, 1891. In it are facts and figures and suggestions that will do you good to read.

Rev. Felix G. Davis, of Grand Lake, Ark., sent in fourteen new subscribers last week under the fifty cents offer of the publisher. He says, "I spent the day yesterday canvassing, and send you the names and money." Why can't every local preacher and every itinerant do as well?

C. C. Miller, a B. S. graduate of Centenary College, and a son of the late Prof. A. G. Miller, and a teacher of eight years' experience, has been elected as the principal of the Preparatory Department of Centenary. The college opened the session, Sept. 2, with a full faculty.

Some of our pastors are writing model reports of their meetings. Last week we published eighteen such on the first page—the best reading we have given in some time. Some of them, however, were a little too long. Abbreviate, beloved, that we may give as much of this good news each week as possible.

Brethren, send along the good news. Boil it down into a thick syrup, and send it along. Postal cards are plentiful and cheap. Facts, brethren, facts. Let the fancies run only in your own minds. See how interesting are those short reports on the first page. Our present arrangement of the paper is pleasing the readers.

The last number of the Southern Christian Advocate is devoted to education, and particularly Wofford College. It contains articles of great interest and value; sketches of the college and its founder and its work and its prospects. It is also illustrated. We congratulate the editor on this issue of his valuable paper.

We return thanks to Miss M. E. Compton, of Port Gibson, for a catalogue of her flourishing school, Port Gibson Female College. The school is well equipped in every department, and the work done is of a high grade. There is nothing to fear in sending your daughter to Miss Compton, and many good results will come of it.

A correspondent writes: "My letter came out promptly and without a mistake. One only half as long was printed, about the same time, by another paper and came out with seven mistakes." The letter referred to was two columns and one-third long. We are doing our best, and this commendation encourages us to continue.

A subscriber writes: "Allow me to congratulate you on the splendid 'make-up' of last week's edition of the ADVOCATE. It was indeed a gem of both literary and mechanical execution, and I don't recall just now a paper within the scope of my observation that can compare with it in the sphere." That refreshes us with new courage and determination.

A note from Rev. T. B. Holloman says: "We reached home safely a few days since. On our arrival at the depot we were met by brethren who cared for us kindly. Our reception at the parsonage (which had been closed for two months) was after the manner of a new pastor, and that without stint. Pantry and larder all well supplied for weeks to come. A noble, generous people. My health improves daily."

Two Schools.

Bro. Mellen writes thus of two popular schools:

East Mississippi Female College, Meridian, Miss., began another session Wednesday, Sept. 2, under the presidency of C. W. Anderson, who feels "as directly called of God to teach as any man ever was to preach." The college will have the most accomplished faculty it ever has had. The religious influences will be the very best. It never has sent an infidel from its walls, and under its present management never will. The curriculum is high, and honest work is done in every department. There is no show nor false pretenses about it. It is a good, honest, thorough-going Methodist college, where young women are well educated. I commend it to everybody.

Fairview Male and Female College, under the presidency of the Rev. W. W. Morse, of the Mississippi Conference, will soon begin another session. Bro. Morse is assisted by three other able professors and by Mrs. Archibald, an accomplished musician, in charge of the musical department. This school, which is under Methodist auspices, is not sectarian, and can be commended to everybody, and ought to be patronized by the Methodists of Kemper county especially. Our people can send their sons and daughters to Fairview without risk of having their faith in God's Word unsettled, or doubts instilled in their minds concerning the personality or the work of the Holy Ghost. Fairview tolerates nothing inimical to vital experimental religion. It is a good school.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting is announced for Sept. 11. Now, as this is a new enterprise, it may be important to describe its location. It is in East Feliciana parish, eighteen miles east of Slaughter, and five miles west of Grangeville, and on the west side of Amite river. It is some twelve miles southeast of Clinton. The above figures may not be exact, but will, at least, approximate. C. McDONALD.

The Leaf River Camp Meeting will begin Friday before the second Sunday in October. This camp ground has just been inaugurated on the Estabuchie circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, and is located 12½ miles west of Tuscanola Station, on the Northeastern R. R., four miles north of the town of Estabuchie, and twelve miles south of Ellisville, Miss. Those coming by rail will get off at Tuscanola. Ministers are earnestly requested to attend, as well as all others who may so desire.

G. R. ELLIS, P. C.

There will be a camp meeting at the Palmer Camp Ground, Whittington circuit, Seashore district, Mississippi Conference, beginning on the first Sunday in October. Preachers are invited and urged to come. Preachers coming on the L. and N. R. R. will stop off at Gulf Port, Miss., and take Gulf and Ship Island R. R., and stop off at Redmon's Crossing, where they will be met Saturday with conveyance to carry them to the camp ground. There will be a sleeping tent on the camp ground for the accommodation of men, free of charge.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

HOME LIFE.

HER LAST COURSE.

When I married my wife she had studied stenography,
Got that down solid, then took up photography,
Mastered that science and started geography,
All in the course of a year.
She presently took up a course of theology,
Followed that up with a touch of mythology,
Got a degree in the line of zoology,
Still her great mind remained clear.

So she took in a course on the theory of writing,
Some lessons and points on the subject of fighting,
A long course on house-building, heating and lighting,
For ovur her classmates she'd soar.
So she entered the subject of steam navigation,
Took also instruction in church education,
And mastered the study of impersonation,
And still she was longing for more.

Next she tackled the latest fad, electricity,
Dress reform institutes taught her simplicity,
Sought the best way to encourage felicity,
O! she's as smart as a book!
She at last ended up with a course in phonetics,
Gave a little attention and time to athletics,
The rest of her leisure she gave to magnetics,
And now she is learning to cook!

The True Way of Resting.

There are various kinds of rest. A person whose occupation is chiefly carried on by the use of his brain rests that organ when he changes his work to physical labor. Thus a student, who spends eight hours a day in intense mental application, derives immense benefit, not only to his brain, but to his whole system, by a brisk walk of two or three hours, or a like period employed in chopping wood. In such a case as this there is no complete rest for the body; it is simply a change of labor from one kind to another kind. It amounts to nothing more than a proper exercise for the mental and physical systems, and if accompanied with seven or eight hours' sleep and five or six hours for eating and amusement, might be carried on indefinitely in any ordinary healthy locality. The body does not require absolute rest, and, as a matter of fact, it never gets it; for even in sleep there is not inconsiderable functional activity of various organs going on. Such a student as I have referred to would receive great advantage from going to the woods, or the mountains, or the seashore for the Summer, not to lie down in a hammock or to loll on the sand, but to take his books with him, preferably devoted to subjects different from those that he has studied in the city, and to exercise his muscles by rowing a boat or hunting for natural history specimens on land or sea. Such a person not only alters the character of his mental and physical labor, but he does it with such advantages as are to be derived from change of air and scene, and they are by no means inconsiderable. Now, this is not rest; on the contrary, it is work, and very hard work, too; but no one can doubt that that student would return to his regular pursuits with a mind and body invigorated and capable of doing better things than when he left the city. . . . In short, a man or a woman is to be managed in respect to rest in very much the same way that a farmer manages his field. The latter knows the advantage of a succession of crops. He knows that if he plants cabbages every successive year in the same field of ground, he will, in a short time, have very poor cabbages and very poor ground; whereas, by changing from one thing to another, the product is better and the earth is not deteriorated. He knows also how much his land is improved by allowing it to lie fallow every now and then. Men and women, like the fields of the earth, require change, and, like them, they require rest; and these objects can never be attained in the way that the average American sets out to get them.—Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, in North American.

THE ART OF READING ALOUD.—Reading aloud is a pleasing and valuable accomplishment which is much neglected by many people even in this rapidly advancing age. Of course it should not be, for to people in private as well as in public life such an accomplishment would prove very valuable, of which the exact value is difficult to estimate, though it can scarcely be exaggerated. Nothing is further from enjoyment than to be compelled to listen to a poor piece of reading, though happenings of this sort frequently befall us, in which all the humor, harmony and thought of the author seem to vanish from the lines like magic, and which is as embarrassing to the conscious reader as it is distressing to the listener.

It is not from the lack of ability that the average person does not read well, but rather from the lack of practice which is the one great feature in this as other arts, and by which most any intelligent person may become skilled in the art. What a person ought to have in reading aloud is an appreciation of the subject he is to read, and take as much interest to learn the author's intended effect as he would in trying to master a difficult phrase in Latin. And, therefore, when a reader comes upon a line or two which seems to be far from easy to get the real meaning of, he should not hurry on for the sake of getting through, but stop and read it over again, and if he does not then get the desired information, study it until he is satisfied that he has mastered it and has received the author's intended effect. What will make home happier and sweeter than members of the family who can sing or play well upon some instrument? Why then should the art of reading aloud, which would afford equally as much pleasure, and for which one does not need a talent, be encouraged and cultivated in domestic life?—Selected.

MAKING SUNDAY PLEASANT.—The responsibility of making Sunday a pleasant day for the children ought not to fall upon mothers alone. Fathers often excuse themselves on the ground that they have worked hard all the week, and need rest on that day, forgetful of the fact that their wives also have been working through the week. In a certain family Sunday is called "papa's day," because he then devotes himself almost exclusively to the children. He takes one hour for rest, but the remainder of the time is given to them. The mother joins in the plans, but does not assume any care, and thus finds the relief from the watchfulness which she has exercised over them all the week.

In pleasant weather the family take a quiet walk together. This is far better than allowing the boys and girls to go off with companions of their own age. In this household those who are old enough to attend Sunday-school, study the lesson together, and talk about it at the breakfast table. The hour before the little ones retire is spent in singing hymns, ending with a simple devotional service, in which one of the older children reads the Scriptures, and each member of the family offers a short prayer. In this home the children consider Sunday the shortest and pleasantest day in the week.—Congregationalist.

Say Well and Do Well.

A short time before Dean Stanley's death he closed an eloquent sermon with a quaint verse which greatly impressed his congregation. On being asked about it afterwards, he said it was doubtful whether the lines were written by one of the earliest deans of Westminster or by one of the early Scotch Reformers.

The Dean had come upon it by accident, and, feeling that it expressed with singular felicity the true Christian proportion between doctrine and character, between good words and good works, he used it to point and adorn his sermon. Readers may be glad to add it to their collection of good words:

Say well is good, but do well is better;
Do well seems spirit, say well the letter;
Say well is godly, and helpeth to please,
But do well lives godly, and gives the world ease,
Say well to silence sometimes is bound,
But do well is free on every ground;
Say well has friends, some here, some there,
But do well is welcome everywhere;
By say well to many God's Word cleaves,
But for lack of do well it often leaves.
If say well and do well were bound in one frame,
Then all were done, all were won, and gotten were gain.

"BUSTLED OUT OF HIS SPIRITUALITY."—Dr. Chalmers is quoted by the editor of the London Sunday-school Chronicle as saying in a time of intense activity that he was "bustled out of his spirituality." How many Christian workers can re-echo that sentiment! So much trading, so many calls, so much studying, so many newspapers to read, so much of this, that, and the other, that there is no time for meditation and quiet thoughtfulness. Many Christians are hustled out of their spirituality by their religious work itself. Their religion consists in going to meeting, and serving on committees, and sewing for the heathen, and visiting the sick, and distributing tracts—all most excellent and necessary forms of service, and yet all of the stirring, busy kind. A voice comes to all such: "These things ought ye to have done, and not to have left the others [prayers, communion, and meditation] undone." Busy, bustling work is no substitute for quiet, thoughtful preparation of the heart. The fallow ground yields the largest increase; the rested soul bears the sweetest spiritual fruits. Modern life seems to necessitate intensity of action. Bustling activity is thrust upon us. In the language of the street, everyone who gets along must hustle and rustle, which are the modern equivalents for Dr. Chalmers' "bustle." We have a good deal of respect for the Christian who can "rustle," but we have still more regard for the one who knows not only how to rustle, but how to rest, how to possess his soul in patience, how to be still in God's presence as well as active in his service.

A real danger of modern life, a danger far more imminent now than in the time of Dr. Chalmers, is that we shall be bustled out of all spirituality; but the tendency can be corrected, the danger can be overcome. A half-hour a day spent alone with God and God's Word will leave us all the time we need for active service, and will prevent any danger of being bustled out of our activity.—The Golden Rule.

MAKING THE SABBATH HAPPY.—We know a household in which the Sabbath is hardly over before the little ones begin the enquiry: "Mama, when will it be Sabbath again?" To these children the Sabbath is the red-letter day of the week looked forward to, and backward to, every other day; and this because on the Sabbath they have their father home all day. He dismisses his business cares, gathers his children close about him, listens to the histories of the week, reads to them, or walks with them. He is making beautiful associations to cluster around this beautiful day.

This should be the day of days in every household. Six days must the bread and butter be earned and the bread and butter be prepared, the raiment taken thought of and the raiment stitched. Six days must the father and sons and daughters and little children go abroad to the work and their lessons.

But then comes the seventh day, the beautiful Sabbath, in which business may be set aside, the lessons dismissed, husbands and wives, parents and children, brothers and sisters reunited. Let this day be consecrated to all that is highest and best in our natures, to thanksgiving and aspiration, and to the development in the home of those spiritual graces which make our homes heavenly places. Wise parents will make the day so bright and sweet with their joy, and their children, their sympathetic conversation, their choice books, and their songs, and their bits of poetry, that they who come to the hearthstone weary and discouraged will be renewed and cheerful for the coming week, and all will bear in their hearts a bright memory to shine on them in cloudy weather.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

GOOD ENOUGH.

Dear boys, I want to give you
A motto safe and good;
'Twill make your lives successful
If you heed it as you should.
Obey it in the spirit,
Obey it in the letter—
Don't say a thing is "good enough"
Till it can be no better.

And whether at your lessons,
Or at your daily work,
Don't be a half-way dabbler—
Don't slip and slide and shirk,
And think it doesn't matter
That such talk is "trash" and "stuff"—
For until your task is perfect,
It is never "good enough."

If your work is in the school-room,
Make every lesson tell;
No matter what you mean to be,
Build your foundation well.
Every knotty point and problem
That you bravely master now
Will increase your skill to labor
With the pen or with the plow.

If you sweep a store or stable,
Be sure you go behind;
Every box and bale and counter;
It will pay, you'll always find
To be careful, patient, thorough,
Though the work be hard and rough;
And when you've done your very best,
'Twill then be "good enough."

So you'd better take my motto,
If you ever mean to work
To any station higher
Than a stable boy or clerk.
It will make you independent,
It will make you no man's debtor;
Then never say, "It's good enough"
Till it can be no better.

—Golden Days.

MR. EDITOR: I have read the interesting letters from the little friends in your paper, and would like to join the band, if you will permit me. I suppose the little friends have all learned from their geography lessons that Harrisonburg is a small town situated on the west bank of the beautiful Ouachita river. Back of us are high rocky hills. Fine fun we sometimes have climbing them in search of wild flowers and grapes. We have a happy home here, I think. Papa, mama and five girls are we—not numbering as did the little maid in "We Are Seven," for "two of us in the churchyard lie"—mother and little sister. The eldest is grown, and sweet little sister is just learning to talk. I am twelve years of age. Narcissa Carter lives next door. She is my dearest friend, and near my age. Our Sunday-school is very interesting. I love to attend. Mama teaches our class of girls. Uncle Cary Holloman is our superintendent—a good, zealous one. I think the Sunday-school songs in the new hymn book beautiful. We have service in the Methodist Church three Sabbaths in the month; our minister, Bro. Hamil, serving twice, and Bro. Brooks, the Baptist minister, once. We always have good sermons. Occasionally we have a sermon from Bro. Routon (Baptist). He has faithfully served a lifetime in the good work. We have a school well attended. I am not now attending, as my eyes are too weak. Mama reads to me, and gives me music lessons. I will answer the questions asked by J. B. Jones and Sallie Shaver. "Sult" is found in Gen. xix, 26; Lev. ii, 13; Deut. xxix, 23; Josh. xv, 62. The word is used a number of times in different places. The mother of Jesus was the Virgin Mary. Is Sunday, or the Lord's day, the first or seventh day? I wish some of the little friends to answer.

Your friend, KATIE HOLLOMAN.
Harrisonburg, La., Aug. 19.

Small Philosophers.

Some surprising answers of children in England to questions put to them are given in Cassell's Saturday Journal. Though not exactly a child, perhaps, a lad once appeared before Bishop Wilberforce for confirmation; the Bishop, feeling sure he had confirmed him before, bent over and said in a low tone, "My boy, I think I have confirmed you before." The lad opened his great wide eyes, and replied: "You be a liar."

"What would have happened if Henry IV. of France had not been murdered?" asked a teacher of a sharp-looking boy. The prompt reply was: "He probably would have died a natural death."

In a Sunday-school, "What did the Israelites do when they came out of the Red Sea?" drew forth the answer: "They dried themselves." "Where was Bishop Latimer burned to death?" was immediately answered: "In the fire."

While youngsters appear to get considerably "mixed" in digesting their historical information, their ideas of geographical facts are also not infrequently, to say the least, original. A young hopeful said that the surface of the earth consisted of land and water. "What then," asked the teacher, "do land and water make?" "Mud," was the instant rejoinder.

"What comes next to man in the scale of being?" inquired an examiner. "His shirt," was the reply. Asked to give a distinction, if any, between a fort and a fortress, a boy nicely defined them: "A fort is a place to put men in, and a fortress is a place to put women in." On being asked what the chief end of man was, another boy, without any hesitation, said: "The end what's got his head on."

A teacher asked a very juvenile class which of them had ever seen a magnet. A sharp urchin at once said he had seen lots of them. "Where?" inquired the teacher, surprised at his proficiency. "In the cheese."

Another lad was asked what he understood by "celerity," and, "perhaps from experience," says the contemporary account, he described it as "something to put hot plates down with."

The members of a girls' class were asked a few questions. One was interrogated as to what was meant by "bearing false witness against your neighbor." "It was," said she, "when nobody did nothing and somebody went and told of it." Another was asked how beef tea was made, and she replied, "Buy a tin of beef extract and follow the directions on the lid."

"What are warmth-producing foods?" a third girl was asked. The reply was, "Cayenne pepper and Jamaica ginger."

"What is the feminine of friar?" asked a teacher of his class. First boy, "Husn't any." "Next!" Second boy, "Nun." "That's right," said the master. First boy, in an indignant tone, "That's just what I said."

"And, now, dear," asked a governess, "what can you tell me about Minerva?" "She was the goddess of wisdom, and she never married," was the reply.

A Home Contract for Big Guns.

Gen. Grant, Acting Secretary of War, in behalf of the government, entered into a contract on Aug. 9 with the Bethlehem Iron Company, of Pennsylvania, for one hundred new high-power guns, in accordance with a recommendation made some time since by the Board of Ordnance and Fortification. Of these twenty-five will be 8-inch breech-loading, single charge, built-up, forged steel rifle guns, $17,246.55 each; fifty 10-inch guns, same pattern, $35,747.58 each; twenty-five 12-inch guns, same pattern, $51,473.22 each.

Under the contract the first of the 8-inch guns is to be delivered in 730 days, and the remaining twenty-four at such regular intervals that the last one will be delivered in 2,433 days "after notification of the acceptance of the type gun." This means nine years for the delivery of the twenty-five guns. The first, or type gun, of the 10-inch class is to be delivered in 822 days or in two years and three months. Within 8,407 days after acceptance of the type gun the remaining forty-nine are to be delivered at regular intervals. This means nearly twelve years for delivery of the 10-inch guns. The first of the 12-inch guns is to be delivered in 1,095 days, and the remaining twenty-four at such regular periods that the last one shall be delivered in 3,191 days after the acceptance of the type gun. This means twelve years, or a little more, for delivery of these guns. It does not follow, however, but that the guns may be completed in far less time than the contract provides, and this is the more probable as the next Congress is likely to be called on to make further appropriations for large guns, the one hundred now contracted for being but a small proportion of the number actually needed.

The fact that this contract was made with an American firm, and that there were three American manufacturers ready to undertake the work, can not fail to give general satisfaction. Four or five years ago it would not have been possible to place such a contract in this country, and efforts to secure favorable bids for these guns failed last year because the appropriation therefor was not large enough. At the last session of Congress, however, it was increased to $1,2[illegible],000, with the special provision that the prices paid should be such as would be "deemed fair to the manufacturer." The total of the bid of the Bethlehem Company for the one hundred guns was $3,785,850; that of the two other competitors for the work was, the Midvale Steel Company, $5,359,500, and the South Boston Iron Works (now established in Kentucky), $5,171,312. Should the next Congress call for more big guns, these firms, perhaps reenforced by the firm of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., of Pittsburg, and maybe others, might be counted upon as among the possible bidders, this demonstrating that in this specialty our manufacturers are enlarging their facilities to the standard of the foremost establishments of England, Germany and France.

Some comment has been made upon the high cost of these guns, coupled with the statement that they could be built for much less money and in half the time at the government arsenal at West Troy. It seems to be generally conceded that the government could do the work cheaper and quicker than called for by the contract; but it was manifestly the plain intention of Congress, and in accordance with a strong public sentiment, that private enterprise should be encouraged in the establishment of gun plants, in order that the available facilities of the country in time of need should not be limited to one or two government gun-making shops. It will do no harm, however, if the attention of Congress is now so directly turned to the subject that the Watervliet arsenal will receive an adequate appropriation for the much needed enlargement of its plant. It will be some years before our seacoast defenses and our new ships can be fully supplied with the heavy guns needed for their proper equipment by the combined work of a first-class government gun factory and a very liberal number of contracts with private gunmakers besides.—Scientific American.

MUSIC IN THE TREATMENT OF DISEASE.—The value of music as a therapeutic method can not yet be precisely stated. Of its wholesome influence in various forms of disease, however, there can be little or no doubt. In making this assertion we do not, of course, assign to it any specific or peculiar action. It is no quack's nostrum, no reputed conqueror of ache or ailment. It is only, as we have shown in a recent article, one of those intangible, but effective, aids of medicine which exert their healthful properties through the nervous system. It is as a mental tonic that music acts. Accordingly we may naturally expect it to exert its powers chiefly in those diseases, or aspects of disease, which are due to morbid nervous action. The evidence of its utility on occasions where fatigue or worry has disturbed the proper balance and relation between the mind and body of the so-called healthy will explain its action in disease. We can readily understand how a pleasing and lively melody can awake in a jaded brain the strong emotion of hope, and, energizing by its means the languid nerve control of the whole circulation, strengthen the heart-beat and refresh the vascularity of every organ. We can picture the same brain in forced irritation fretfully stimulating the service of the vasomoter nerves and starving the tissues of their blood supply. Here, again, it is easy to comprehend the regulating effect of quieter harmony, which brings at once a rest and a diversion to the fretting mind. Even aches are soothed for a time by a transference of attention, and why, then, should not pain be lulled by music? That it sometimes is thus relieved we can not doubt.—London Lancet.

NATURE'S FIREWORKS AT SEA.—The steamship Pathan arrived here recently from Japanese ports with the first cargo (238 tons) of summer tea. Capt. Roy reports having witnessed several remarkable meteoric showers on the Atlantic. The shooting stars were of unusual size and brilliancy. Nearly all of them looked as large as Jupiter appears to be, and at least a dozen left in the sky bright flashes that lasted from ten to twelve seconds. Some few were so luminous that they lit up the ship like electric lights. The rain of stars seemed to come from the vicinity of the Great Bear. Its course appeared to be from north to south and southeast.

On Aug. 1, just after leaving Gibraltar, the Pathan ran into an electric storm, preceded by heavy squalls. The tip of every yard-arm and mast was adorned with globes of electric fire. They jumped from point to point, run up and down the rigging, slid along the stays, ascended and descended the halliards, playing such a game of tag as Capt. Roy had never before seen in his long experience in southern seas.—Scientific American.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep—had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

PRICE—WALKER.—At the home of the bride, near Barnett, Miss., Aug. 13, 1891, by Rev. B. S. Rayner, Mr. WILLIT. Price, Esq., to Mrs. Mary L. Walker.

OBITUARIES.

BROWN—GEORGE WASHINGTON BROWN was born in Pearlington, Miss., Feb. 22, 1811, and died at Abita Springs, La., July 10, 1891.

Bro. Brown was married to Miss Cordelia A. Favre, Nov. 10, 1859, with whom he lived in great happiness to the day of his death. Ten children were the fruit of this happy union—three of whom preceded their father to the heavenly home. His was an ideal home life. He was passionately fond of his family and home, and always sought, and found, his most dearly cherished pleasures at his own fireside, where he constantly gave and received the tenderest expressions of love.

Bro. Brown possessed fine common sense and business capacity. He was pre-eminently fitted for a leading and influential position in all public interests which were assigned him by common consent. For more than thirty years he had been actively identified with every public movement for the promotion of the social and religious interests of Pearlington. His entire course, through all the labors of these busy years, had met with universal commendation. No one has been known to question the honesty and purity of his motives; no one has been known to question the correctness of his judgment. It would be difficult, if not impossible, to find a man of clearer record or better reputation in business circles. About twenty years ago he became associated in business with Messrs. Poitevent & Favre, the great lumber firm of the South, filling the responsible and lucrative position of secretary and bookkeeper. The arduous labors of this office he performed until ten days before his death, and enjoyed the perfect confidence of his employers.

Bro. Brown joined the M. E. Church, South, some twenty-five years ago, under the ministry of Rev. H. P. Bowen. During the greater part of his church life he was very active. He served the Pearlington Church as steward for many years with great acceptability and efficiency. He was always ready to lead the congregation in sensible, earnest and believing prayer. His home was blessed with a sacred altar, on which he greatly delighted to offer daily sacrifices of grateful praise and fervent prayer. His example in this was not lost, for the home altar still remains. Instead of the father's voice reading the blessed Word and leading the devout prayers, those of the tender daughters are heard.

Bro. Brown was a very quiet and undemonstrative Christian, but deeply spiritual. With eyes welling up with great tears, which told of the deepest feeling, he would relate his religious experience. All who knew, most of all his pastor and family, believed every word he uttered when he spoke of the peace he enjoyed with God as one justified by faith in Jesus Christ.

The Methodist Church and the entire community of Pearlington have sustained an irreparable loss in the death of this good man. His place can not be filled; but his pure life and spotless character will be remembered with a powerful influence for good.

T. W. ADAMS.

CLARKE—Mrs. PHEBE A. CLARKE, relict of the late Rev. Judge Clarke, of New Orleans, was born in Western Pennsylvania, and died at her daughter's, Mrs. Mary A. Miller's, home in Brooklyn, N. Y., July 3t, 1891. I do not know her age, but I suppose she was past eighty years. She was for quite a number of years a resident of this city, but for more than the last thirty years she has resided in Brooklyn, N. Y. The great majority of the people who knew, esteemed and loved her in New Orleans have passed out of the body and have preceded her to the home of the good.

I knew her near forty years ago, and have not seen her for more than thirty years; but I am not willing to let one so useful and so esteemed pass away in silent forgetfulness. She once had a large circle of friends in New Orleans who appreciated her worth and admired her exalted Christian character. She was a member of the Felicity Street Church, and the teacher of the infant class, where her sweet smile and motherly, gentle ways won the love of many a youthful heart.

Sister Clarke was so attached to the memories and membership of the Felicity Street Church that when she removed to Brooklyn she requested that her name might remain on the church register as long as she lived in the church militant. She was a woman of superior intelligence, of dignified bearing, but also of most courteous affability. She was an advanced Christian, eminently spiritual. Her face was luminous with a sweet and winning smile. She was diligent in every good work, in all things walking worthy of the Lord, for, like Enoch, she walked with God. She loved to visit the afflicted and suffering, and her gracious presence was a benediction to them. One who knew her long and well said, "If she had a fault, he never saw it."

Her last sickness does not appear to have been a season of much suffering; confined to bed but about a week. She loved the songs of Zion and the precious words of Holy Writ. The days and hours of her last sickness were cheered with the consoling and inspiring strains of the hymns she loved. All her thoughts and hopes were heavenward turned. Without apparent pain or a visible struggle, she gently breathed her earthly life away—

"As fades a summer cloud away,
As dies a wave along the shore."

Her sun of life went not down behind the darkened west, but, like the morning star, melted away into the light of day eternal. The beautiful and Christly traits of her character will long be cherished by those who were privileged to know her, and who now mourn her loss.

J. B. WALKER.

New Orleans, Aug. 25, 1891.

SLAUGHTER—BRANCH W. SLAUGHTER, little son of Mattie E. and Louis W. Slaughter, was born Oct. 11, 1890, and died, of consumption of the bowels, after three months' intense suffering, Aug. 22, 1891, being ten months and eleven days old.

Little Branch was an intelligent and sweet little boy, too pure for earth's sorrows; so God took him to live with the angels. He was afflicted all of his little life, but bore with it so patiently that it was a wonder to all who saw him. Tongue can not express the agony he suffered the last two weeks of his life here. All was done for him that loving hands and a kind physician could do, but all to no effect. Never again will the sweet lips lisp the names, "Papa," "Mama," and "Aunt Mamie."

Sweet little darling, never again will you put out your little hands, nor your little voice call, "Aunt Mamie," to take you into her arms. But, though it was hard to give you up, we would not if we could have kept you with us to suffer longer. We loved you too well.

Father, mother, grieve not for your darling boy; he has gone to watch for your coming at the pearly gates of heaven.

AUNT M.

FASER—Again we are called to mourn the loss of one of our best citizens and church members. JACOB FASER was born in Germany, October, 1823; moved with his parents to Amerlen when about five years of age, and settled in Philadelphia, Pa.; was confirmed in the Lutheran Church at about fourteen years of age. In early manhood he moved to Mississippi, and settled in Macon. In 1846 he joined the M. E. Church, South, in Macon, in which he lived and died an honorable and useful member. On Oct. 19, 1848, he was married to Miss Louisa Elizabeth Mutzinger, who made him a faithful helpmeet and companion in all the walks of life.

No one, perhaps, ever lived in this community who enjoyed more perfectly the confidence and esteem of all more than Bro. Faser, and, indeed, deservedly. He was a man of firmness and of integrity. You could soon know what side of a question he was on. He was public-spirited, always interested in that that was for the welfare of the town. Few men, if any, took more interest in and did more for the educational interest of the town than he. As a church member, he was loyal and faithful, always at his post. No pastor ever had any occasion to complain of him. He guarded with a jealous eye the reputation and purity of the church. He raised a family of three daughters and two sons, as honorable and as much respected as any family ever raised in this community. When the end came, Aug. 4, he was ready, after a confinement of three long months with slow fever, during which time he frequently spoke of the end, and always expressed himself as being ready. He met death as only a soldier of the cross can. May God bless his family! May his mantle fall on his sons!

J. H. MITCHELL.

RANDLE—Bro. W. O. RANDLE was born in Valden, Miss., Oct. 10, 1870, and died in Bessemer, Ala., June 21, 1891. He was converted in a revival in the Methodist Church at Velden, in 1887, and joined the Baptist Church, Jan. 11, 1891. He was married to Miss Lulu Colton, of Mississippi. She was a young lady of sweet Christian character, and in every way qualified to make him a worthy helpmeet. Together they came to Bessemer, and both united with the Methodist Church at this place.

Bro. Randle was a consistent Christian, and a kind and good husband. He was a favorite with all, and his sudden death was a severe blow to his friends and relatives. We do not question the ways of Providence, but we lament his death. The loss is ours, not his, for, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!" We believe that he died in the Lord, and that he rests in peace. May God's blessings be upon the heart-broken wife, and also upon the bereaved father and mother!

L. C. BRANSCOMA.

SMITH—LENA SMITH, daughter of Mr. P. M. and Mrs. E. E. Smith, of Wilkinson county, Miss., died Feb. 23, 1891, of diphtheria, aged two years and four months.

Little Lena suffered greatly, but she never murmured. She was sick thirteen days and nights, and God saw she was too pure for this world and called her to a better one. It is hard to realize that little Lena is gone and can never come back again to her loved ones; but—glorious thought!—they can go to meet her on the evergreen shore, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are feared and felt no more.

Lena was a good and obedient child and the pet of the family; therefore, there has been many hearts saddened by her death. Our blessed Savior said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." May the dear loved ones be resigned to their Master's will, and prepare to meet little Lena in the sweet by-and-by!

LAURA P. OAKES.

MORGAN—Died, at Zachary, La., Aug. 16, 1891, of congestion, ZULA ELWIN, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morgan, aged sixteen months. She has gone to rest.

"How to Examine Under-Graduates."

In the ADVOCATE, of Aug. 20, is an article with the above heading from the pen of our great and good Dr. Abbey, which opened up a subject of deep interest that has been too long neglected. Having passed along that way through the very methods cited, and under the Doctor's personal observation, I venture to make a suggestion. That the "examination" should be made no one will question; but how to do it so as to secure the best interests of examiners and examined is a vital question. The suggestion is this: That the Committee of Examination formulate questions on the course of study, each member taking his proper share—the answers to which will show what understanding the examined has of the subjects in hand. These questions to be written out, with space underneath for the answer. When the class meets for examination, distribute the questions, one to each, as they come to hand until they are given out; then each member of the class, in the presence of the committee, write the answers they make to the questions received, and sign their names to them and return them to the committee. In this way the examiners will be in possession of data from which to make a report in each case, and the interests of both parties be secured.

ONE OF THE COMMITTEE.

It's sometimes said patent medicines are for the ignorant. The doctors foster this idea. "The people," we're told, "are mostly ignorant when it comes to medical science." Suppose they are! What a sick man needs is not knowledge, but a cure, and the medicine that cures is the medicine for the sick. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the "do believes" and the "don't believes." There's no hesitancy about it, no "if" nor "possibly." It says—"I can cure you, only do as I direct." Perhaps it fails occasionally. The makers hear of it when it does, because they never keep the money when the medicine fails to do good. Suppose the doctors went on that principle. (We beg the doctors' pardon. It wouldn't do!)

Choking, sneezing and every other form of catarrh in the head, is radically cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Fifty cents. Sold by druggists everywhere.

Without the newspaper great advertisers can not exist. Without the advertisers, great and small (but mainly the small advertisers), the newspaper of to-day would be impossible.—James H. Beals, Jr.

Life Is Worth Living.

Creole Female Tonic makes the enjoyment of life possible, and makes life worth the living. Weak and sickly women find new health and strength in its use.

There is nothing which succeeds like success; and the success of any publication which admits advertising is also the success of the advertisers.

Running the Gauntlet

Pearline has been through it, but it has "got there." Every other modern improvement has had the same struggle. There's unbelief, prejudice and misunderstanding—peddlers of imitations—the false statements of soap makers and unscrupulous grocers to fight against. The old way is hard to leave, even if a better way is open. You can't believe that Pearline can do so much; then you can't believe that it's done safely;—in the end, you can't see how you ever did without it. That's the story of millions—full of doubt at first, full of satisfaction at last. If you're at the doubtful stage, try it. You won't know easy washing and cleaning till you do.

Beware Peddlers and some grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—but what a puff for Pearline. 385 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Whitworth Female College.

THE GREAT SOUTH MISSISSIPPI SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

Of the many educational institutions of the country whose can justly claim a higher place in the public esteem than the celebrated Whitworth college at Brookhaven. It ranks fourth in size among the female Colleges of the Union, and in the extent of its curriculum, thoroughness of training, moral influences, healthfulness of location, firm and careful discipline, is surpassed by none. It is a thoroughly progressive institution, which keeps fully abreast with the times, and the latest and most approved methods are adopted in every department, whether of science, music or art. In short, it is conducted upon the principle of supplying everything necessary for advanced female education that experience can suggest.

The session of 1890-91 was one of the most successful and satisfactory in the history of the college, and no pains or expense will be spared by the management to make the session of 1891-92 equal to or even surpass any former record. The best teaching talent has been engaged that money can procure. The Conservatory of Music and Art, the finest in the South, will be kept fully up to its present high standard. Add to this the fact that the boarding department is perfect in its arrangement and accomodations and under the immediate supervision of the president and his family, and there is nothing to be desired.

A Superior Home Training-School.

Speaking of Prof. Emery's school, hear what Bishop J. C. Keener and Col. W. R. Stuart wrote the president of Centenary College.

"I write to strengthen the application of Prof. Emery. He has been teaching for some time, has good credentials and is a thorough Methodist. He has been for several years principal of the Mississippi high school (Yazoo City). His family are delightful."—J. C. Keener.

"It gives me pleasure to say to you what Prof. Jones, of Oxford, said to me six years ago. He said, 'The young men sent to the University of Mississippi from Prof. Emery's school were the best prepared and entered the college more easily than from any other school.'"—W. R. Stuart.

A Choice College for Girls,

The Port Gibson Female Academy, of Mississippi, is one of the oldest and most eminent educational institutions of that State. For many years young ladies have been graduated at this college who now occupy places of honor and distinction. Miss M. E. Compton, its deservedly popular president, is aided by a large and carefully selected faculty, who will devote their best efforts to secure the religions and intellectual advancement of pupils committed to their care.

The past session was in every way most satisfactory. The attendance was larger than formerly, and the work of the students gave evidence both of the ability of the professors and the diligence of the pupils.

Handsome additions have been made to the buildings during the past year. For comfort and healthfulness Port Gibson Female College can not be surpassed by any kindred institution in the Gulf States.

An Excellent Training-School.

Students Admitted to the Leading Universities Without Examination.

On recommendation of the Principal, graduates and proficients of The University School, Monticello, Ark., are admitted to the higher classes of the University of Tennessee, and other leading universities, without examination. Speaking of the Principal of this school, Prof. T. C. Karns, A. M., says: "I have known Prof. Hinemon several years. He is a most excellent teacher and Christian gentleman. His ability in his chosen line is very marked. Fathers can intrust their sons to him without any hesitancy. He will make scholars and good citizens of them."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Four persons lost their lives in a railroad accident in Indiana on Aug. 31.

Damaging frosts were reported last week from Minnesota and North Dakota.

The National Camp, Patriotic Sons of America, in session last week in Philadelphia, resolved to refuse admittance to colored camps.

A joint political discussion has been arranged to take place at Ada, Ohio, some Saturday in September, between Governor Campbell and Major McKinley, the Democratic and Republican candidates for governor.

Railroad accidents have been of almost daily occurrence throughout the country during the past month. . . . The spreading of rails on a bridge in North Carolina caused a train to fall a distance of sixty-five feet on Aug. 27. Twenty persons were instantly killed, while thirty were seriously injured.

Postmaster-General Wanamaker has sent a personally signed letter to the postmaster at each country seat throughout the United States, asking him, for the public good, at his own expense, to make a personal visit to each postoffice in his county and make a detailed report upon its conditions.

Dallas, Texas, has been the scene of two disastrous fires within a very short time. The insurance companies have suffered so severely that many of them have withdrawn their agencies, and at a recent meeting of the local Board of Underwriters insurance was advanced fifty per cent. The water supply is declared inadequate.

Chief Buchanan has announced his schedule of premiums in the live stock department of the World's Fair. The directors have appropriated $150,000 for this purpose, and in accordance with an order from the Board of Control a scheme has been arranged for division among the various classes which are expected to compete.

At the request of the Latin-American Bureau of the World's Columbian Exposition, Cardinal Gibbons has requested the proper officers of the several religious orders of the Roman Catholic Church, both in Europe and America, to cause their archives to be searched for historical records bearing upon the discovery and settlement of the new world.

Congress at its last session appropriated $10,000,000 for the purpose of making the experiment of extending the free delivery to small towns. From a comparison with the gross receipts of these offices for the last two quarters of last year it is found that the gross receipts of eight of the offices have not only not increased, but have fallen off. The results of the experiment are not, therefore, altogether encouraging.

FOREIGN.

Russia will send a fleet to Cherbourg under Admiral Kasnakoff. The fleet will arrive Sept. 15.

Three hundred lives have been lost in a typhoon off Japan. The casualties were chiefly among Chinese and Japanese sailors.

It is said that the success of the Chilian insurgents have encouraged the opponents of President Diaz in Mexico, and will hasten the revolution now smouldering in the land of the Aztecs.

Mr. Gladstone has written a letter denouncing gambling as a formidable and growing national evil. Mr. Gladstone adds that he is ready to give his aid to any efforts aiming at the extinction or mitigation of gambling.

Telegrams from all parts of England and Ireland say that the result of the continuous heavy rain is distressing. The crops are all under water and will certainly be spoiled unless saved by sunshine soon. In several sections the potato disease has appeared.

Messrs. Butterworth, Handy and Peck, of the Columbian Exposition Commission, have visited the Asiatic and French exhibitors at Moscow and the Novgorod fair. Exhibitors everywhere were enthusiastic over the Chicago fair and promised to be largely represented.

The St. James Gazette, of London, always well informed on India, says that the country is in a dangerous state of ebullition, and since the marriage reforms were passed the discontent has been of rapid growth. Many large cities are ready to burst into sedition and will be difficult to control.

The official estimates of the damage done by the recent cyclone which swept over the island of Martinique places the amount at $10,000,000, and says that 378 people lost their lives. President Carnot has signed a credit of $200,000, which sum is to be used to assist the Martinique sufferers.

President Balmaceda's power in Chili is broken. His army, after five hours of hard fighting with the insurgents before Valparaiso, was defeated and disorganized. The American admiral with naval commanders of foreign nations have taken control of the captured city and will preserve order.

It is said that Fourneau's expedition to explore the valley of Saugha Hayen, central Soudan, and the French Congo was attacked by natives with the result that sixteen were killed and thirty-one, including Fourneau himself, were wounded. All of the merchandise and many rifles belonging to the party were lost.

It is said that even the Jewish merchants of the first guild are preparing to leave Moscow. The last order from the government has made it impossible for them to carry on business, as it prohibits Jews from employing Christians, and at the same time orders all other Jews, except those of the first guild, to leave the city.

At a Roman Catholic conference, in Wigan, Father Power declared that "never since Elizabeth's reign had the prospects of the Catholic Church been darker in England." In most parts of the country it was not only losing numbers relatively, but absolutely. Liverpool was the only diocese which showed an increase of Catholics, and that was not in proportion to the increase of population.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvellous beautifier of world-wide celebrity, it is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25c.

The annoyance of breaking lamp-chimneys need not be borne.

Get tough glass chimneys.

Macbeth's "pearl top" and "pearl glass" are tough against heat; they do not break, except from accident.

They are also clear, transparent, not misty or milky; they fit and stand upright; shape and proportions are right to direct the draft upon the flame.

They cost a little more than rough and wrong chimneys of common glass that break continually.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. N. M. Clark, Lauderdale charge, Mississippi Conference, Sept. 3: "We have held two revival meetings, resulting in thirteen accessions to the church. Twenty professed conversion, and we had a good revival."

Rev. M. L. White, Vancleave, Miss., Sept. 4: "Closed meeting last night at Mt. Pleasant. Church revived, some conversions, fifteen accessions to the church; forty-three accessions this year. Commence another meeting to-night at Pine Grove. Looking for good results."

Rev. J. V. Penn, Forest, Miss., Sept. 4: "I closed another fine meeting at Grango Hall last week. The church greatly blest, family altars erected, many conversions, and eleven accessions. I had the assistance of Revs. P. A. Johnston, L. S. Jones and D. P. Bradford. More next week."

Rev. S. H. Whatley, P. C., Keatchie, La.: "Spring Ridge, one of our ante-bellum churches, has revived, and we hope will prove fruitful for many years. Sixteen accessions during August. The Baptist college reopened to-day. All are not yet present, but the roll is good for the first day. Political barbecues are frequent. Mean men and money make clashing discord in the praise of God! 'O God, to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself.'"

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Dublin, Miss., Aug. 31: "Our meetings on this charge have been held, resulting in some good, we trust. At Dublin we had two accessions, and we hope the good done is not confined to these two. Bro. Randolph, of Clarksdale, helped us a few days. Our meeting at Brooklyn was good, if we count goodness according to the Bible estimate of a soul's value. Two were added to the church on profession of faith. Altogether, we have received ten during the year. Outlook hopeful."

Rev. L. W. Wood, China Grove, Miss., Sept. 3: "On the third Sunday in July we held a protracted meeting at Sartin's Church, China Grove circuit. Bros. W. W. Simmons and R. J. Havers did the preaching. The Lord blessed us with a revival of the church. Seven accessions, three baptisms, and a number of conversions. Our camp meeting closed on Wednesday after the fourth Sunday in August. Bishop Galloway preached two fine sermons for us. Eight visiting preachers were with us. Result: Fifty conversions, sixteen accessions and eight baptisms. Praise the Lord."

Rev. P. H. Howse, State Line, Miss., Aug. 31: "We have held two protracted meetings in the last two months on State Line circuit. One at Mt. Pleasant, in which Bro. T. L. Mellen assisted me. He did some very fine preaching. We had two accessions. I feel that he did us good. Another at Adamsville, in which Bros. J. W. Tinnin and D. C. Rawls assisted me. The church was greatly revived; four accessions, and others to follow. I think my work has an upward tendency. Our people at State Line observed the week of prayer, and are strengthened. Collections will all come up."

Rev. R. H. Barr, Hillsboro, Miss., Sept. 4: "I wish to say that we have had glorious meetings at Good Hope. Our meeting resulted in nineteen accessions to the church. Many thanks to Bro. J. G. Cammack, of Carthage, who stood firmly by the customs of Methodism and won for himself a name as a man of God that will live in the minds and hearts of that people for years to come. My meeting at Conti[illegible] was a grand success. Two accessions, and the church greatly revived. [illegible] my heart was stretched upon [illegible] my back suffering from fever, and [illegible] preached some masterly sermons. [illegible] God be all the glory. Pray for [illegible] living.—Mrs. Quinton.

Rev. Henry M. Young, P. C., Harmony circuit, North Mississippi Conference, Sept. 3: "We have just closed a gracious revival at Clement's Chapel (old Eastport), resulting in thirty conversions and nineteen additions to the church. The church is greatly revived. We were assisted by Rev. J. T. McKeown, a brother to our predecessor, Rev. Luther A. McKeown, who labored with and for this people the past five years with great acceptability. The Lord has greatly blessed us, whereof we are glad. We have received forty-two into the church, with more to follow. To God be all the praise."

Rev. J. H. Calloway, Monterey, La., Aug. 31: "We closed a good meeting here at South Bend, on Black river, yesterday. We had eight accessions to our church, and more to follow. We had a good old Methodist handshaking, rejoicing and crying time yesterday, while we were giving the right hand of fellowship. Some of the applicants, who were immersionist inclined, thought they would have to go in the river; but I preached one sermon on the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and showed that God poured the Holy Ghost on people, and called it baptizing them. So they were all baptized in the church by pouring."

Rev. H. W. May, Haynesville, La., Aug. 28: "We are in the midst of a glorious revival at Haynesville. The altar is filled with penitents every night, and happy conversions follow. The meetings at every appointment have been good, and many are being converted and added to the church. We have received forty-six persons into the church in the last few weeks, and the church is greatly revived. The collections are receiving attention, and the people are paying liberally. We have recently dedicated a beautiful church near the line of Louisiana and Arkansas. The church is growing in power and influence, and we are happy in the work of the Lord."

Rev. H. W. Day, L. P., Sept. 4: "The Lord is doing a great work for North Wilkinson charge, under the pastoral care of Bro. W. M. Sullivan and Bro. G. W. Huff. Bro. Huff has held two protracted meetings—one at Galloway and one at Hopewell—in which the Lord was with the people to bless them. Bro. Huff has taken all of the children in the church this year, and some of the little boys, eleven and twelve years old, are praying in public. We had prayer meeting at Hopewell Church, and four little boys prayed, and old men were made to say they were ashamed of themselves to see little boys praying in the Spirit and with the understanding. God bless the children!"

Rev. H. J. Boltz, Pelican, La., Sept. 4: "We have just closed all of our protracted meetings on the DeSoto charge—all of which proved to be both interesting and profitable, resulting in thirty-one accessions to the church, and the church greatly revived. Some conversions and many cold, indifferent and backslidden members warmed and reclaimed. Some have promised to erect family altars. Old feuds of years' standing have been settled, and I think that I can truthfully say that the entire membership of this charge is in a much better condition to work for the Lord than at any time since I have had charge of the work. Many thanks to several of the good brethren for valuable services rendered in these meetings."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Benton, Miss., Sept. 3: "At home sick, lonely and sad. Been confined to my room with typho-malarial fever for over two weeks. Am improving slowly. My wife, who has nursed me closely through my sickness, is now gone to McComb City to see our son, Charley, who is quite sick with swamp fever. So you see I am lonely and sad. May all our afflictions be for God's glory and our spiritual good! My work is moving on very well. Bro. Nolen, my local preacher, and B. W. Lewis, assisted by Bro. Burks, a Baptist preacher, held my protracted meeting at Bowman's Chapel (six days), with fine results. People say it was the best meeting they ever had. My heart was [illegible] them while I was stretched upon my back suffering from fever. [illegible] preached some masterly sermons. [illegible] God be all the glory. Pray for [illegible] living.—Mrs. Quinton.

Rev. F. A. Whitson, Ebenezer circuit, North Mississippi: "We have just closed a nine days' meeting at Ebenezer, on the Ebenezer circuit, Aberdeen district. It resulted in about fifty conversions, and the church was most wonderfully revived. Thirty-nine additions to the church. We never saw greater manifestations of divine power in our lives. Men who had never been moved before came trembling to the altar for prayer, and many of them were converted. Most of the converts were young men. Bro. Burroughs, of Okolona, was with us five days. He made a very fine impression, and did much good. We would like to have him again. Rev. E. A. Smith preached two sermons, which were very much appreciated. Bro. Smith is principal of the school at Buena Vista. We thank and praise God for the victory he has given us through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Rev. H. L. Norton, Yazoo circuit, Aug. 31: "We have just closed our fourth and last series of meetings on the Yazoo circuit, with very fine results. We have had a goodly number of accessions to the church, and some profess to have been converted. Bros. R. J. Jones, Lewis, Selby and Crymes have been to our assistance, and rendered valuable service. Yazoo circuit is a good circuit. The moral sentiment of our people is good, and a due appreciation of spiritual things demonstrates itself by a uniform, orderly attendance upon the administration of the Word. The preacher is in love with his work, and the many things that have encouraged him in his work and made his heart glad during the year is no mean evidence of his people's appreciation of him. We are hopeful, and laboring to carry up full reports to Conference."

Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, P. E., Columbus District, North Mississippi, Sept. 4: "My visit this week to Walthall circuit will close the third round of quarterly meetings for the current year. It has been a long quarter, and embraced all the hot weather of a hot Summer. I have seen the cotton and corn spring from sorry conditions at the end of May into vigorous and healthy growth during June, July and August, and now the fields are bearing a plentiful harvest. The season has been specially favorable for corn. Better work would have made, in many cases, better crops. The price of cotton is not the only fault with our domestic finances. The people have reason to be grateful to our gracious Lord for the bounty of his hand. Political excitement has stood in the way of religious activity. Some of the preachers have found themselves much hindered from this source in their revival meetings; yet the work has moved on with fidelity, the gospel has been preached, souls have been converted, and many cold hearts warmed, and much quickening of faith and purpose. Our finances are seriously in the rear; but there is good hope in the good crop, if the people will pay their vows and dues to the Lord, who has given bountifully."

Rev. T. H. Rivers, Decatur, Miss.: "We are now through with our protracted meetings on this charge. We commenced our meeting at Hebron the first Sabbath in August, assisted by Rev. J. C. Long. Result: Five additions to our church; church greatly revived. Second meeting at Union, assisted by Revs. J. C. Long, Irvin Miller and Murdock McDonald. The preaching was plain and pointed. Result: Church revived and blessed, six additions, four infants baptized. At Good Hope no help but Bro. McDonald; but the Holy Ghost came down in answer to prayer, and the church was powerfully revived. Five additions was the numerical result. From Good Hope we went to Decatur, the place of holding our third quarterly meeting. Bro. P. A. Johnston, our presiding elder, was on hand, and gave us two of his best sermons, much to the edification of the church. Bro. J. C. Long came to our assistance at this place, and preached with power and demonstration of the Spirit. Net result: Four additions, and two subscribers to the ADVOCATE. Thanks to the ministerial brethren for their assistance; but to God be all the glory. Politics were at fever-heat in our county, and hindered us much. Two primary elections were held while we were carrying on our meetings. The prospect is that the next legislature is composed of the Methodist preachers of the State. Second session, R. (II), 2:10. Church. Second session, R. (II), 2:10. The professor connection with the revival. That is [illegible] whether or not [illegible] regularly has rolled its dark waves over [illegible] body on the tree. [illegible] By his stripes [illegible]

Rev. P. H. Howse, Meridian circuit: "I helped Bro. L. J. Jones in a meeting on the above-named work at Spring Hill. We began the meeting on Saturday, Aug. 15, under rather unfavorable circumstances. There were political excitements and family law suits to combat; but, in the face of all, we labored for the Master. The church was gloriously revived. Twelve joined the church, all on profession of faith; others deeply interested, who, we believe, will join soon. It was a feast to hear that class take the church vows; they were so bright. I believe they all knew what they were doing, though some of them were children of seven or eight years of age. Nearly all of the children of one family that were not already members joined the church, and left the parents out. God grant that the children may train their parents up for heaven, as the parents are not training them by example. I praise God for the young men of that vicinity who stood up and gave their experience, and led the prayer meeting. The young are the hope of the church. Bro. Jones has done a good work among those people, and is loved and appreciated by them. We closed our meeting on Wednesday night. I shall always love those precious, good people."

Rev. T. B. White writes: "The camp meeting at Scottsville, Texas, was a time of gracious outpouring. Multitudes were in attendance. Some came hundreds of miles. Many, very many, were saved. Eating, sleeping and sanitary arrangements after the best model. Order and decorum almost faultless. One Baptist preacher from Alabama came specially to the meeting, and testified to the experience of sanctification. Another Baptist preacher from Tyler, Texas, came to the meeting very full of skepticism and unbelief as to the doctrine and experience of sanctification; sought it at the mourner's bench, where scores were seeking pardon and purity, and, after days and nights seeking before the assembled multitudes, claimed the blessed experience that the 'blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth from all sin.' Our Carradine's face shone as almost that of an angel as he preached the full salvation from sin and doubt and fear, and perfect resignation and acquiescence in God's will. Several men of consecrated powers preached, while, perhaps, forty or fifty preachers were in attendance. The preaching was scriptural and evangelical, the praying was prevailing and Jacob-like, the singing was exhilarating and uplifting; the testimonies were quick, clear, clean-cut, and full of spiritual power."

Rev. W. J. Dawson, Oktibbeha, Miss., Sept. 4: "We have just closed our meeting at Linwood. The church has been wonderfully blessed. Thirty-four accessions; three or four of these will go to the Baptist Church. There were between twenty-five and thirty conversions. It was a glorious sight to see men who were hardened in sin coming to the altar seeking religion. With the exception of three services, we did all the preaching. Bro. Burton, an exhorter from the Neshoba circuit, did good work Monday and Tuesday. Thursday, Bro. Pugh preached and baptized twelve adults and two infants. We could not get anyone to help us, but God was with us. A revival was just what Linwood needed. It has been torn all to pieces; but few were left outside of the church. Our meeting at Bethel embraced the fourth Sunday in July. I was assisted by Bro. Bowon, of East End, Meridian. The church was greatly revived; about fifteen conversions and one accession. We held our meeting at Hopewell the third Sunday in August. Bro. Mellen was with me and did most of the preaching. Seven accessions; ten children baptized. Some very bright conversions; do not know how many. Our last protracted meeting will be at Pleasant Grove the first Sunday in October. This is our first year in the itineracy. In some respects it has been altogether a very pleasant year. This is a new circuit, made up of four old churches—three of them just about dead. We hope to leave it in a better condition than when we came to it."

Rev. H. Armstrong, writer, Sept. 1, [illegible] of the Delhi District Conference [illegible] Convened in West Monroe, Aug. [illegible] The weather was delightful, and the attendance tolerably good. Our worthy presiding elder, Rev. H. O. White, of course, was in the chair, and Rev. Geo. E. Greene was our efficient secretary. President and secretary were all that could have been desired. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. M. Brown, of Delhi, from Eccl. ix, 18, and it was very good. This scribe was sick, and left on Saturday before the close. On Friday afternoon Rev. B. F. White read some resolutions relative to the chief curse of Louisiana and the exciting topic at present, the Louisiana State Lottery. The resolutions were read and voted on separately, and we had 'smooth sailing' until we reached one containing the word 'revolution,' when about one-fifth of the Conference spoke against it, and voted against its adoption. It was adopted, however, by an overwhelming vote, and amid much enthusiasm. Our secretary will furnish you the resolutions. We were honored with but few visitors. No college presidents, no editors. The presidents, no doubt, consider their doom sealed for the next scholastic year; and ye editors, perhaps, think 'whatever is to be will be.' That prince of laymen, Capt. McDuffey, of Oak Ridge, and this scribe had the same home at Bro. McLain's, and it was a home after our own hearts. Bro. Riddle, the pastor in charge, is young, but had everything in 'ship-shape.' Our old stand-by laymen, Dr. A. S. Helmick and S. Whited, also Rev. Russell, L. E., were, of course, on hand."

Rev. H. M. Banks, Bayou Boeuf circuit, Louisiana Conference, Sept. 3: "I have just returned from a meeting embracing the fifth Sunday in August, the results of which are very encouraging. We preached in May in a little school-house too small to hold the congregation on Sunday, besides many other difficulties to impede the progress of a meeting. In August we preached in a large new church, though not yet completed. There was accommodation for all in attendance, the congregation varying from 75 to 150. The results are as follows: Twelve or fifteen conversions, eleven accessions by profession of faith, five by certificate, the transfer of those who held membership at Bayou Chicot, and the organization of a church of twenty-five members. After continuing from Saturday until Tuesday, together with Bro. Finn, I left the meeting in charge of Bro. Finn, who was expecting greater results still. Bro. J. E. Denson cheered our spirits at eleven o'clock on Sunday, and, by the aid of the Spirit, he gave us a splendid sermon, to the admiration and satisfaction of all present. This is one of the missionary fields that was under consideration at our District Conference at Lecompte. It is becoming more and more inviting every day. Four or five years ago the settlers in Mammoth Prairie were almost entirely Creole-French, and under the influence of the Roman Catholic Church. Now there are a goodly number of Americans, and their number is increasing constantly. We must enter the field at once, or lose a great opportunity of doing a great work for the Master. It is a large scope of fertile land reaching to the Gulf, and well adapted to the growth of corn, cotton and rice. Besides, it is represented as being a desirable country for good health."

Rev. J. H. Smith, Weir, Miss., Sept. 4: "I have held five protracted meetings on Weir circuit, North Mississippi Conference; two more to hold later. We are indebted to Bros. Moody and Augustus for valuable help. Bros. Hull and Boon were at their post, and quitted themselves like men. We trust that the good results of these meetings will be realized in eternity in the salvation of many souls. Churches were revived not only to feeling good, but also to doing good. We have more family altars; more men, women and children will lead in public prayer. One brother—a modest, timid, conscientious good worker—though he thinks that nothing he does is half-done, said that he was determined to keep trying, if the Lord could bless his failures. He was willing to keep making them as long as the Lord would give grace to endure the embarrassment. Another, also a timid man, but who had some shortcomings to regret, confessed his sins, and then stated that by God's grace, he was going to do his duty. It filled him. Many other things I might recite, but will leave them for the future. Pray that we may have a glorious time when we meet in camp meeting. Come and see. C. B. Carrick.

seventy-five have been converted. But until I can report as many joined the church as were converted, I will not be entirely satisfied. Some will drift off, never join any church, and possibly be lost; some will join other churches, and ever have a tender feeling for those who helped them (by their encouragement, songs and prayers) to the fountain of life, and cherish with kindly feeling the church at whose altar they found the Savior. Others will suffer themselves proselyted to churches, and learn to abuse the methods by which they were converted. I can truly rejoice with the individual, and church, too, when any of our good sister churches are strengthened by our help; but it is amusing, to say the least of it, for a church that possibly would have died for the want of breath but for the life and increase they get from our altars, to continue to abuse our methods. I rejoice, though, that after we may have furnished material to keep some other churches going, we have kept enough to outgrow any of our sisters. We are living in peace and harmony, and rejoice that the Lord is prospering us in the blessed work."

RAPIDES CAMP GROUND.

Rapides Camp Ground is beautifully situated on the slope of a hill in a bend at Bayou Rapides, eight miles from Boyce, La. This camp meeting was begun under the ministry of Rev. C. M. Lyons, in the Summer of 1889. For three successive years we have held successful meetings here. It was my privilege to assist in conducting the opening meeting in 1889. By providential interference, I was hindered from attending the second encampment in 1890; but was fortunate enough to get there this year, and was gratified to see the progress Methodism and Christianity had made in Rapides parish in so short a time. By saying Methodism and Christianity, I do not mean to differentiate these two things, but to note this fact: that in the progress of Methodism in its work of saving men, every other form of Christianity, under whatsoever name, has been benefited. The spiritual condition of almost every church in range of the influence going out from that place has been improved. Though, perhaps, not everyone will give us the right hand of fellowship as yet, we have ceased to be a by-word and a reproach. We have had many difficulties with which to contend, but we can say to-day that we have overcome. I am an old-school Methodist when it comes to a camp meeting, and say this: that the preacher, on whose work there is a good camp ground which has been successfully run, who fails to see and appreciate its value for the cause of the church, is hopelessly blind to the interests of the church and the cause of Christ. A word also to the brother of promise: Never promise to be at a camp meeting, and never come or send notice to the proper parties of your inability to attend. A courteous request demands a courteous reply. My reasons for this will now appear. I reached the camp grounds Thursday night, and found that the meeting had been running from Sunday until Tuesday night, and only two preachers there to preach and to run the meeting, and neither of those the preacher in charge of that work. By Thursday night enough had arrived to give the others a needed rest, and we had a great time. The preaching was of a high order; spiritually, it was in power. I don't think it was ever my privilege to hear so much preaching with so much power as on that occasion. Every man that occupied the pulpit seemed to "have an unction from the Holy One." From Friday morning through till Sunday night, when we closed, the interest kept increasing, and on Sunday night we closed in a perfect flame. I never saw a meeting close like it did, "with shouting and singing" and conversion of souls. There were over sixty penitents at the altar that night. The net results may not be known by us; but we know that there were many conversions and sixteen accessions. This is the center of power in the Alexandria district, and everybody who possibly can should go to that meeting next year. Every preacher ought, if possible, to give it, at least, a day or two. It will encourage him in his work, if nothing more. The management of the ground is in the hands of a Board of Trustees; the grounds are being enlarged and improved all the time. The water is the best, and in unlimited quantities; cold spring water. The nights are nearly always cool enough for cover, even in August, and the days generally pleasant. We can not enumerate its many advantages and beauties; can only say, Come and see. C. B. Carrick.

IT IS COMMON.

So are the stars and the arching skies,
So are the smiles in the children's eyes;
Common the life-giving breath of the spring;
So are the songs which the wild birds sing—
Blessed be God, they are common.

Common the grass in its glowing green,
So is the water's glistening sheen;
Common the springs of love and mirth;
So are the holiest gifts of earth.

Common the fragrance of rosy June;
So is the generous harvest moon,
So are the towering, mighty hills,
So are the twittering, trickling rills.

Common the beautiful tints of the fall;
So is the sun, which is over all,
Common the rain with its pattering feet;
So is the bread which we daily eat—
Blessed be God, it is common.

So is the sea in its wild unrest,
Kissing forever the earth's brown breast;
So is the voice of undying prayer
Evermore piercing the ambient air.

So unto all are "promises" given,
So unto all is the hope of heaven;
Common the rest from the weary strife;
So is the life which is after life—
Blessed be God, it is common.

Little Children Again.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON FOR JULY 26—THE EDITOR—DR. WHEDON—DR. ABBEY—INFELICITIES—BLUNDERS.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

IV.

3. Actual transgressions are forgiven on conditions entirely different from those on which original sin is pardoned.

We have seen that the human race was made alive in Christ, as it died in Adam—i. e., without any act or purpose on the part of man. On any other hypothesis than this the divine justice can not be defended.

This is not true of actual transgressions. In all these man has acted or purposed. His involvement in actual transgression is, to him, a personal matter. He has been consulted, and his condition has resulted from his own volition.

Now, as Jesus is "the Mediator between God and man," and man, refusing to recognize that fact, has transgressed, he is thrown upon his individual relationship to this Mediator, by "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," as the condition of his restoration to the favor of God. There is really only one personal sin. All transgressions result from that one sin. In accepting Jesus as the Savior of men, one accepts his law, his gospel—all the requirements of righteousness which center in him. It is generally held that man is condemned, not for what he does, but for rejecting the Savior. Profanity, drunkenness, dishonesty, untruthfulness—all manner of transgression—is renounced in the one act of accepting Jesus, whose mission in the world was to "save his people from their sins."

I am satisfied there has been a blunder in classifying original and personal sin under the same head, and subjecting the two classes of sin to the same conditions of pardon. Take this for an example: "The soul that sinneth it shall die." This is the result of sin unpardoned. "He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." This is the result of "faith in our Lord Jesus Christ." Faith brings life to the soul which is "dead in trespasses and in sin."

Now, it is clear if one of these passages applies to original sin, so does the other; and it is equally clear that if a man is ever guilty of original sin, he is guilty the moment he is born. This must be, if it is true that infants are guilty—if they have sinned. If the sin is not pardoned, "the soul that sinneth," whether in Adam or in the individual, "shall die," unless "he believeth on the son of God." Here are conditions upon which eternal death is avoided with which infants can not comply. Continuing to view this doctrine, that children are guilty, and must be pardoned—fallen, and must be regenerated—as subject to the same conditions as actual sin, let us review two or three other passages. John xii, 48: "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my word, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." John iii, 18: "He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." Nothing can be clearer than that the inclusion of infants as sinners—"fallen and depraved" creatures—subjects them to the conditions herein set forth, which are entirely beyond their capacity. They can neither reject nor receive Jesus. They can not "believe on the only begotten Son of God." It could not have been in the divine mind to class them in this category. Their condition is "the work of the devil"—not their own act—which the Son of God came "to destroy."

Infants have all the salvation they need. Their "offenses" were laid on Jesus. He bore their sins "in his own body on the tree." "By his stripes" they were "healed." He took "the handwriting that was against them, by its decrees, out of the way, nailing it to his cross." When the son of God cried, "It is finished," the work of redeeming a fallen race was complete.

By and by, when these children come to understand that the only begotten Son of God stood for them before the Father, then, if they "receive not his word,"—if they reject him—if they believe not in his name, they sin, because they have purposed in their hearts, and acted it out in their lives, that they will reject the salvation God has given them through his Son.

This the first, the only destroying sin, as is clearly taught in John iii, 18, and xii, 48.

The Christian and His Graces—No. 8.

BY AN OLD MINISTER.

"And to godliness, brotherly kindness," because to the purity and gravity of godlikeness there needs the addition of tenderness and sympathy to complete the Christian character and make us Christ-like. A man might be so absorbed in God as to be removed from human sympathy. While Christ was "the only wise, the true God, God over all blessed forever," he "was very man" as well, touched with our woes and wants, bone of our bone, and flesh of our flesh.

"He knows what sore afflictions mean,
For he hath felt the same."

He is the good Samaritan, who looks not at the nationality or the theories of men, but looks at them as weak and suffering men, who need his tender sympathy and gracious help. He does not stop to ask who's in the "horrible pit," a great or a lowly man. No, it's a man, and a man in need, and that's enough; so he sees, he pities, and he helps; he brings him out of "the horrible pit;" he puts him on a rock, and puts a new song into his mouth. "He went about doing good." Such is the perfect and illustrious pattern of "brotherly kindness" for our emulation and imitation.

In the sense of creation, all men are children of God, and all regenerated men are children by gracious adoption. As Abraham said to Lot, "We be brethren." "A family," some on earth, and many more already in heaven. This brotherly kindness is incompatible with all bigotry, with its exclusiveness, its egotistic assumptions, its bitterness and anathemas and persecutions. What wrongs, what woes, what floods of tears, what torrents of blood might suffering and helpless men have been spared, if professed believers had added to their profession of godliness, brotherly kindness! The Inquisition, with its unutterable horrors and atrocities; St. Bartholomew's Day, with all its frightful 60,000 murders; the sad story of the Waldenses, on "the mountains cold;" nor the fires of Smithfield, with all the cruel Acts of Conformity, would never have been, nor the pages of the church's history blotted with tears and blood.

A thousand fierce and bitter controversies that have rent and torn the body of Christ would never have been uttered by tongue or pen. Precious time and cultivated talent would never have been wasted in useless wars of words and needless separations of brethren, if professed Christians had only added to their profession, brotherly kindness. Brotherly kindness will rise superior to all social, official and financial distinctions. It will not be confined and localized any more than the sun will be confined to a few mountain tops, but rather diffuse itself, like genial light, over all the earth. The caste system has for long centuries bound the millions of India in its inflexible unsocial chains; but as the sunshine thaws and softens Winter's frozen bonds, so will the Sun of Righteousness soften and dissolve the rigid barriers that have so long held men aloof from one another. The prophet says: "They shall flow together." Jews and Samaritans have no dealings, not even to the small hospitality of a drink of water. But brotherly kindness will make us kind to one another, and not everyone look only on his own things, his opinions, his feelings, and his character, and interest, but with a tolerant and kindly look on the things of others. Brotherly love makes us one in Christ, not in intellect, culture, position or wealth, but in the love, the meekness and gentleness of Christ.

We are to pray for all men, and that God's kingdom may come, and his will be done on earth as in heaven. If so we are to pray, then our brotherly kindness must, according to ability and opportunity, extend to all the family of man. It is certainly a great and gracious expression of brotherly kindness to send to benighted men the "Lamp of Life," that they may be guided in the path that shineth more and more.

Brotherly kindness will weep with them that weep, and will rejoice with them that do rejoice. It will not envy superiority of success; it will rather wish that all the Lord's people were prophets. If one falls, brotherly kindness will labor to raise him. If adversity has rolled its dark waves over one, brotherly kindness will seek to rescue him from sinking into black despair. A want of brotherly kindness is so unseemly among creatures bound together by so many ties of suffering, sorrow, infirmities, necessities and the doom to die. It would seem our common lot would move our pity, open our hands, in deeds of kindness, and fill our mouths with sympathetic and cheering words.

Dates and Figures.

We desire to drop our end of the controversy with Bro. Sawyer by a slight, but very material correction of his reply to our figures. He goes behind the date to which our article refers, viz.: the employment of a City Missionary, and makes us dispute the statistical results of a campaign conducted by himself and the preachers of the district the year previous when we were not in the city, and, therefore, not a competent witness of the fruits of the movement. But to show the meagerness of even an exhibit covering both years, we quote his article: "Nevertheless the fact remains which Dr. Beard nor any other man can gainsay, that the following live mission schools were established by the City Mission: Claiborne, Felicity, Moreau, and Gouldsboro." Upon this statement our commentary will be brief. Claiborne is what remains of two schools located in that region years ago; one by Rev. D. L. Mitchel, the other by Bro. Goodin. In that vast region the live City Mission (?) should have planted, at least, six schools and builded from two to five chapels. Felicity, as we said before, is one eligible school subtracted, and one ineligible school added, which leaves nothing with a minus sign after it thus: 0—; Gouldsboro is on the other side of the great river, safe from mobs and missiles, and would have organized itself in due time; while Moreau was projected upon the scene by the agency of the lamented pastor probably before Sawyer, and certainly, I am assured by the superintendent who has held the office continuously from its organization, months anterior to Billingsley.

Though Bro. Sawyer and myself may differ in mind as to the methods to be employed in this work, I am sure that we are one in heart, and wish for nothing so much as the prosperity of Christ's cause.

[Here endeth this little breeze.—EDITOR.]

Some Corrections.

I notice that Bro. Featherstun, of Woodville, Miss., made some mistakes in his statistical report, about persons and things, of that section of our Conference.

1. As to the time of building the brick church at Bethel Camp Ground, Wilkinson circuit, Mississippi Conference, he says Judge Edward McGehee built that church in 1855. I was the pastor of that church in 1854 and '55, and know that it was built some time before those dates. The parsonage at Bethel was built in 1853, and I was its first occupant.

2. Bro. Featherstun errs as to the cause of Bro. W. G. Millsaps' removal from Woodville station in 1862. He says the station was made vacant by Bro. Millsaps' enlistment into the military service. I was his presiding elder, and know that bad health was his reason for giving up his work. I never heard before this statement that he even enlisted, or desired to enlist, in any military service. Such a thought could not have entered his mind in that state of health.

3. Bro. Featherstun errs as to the manner in which Rev. E. M. Marvin came into Woodville station. He may have started to New Orleans as a delegate to the General Conference; but his movement was too early for that. He was persecuted for his Southern sentiments and left his home early that year and joined Gen. Price's army, and came with him into Mississippi, or down South. I think he was chaplain. I heard him preach early that year in Vicksburg, and when Bro. Millsaps advised me of his intention to give up his work, I wrote to Bro. Marvin to come down to Woodville, and employed him to fill that station the balance of the year. Bro. Featherstun speaks of Bro. Marvin's coming to Woodville as a sort of adventure in the dark, and that he found himself at Woodville, the station preacher of the town. Bro. Marvin was much at the presiding elder's home at Bethel that year, and heartily welcomed as a highly esteemed brother and guest. His labors were abundant and largely useful in saving souls in our protracted meeting that year. When in the pulpit he was master of the situation; in the social circle, its genial and intelligent charm.

4. Bro. Featherstun says, "Two revivals are still spoken of: the first in J. N. Maffit's time; the second, two decades later, by J. J. Wheat, J. A. B. Jones and T. W. Brown. Neither of these dear brethren was pastor that year in Woodville. That was the year 1856, and no notice of the pastor in connection with the revival. That revival and the great awakening that preceded it were both on hand in power and demonstration of the Spirit before the pastor had any ministerial help. The brethren mentioned above came after Sunday, and did good work, and, with the pastor and flock, were largely blessed. The pastor announced to his congregation that he would hold a protracted meeting for ten days. Some of the good brethren said, "We have not had a ten days' protracted meeting in that church for ten years." But the meeting came and continued for three weeks, three services per day. Seventy persons joined the church, and more than fifty souls converted. The camp meeting that year at Bethel was the poorest this writer ever attended there. This writer was removed at the end of 1856 to Greenville district, by Bishop George F. Pierce, from Woodville station.

May the great Head of the church, by his Holy Spirit, bring upon Bro. Featherstun and his present charge such a wonderful meeting as the good people of Woodville had in 1856, and which is still fresh in their memories, before this year closes.

Letter from Rev. E. G. Kilgore.

I have thought often of writing to the dear old ADVOCATE, but have until now allowed other engagements to fill up my time. We are doing well in this, our new home. Jonesboro is a beautiful, thriving town of something over three thousand inhabitants, located on Crawley's Ridge, beautiful for situation, and is destined to be the commercial center of Northeastern Arkansas, as it is rather a railroad center. We have fine public schools, manufacturing interests, three weekly newspapers, two banks, splendid hotels, and other public enterprises we will not take time to mention. We have six churches, all with neat houses of worship. Our own beloved church is decidedly in advance of all the others in numerical strength and in wealth. Really we have the back-bone of the town. I have conducted two revival meetings here this year with good results, having already added seventy-one names to our roll of membership. We are expecting an ingathering next Sunday as the result of a union meeting just closed. The people here are very kind indeed, and have extended us many favors during the year. True, the collections are somewhat behind, but, no doubt, everything will come up all right in the end.

My wife, who has been almost an invalid for several years, is enjoying better health here. So far the health of this country has been splendid during the year. The preachers are all at their post of duty, and our charges are being visited with gracious revivals in many places. I had the pleasure of attending two very fine meetings; one at Harrisburg, and the other at Vandale. The two resulted in nearly one hundred accessions to our church. Our beloved presiding elder (Rev. M. M. Smith) reports good work throughout his district. Our people will begin work on a district parsonage at this place next week, to cost about fifteen hundred dollars.

I rejoice much with my dear brethren of the North Mississippi Conference over their cheering reports from the field. May the Master continue to pour his blessing upon them as upon his entire church. I here ask a special interest in their prayers.

The ADVOCATE is such a feast of fat things to me now; since I can not often see my brethren of the old Conference, face to face, I can read of their doings. You are certainly making an excellent paper of the ADVOCATE. May the Lord bless you and the paper.

Yours in the gospel,

E. B. KILGORE.

Bro. Armstrong's Many "Obstacles."

There now appears to be several more than "two." If he believes that holiness is attainable in this life, why (to use his own language) "get furiously mad" with those who have attained it? He says he agrees "with Bishop Haygood on the subject," believing that "those who have the most holiness make the least noise about it." How? And wherefore? Do Bishop Haygood and his disciple believe that those who have the most religion ought to say the least about it? If the one, why not the other? But St. Paul says, "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." And the Savior said, "Whosoever, therefore, shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father, which is in heaven." And he also, at the same time, pronounced the awful antitheals.

Bro. Armstrong says: "The same indictment of inconsistency does not apply equally to professors of the new birth. The humble, modest professor of religion don't claim to be better than other Christians. Not so much is expected of him." Is Bro. Armstrong glad, instead of sorry, that "not much is expected of him"? The question at issue is whether or not "the professor of religion" or "the professor of sanctification" lives up nearer to his profession? And Bro. Armstrong can't be allowed to "beg the question," to help himself out of his dilemma. He must prove out of it, if he can; and if he can't, let him follow his borrowed advice, and "make less noise about it."

As to what "is expected of an humble, modest professor of religion:" Jesus told the man, out of whom he had cast the devil, to "tell how great things the Lord had done for him," and the newly "cleansed leper" was commended by the Savior himself for "glorifying him with a loud voice." Then, after a sinner has been "made a new creature in Christ Jesus," ought he to say "less and less about it" as he "grows in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ"? And when he has "gone on unto perfection," ought he to say still less about it? Perhaps Bishop Haygood had better advise his disciple again—specifying for him to "make less noise" of that ugly, unbecoming sort, which will not pass for argument.

CHURCHES AND POLITICS.—Many times our churches in Kansas have been criticised, because of their active support of prohibition since it became a political question. Our brethren of the Southern Presbyterian Church have been specially sensitive on this question. It has now come home to them in a practical way. In Louisiana the Presbyterians have taken a noble stand against the Lottery infamy. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans, has been greatly abused by the newspapers in the hire of the Lottery because he has made such bold and powerful attacks on this mighty robber of the people. Now the churches are charged with "meddling with politics." This is one of the tricks of the devil to scare people from crusades against evil. Because the Lottery is to be voted upon is certainly no good reason why ministers should cease to preach on the commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," and make a special application of their sermons to the Lottery. We rejoice to hear of the manly fight Christian people of the South are making against this robber of the poor and ignorant. We trust that the result will be a victory for the right, and that politics cleansed by means of church influence will only be a subject for thanksgiving.—Mid-Continent.

Sunday-School Lesson—Sept. 13.

CHRIST AND THE BLIND MAN.

LESSON TEXT.

John ix, 1-11, 35-38.

MEMORY VERSES.- 35-38.

CRITICAL NOTES.

BY PRESIDENT TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

Verses 1-3. Who did sin: This question of the disciples is one that involves difficulty in its explanation. It is evidently founded on the idea, common among the Jews, that suffering and calamity of this sort were to be accounted for by sin, as in some way connected with the individual. Here, however, was a case where the evil began with birth, and thus could not be a consequence of sin committed since birth. The use of the words "this man," in the question, seems strange and surprising. It is possible that the thought of the disciples may have been this: The only explanations possible in ordinary cases seem not to be applicable in such a case as this; the man's own sin, because the blindness is from birth; the sin of his parents, owing to the greatness of the calamity—what explanation can be given? Let us ask Jesus himself to solve the difficulty. Some, however, have supposed that there is a suggestion of the doctrine of the pre-existence of souls, some sinfulness in the pre-existent state—a doctrine held, it is supposed, to some extent, among the Jews. Others, that the thought may have been of the possibility of sin in the unborn child. The answer of Jesus strikes at the foundation of their question, without giving a direct reply to the twofold inquiry. It separates the calamity from sin altogether, and declares it to have its cause in something else.—That the works of God should be made manifest in him: There seems evidently to be a reference in this clause to the miracle of healing which was about to be performed. Whether this reference includes all that is intended, is questionable. Quite probably the whole matter of God's working in the great plan for the salvation of men through Christ may have been in mind in the use of the words.

Verses 4, 5. If we read "we," with the Revisers, Jesus unites his disciples with himself in the general statement of duty and obligation.—While it is day: Day and night here evidently represent the time of life and death—the working-time and the time when work must cease. For Jesus, the end of the working-time was drawing near.—When I am in the world: During the time of his presence and working in the world he is the light of the world—his work is to give light, as was now to be done in the case of this blind man, so far as the light of the eyes were concerned, and as was to be seen—in the higher sense—in every case where spiritual illumination and true life were given. The expression is in its form equivalent to "whenever," and, if so interpreted, it becomes a universal statement as to the light-giving work of Christ, everywhere and always. The utterance of this verse is immediately preparatory to the performance of the miracle.

Verses 6, 7. The reason why Jesus used here the precise means which he did, we are unable to determine. We observe that sometimes the cures were performed by a word, and apparently without the use of any instrumental agency, and that at other times such agencies, if they may be so called, were employed. There is no case which corresponds, in this respect, precisely with the one here related. It would seem that the adaptation of the means to the end, in the different cases, may probably have had some connection with the state of mind of the person to be cured. The sending to the pool of Siloam, and the addition of the interpretation of the name on the part of the evangelist, must also be left to conjecture.

Verses 8, 9. The man, on returning from Siloam, came to his house (v. 7); and soon after this, very probably on the same day or the day following, the neighbors became aware that a strange thing had happened. They saw what seemed to be the same blind beggar, of whom they had known as being blind from his birth, possessed of sight like themselves. What could it mean?—A beggar: This fact has not been mentioned earlier in the narrative. Some have supposed that the particle should be translated "because" rather than "that," and that the clause gives the reason why they were so familiar with the fact of his blindness. It will be noticed that the persons designated "as they which saw him" are distinguished from "the neighbors." Their attention had been drawn to him as a beggar, they had seen him that he was a beggar (if we adopt the rendering "that"). This was their knowledge of him; the neighbors, of course, knew more. The presentation of the story at this point is most natural and vivid, and it bears witness of its own truthfulness.

Verses 10, 11. The man assured them that he was indeed the person whom they had so often seen as a blind beggar. Their astonishment and questioning were at once turned, and naturally so, to the manner of the cure. How—in what way and by what means—were thine eyes opened? The man, in the simplest manner, repeats the facts of the case. He speaks of the one who had restored his sight as "the man called Jesus." He speaks of him as one who would be recognized by his name on the part of the questioners, but he says nothing more. He even declares that he does not know where Jesus now is (v. 12). The manner in which the man deals with his questioners, as the story moves on, is one of the most life-like things connected with the narrative.

Verses 35, 36. The story of the leading of the man to the Pharisees, and of what followed, is found in the verses intervening between the two sections of this lesson; and now we have the revelation of himself, on the part of Jesus, to the man whom he had blessed. The Pharisees had "cast him out;" that is, they had contemptuously thrust him out from the place where he had been brought into their presence. The expression here does not refer, as it does in some other places, to a formal excommunication by the authorities.—The Son of God: Some authorities read "the Son of man." Jesus puts a question which is beyond the man's present thought, but one which may well lead him to the end desired—the consummation of the blessing which he had to bestow upon him. The man, no doubt, was filled with awe and reverence by reason of what he had experienced. He manifests confidence in Jesus, and asks to be led to the truth.

Verses 37, 38. The first clause, "thou hast seen him," may have in itself a special reference to the new gift of sight which had been bestowed upon the man; and this is, indeed, the view which is taken by many writers. He also stands now before you, and is uttering these words in your hearing. In this solemn and impressive way Jesus makes himself known. The man at once yields his full confidence, and is persuaded that the one who has wrought the great miracle for him is, indeed, what he affirms himself to be. He answers, in the fullness of feeling and of faith, "Lord, I believe;" and his action answers to his words—he prostrates himself before Jesus, and worships. It is not strange that the words of Jesus should follow, which we find in the next verse, "that they which see not may see."—Sunday-School Times.

Louisiana Notes.

The Louisiana State Fair and Shreveport Exposition will open Nov. 3, and close Nov. 7, inclusive. The premiums and purses aggregate $30,000.

The Mississippi Valley road brought to this city during the last twelve months 468,433 bales of cotton, being 29,300 bales more than last year.

The receivers of the New Orleans and Northwestern railway propose to begin immediately to improve the road, and to put it in shape for the active transportation of cotton and other freight.

In East Feliciana parish the Methodists have nineteen churches and four parsonages, and 1,328 members, and sixteen Sunday-schools with 700 scholars. We learn these facts from the Jackson, La., Mirror.

Messrs. Hedley & Jones, of Jones Station, La., have in successful operation a creamery where beautiful golden butter is manufactured, and retailed at 25 cents a pound. A variety of dairy products are shipped North and South. Over fifty cows are milked.

A Northern syndicate has bought an immense cypress brake near Plaquemine, containing over 1,000 acres of cypress and other timber. They are building a tap from the H., C. A. and N. R. R. to a point about two miles from here, in their brake, where they will have a sawmill and hotel.

The city of Monroe is looming up for sure. According to the books of Mr. George Miller, parish assessor, there are now in this city 877 legally qualified voters; 453 resident and 35 non-resident tax payers. The total population of the city proper is 4,375.—Monroe Times.

We are informed that a sawmill of 25 000 feet per day capacity will be erected in the next few days near the residence of Mr. J. E. Adger. The parties having cut all the timber in reach at their late site at Buckner, Ark., were forced to find a new location. They will build a tram to connect with the Cotton Belt railway at or near Hughes' Spur, a distance of about three miles.—Bossier Banner.

A Word to Bro. H. Armstrong,

AND ALL WHO OPPOSE THE PROFESSING OF HOLINESS.

We notice in your replies to professors of holiness you seldom respect their feelings, using language that does not demonstrate a brotherly love or Christian spirit. And yet Bro. Armstrong professed (by not professing holiness) that you were more holy than those who profess it. But, my brethren, have you not read that "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." If the Lord can "cleanse us from all unrighteousness," why oppose anyone telling what great things the Lord has done for them? Did the apostles forbid it?

We are told to "follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Let us (on our knees) search our Bibles, and if there we find that we are called to be holy (commanded, I should have said), let us strive so to live, by the help of God, and if called on to testify to the grace of God given us, or to his power to save, let us do so in meekness and humility.

Let us hear what Mr. Wesley says in regard to "Christian perfection:"

There is scarce any expression in Holy Writ which has given more offence than this. The word perfect is what many can not hear. The very sound of it is an abomination to them, and whosoever preaches perfection (as the phrase is), that is, asserts that it is attainable in this life, runs great hazard of being accounted by them worse than a heathen man, or a publican. And hence some have advised wholly to lay aside the use of those expressions, "because they have given so great offence." But are they not found in the oracles of God? If so, by what authority can any messenger of God lay them aside, even though all men should be offended? We have not so learned Christ; neither may we thus give place to the devil. Whatsoever God has spoken that will we speak, whether men will hear, or whether they will forbear; knowing that then alone can any minister of Christ be "pure from the blood of all men," when he hath not shunned to declare unto them all the counsel of God. We may not, therefore, lay these expressions aside, seeing they are the words of God and not of man.

Advice is cheap, some one has said, but it will often save a headache. But the value of advice is often more appreciated when its necessity is the greatest, so that if one does not do what he is told to avoid pain, he will often do anything to get rid of it.

Pain is so general to humanity that none is exempt from its attacks, but fortunately there is a way of relief. From the simplest ache to the agonies of rheumatism and the torture of sciatica or neuralgia, there is no form of pain that will not yield to Mansfield's Magic Arnica Liniment. It is a modern Balm of Gilead that never fails, and even physicians of long practice have been surprised over and over again at its wonderful adaptability to such a wide range of human ailments. A single application is often sufficient to give complete relief, and one bottle will go farther and do more than dozens of alleged pain killers with which the country is flooded. It is the best arnica preparation known. Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

An Immortelle.

[In memory of Enoch Welsh, son of Mrs. E. I. Welsh, of Lumberton, Miss.]

"Enoch is dead!" This was the sad message brought to me. How my heart ached for the mother, sisters and brothers when it was told me. Then we laid him down to sleep by his father, till the bright morning dawns and "the shadows flee away."

Just a year ago he wrote a little letter to me while I was away on a visit. It was an unexpected pleasure. I had sent him a poem to recite at the last day of school; he thanked me, and said he "wished that I could be with them on that day and at the picnic," and signed himself, "Your friend, Enoch." And, strangely enough, on the letter was fastened one tiny immortelle. It lies before me now on the letter, as fresh and fair as it was when placed there. Did that little everlasting flower bloom in vain? Did Enoch Welsh live a few years on this earth-home of ours in vain? No, no; the mission of his brief stay was fulfilled and his going away has widened our vision so that we can almost see the glint of the glory inside "the gates ajar."

Enoch was a faithful Sunday-school scholar, a member of the church, a loving brother, a dutiful son, and the world is poorer for the loss of such a boy. Mother, sisters, brothers, weep not—the little immortelle is emblematic of the life that Enoch now lives "in the land that is fairer than day."

There is no more useful or elegant article than Ayer's Hair Vigor—the most popular and economical hair-dressing in the market. It causes the hair to grow abundantly and retain the beauty and texture of youth; prevents baldness, heals troublesome humors of the scalp and keeps it clean, cool, and healthy. Both ladies and gentlemen everywhere prefer Ayer's Hair Vigor to any other dressing for the hair. Mrs. Lydia O. E. Pitts-ton, Mo., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time, and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and falling hair, so that I was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor, my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor to any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair."

WINDOW SHADES!

Our offering of dropped styles of shades at half price was so successful last summer that we have concluded to repeat the same this year. By dropped styles we mean the styles which will not be made this coming fall and which we will, therefore, be unable to get duplicates of. The goods are perfect and on the best quality of spring fixtures with a handsome band. We will sell and others in proportion. The larger sizes of shades are what they use principally in the South, and there has never been an opportunity of buying them as low as this. We will accompany the drive with standard makes of Table Oil Cloth at 15 cents per yard. Floor Oil Cloth, Wall Paper, Matting and Rugs we are running out at very low figures, and you will save money by buying now.

A 7x42 Shade at 75c.; worth $1.50,
An 8x38 Shade at 90c.; worth $2,

Briefs.

Dr. John Mathews said recently that he "knew a man in Kansas City who was so busy praying that his wife had to support the family!"

Switzerland is the oldest republic the world ever had. She has just celebrated her six hundreth anniversary. The republic was organized in 1291.

Railroad corporations refuse to put a drinking man in a position of trust. Now, why should the people by their votes put such a man in a public office? Is not the public office as important to the public as any office of trust in the railroad corporation? You, who have votes to cast, answer that question by your votes?

Many Christians pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," and then go to work for bread as if they had not prayed for it! And that is exactly right. Many Christians pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven," and then fold their hands as if they had nothing to do with bringing in that kingdom and doing that will. And that is exactly wrong. Why not act the same way in both cases?

What a pitiful cry it is that comes from our colleges, begging for money to carry forward the great work of Christian education! Centenary has been begging for years for an endowment to enable her to do the work God and the church has assigned to her, and still she begs. We know men who could stop that cry in ten minutes, if they would! Millsaps, through the eloquent Galloway and the indefatigable Watkins, has for three years been begging the 70,000 Methodists of Mississippi for $50,000 to enable her to make a start, and still she begs.

"Alas! for the rarity
Of Christian charity
Under the sun."

We have received from John Jastremski, superintendent, the announcement of the opening on the first day of October of the Louisiana Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. This excellent institution is located at Baton Rouge. The various branches of education are taught according to the latest and most improved methods. An "Industrial Department" has been added, in which several kinds of industries are taught. It is a State institution, and all its advantages are offered to all deaf-mutes of the State free of charge. All parents or guardians of such deaf-mutes are urgently invited to send them to this institution. All between the ages of eight and twenty-five are eligible.

Several communications in our paper have had reference to the examination of our candidates for orders. This is an important subject. We have known men to be on these "examining committees" who were utterly incompetent for the task set before them. A writer in the Central Christian Advocate shows the disadvantage of the present system, and suggests the appointment of a faculty from the scholarly and competent men of the Conference, to consist of a president and one professor for each department of study. One president and eight professors would do the work better and more satisfactorily than it is now done. This is evidently a matter that each Conference can regulate for itself. How does this plan strike you?

"There is no more persistent church-goer than Satan, but he especially rejoices to be at a church fair."

Our Young Ministers.

We think a good deal about our young preachers. Indeed, we believe all the older ministers do the same, and it is natural that they should. The older men are conscious that they must soon put off the harness—lay down the weapons of war—and it is natural that they should be anxious about those who are to come after them, and carry on the work and push on the warfare in which they have spent their lives. They not only take an interest in their younger brethren, and rejoice in their growing success, but they pray earnestly that they may, indeed, become "living epistles, known and read of all men."

Sometimes young preachers become possessed with the idea that the old preachers look upon them as a sort of intruders, who have come into the field to push them out into the barren wastes—that the old men think the young men ought not to push themselves so vigorously to the front! After several years' close observation at this point, we are ready to say that this is a mistake as to the majority of our older preachers. We rejoice to believe that the majority of our old preachers have more sense and more religion than such a condition of mind and heart would indicate. If any young preacher who reads this has that sort of thought and feeling in regard to his elder brethren, we hasten to exhort him to banish all such, for we verily believe that his best and truest friends, his most faithful exemplars and his most trusty advisers, will be found among the old ministers. And these old men—these veterans of the church army—as a rule, are held in high esteem by the young soldiers. And they should be. Have they not "borne the heat and burden of the day"? Have they not led the hosts of Israel to victory time and again? Have they not learned wisdom by experience in conducting their campaigns in the "wars of the Lord"? It is well, then, that the young men esteem them very highly for their work's sake. This mutual esteem and honor between the young ministers and the old is a connecting bond which Satan often tries to break, but "has been let hitherto." And we pray that he may never be able to disrupt it.

When we began this, we did not intend to go off in this way, but we will "let it stand," as the proof-readers say.

We have been observing as closely as circumstances would allow the young preachers of our constituency. By that term we mean the men who have not yet passed the meridian of forty. There are many such in our three patronizing Conferences. They have come from all the walks of society, and, therefore, are representatives of every grade of social life. They have various endowments of intellectual abilities, and have attained unto various degrees of culture and have reached various experiences in grace, and are, therefore, in some sort, qualified for the varied work of the Christian ministry. And, in our judgment, they are, for the most part, doing their work well. As the result of their zealous and courageous efforts the kingdom of the Lord is extending and enlarging on every side. Full of zeal for the cause of righteousness, and fully consecrated to this one work, with all the hopefulness and enthusiasm of youthful ambition, they are studying the Word of God carefully, planning the work wisely and executing it with distinguished ability. These young men, the representatives of every grade of social life, are reaching every grade of social life and impressing the truth upon it and winning from it men and women for God and the church.

We rejoice to know that our beloved church has so much of promise in her young preachers. While they are our hope—and a "good hope" it is—they are also "our joy and crown of rejoicing." We older men look upon them as they move from victory to victory, and thank God that we can safely leave the affairs of the church into their hands, assured that when they come into the full possession of the inheritance they will administer it with wisdom and courage and carry forward the great enterprises of Zion to a more splendid success than ever crowned our own efforts. Our church in Mississippi and Louisiana may well congratulate herself upon the large number of cultured, zealous and consecrated young men who are filling her pulpits and leading her hosts to the battle. The splendor of their present achievements is the assurance of their future success.

E. B. RAMSEY.

Dr. Cottrell Corrected.

I find in the last issue of your paper Dr. J. B. Cottrell offers a criticism on one point of a sermon he heard me preach, at Monteagle, on Faith. I am never much surprised when sinners and careless laymen so far misunderstand a sermon; but when one of our preachers—a smart one at that—gets matters so mixed up as Bro. Cottrell has, some explanation is necessary, both for the sake of the critic and the one criticised. I do not suppose anyone of that vast assembly, except Dr. Cottrell, heard the wild and contradictory statements he thinks I made. If I said a word about knowledge in the treatment of faith, I do not remember it. This is what he represents me as having said: "That one might lack everything else except faith, and be accordant with God;" and then that I declared faith could not be had without knowledge. I did state that one might be without everything except faith, and what grew out of it, and accompanied it, and he would please God.

Now, there is but one explanation of the dear Doctor's misapprehension of my sermon; and this will, no doubt, be the more appreciated by those who were on the ground at the time, and had ears to hear and eyes to see. The Doctor was bestowing his moments, thoughts and smiles upon an auburn-haired Mississippian. I imagine he would be glad to have her accept my definition of faith in reference to him. I said: "Faith or confidence would bring love, and love hearty and cheerful obedience." Those of us who have been over the road now travelled by the Doctor are well prepared to excuse any mistakes he may make.

He says: "The infelicity of every discussion of the subject of faith I have ever heard came of not defining the principle." Here comes his definition: "Faith is microcosmically all that character can unfold of grace and excellence." Now you have it. Surely the world will never have any more trouble over the subject of faith. In the North Mississippi Conference, when the young preachers used to hear anyone use a big word, they would say: "What did you call the gentleman's name?" In every congregation, even at Monteagle, there would be some who, no doubt, on hearing the Doctor's "microcosmically" would want to know the gentleman's name.

But after all, whether we can explain to the satisfaction of everyone or not, it is to be hoped we have the faith in God which will bring us to that glorious end to which God in his Word directs.

What to Do for the Young.

From the beginning child-training has been the highest function of our race. Each generation lives that the next may be better than it; else God's work is marred and his purpose thwarted by his creature, man. The State exacts taxes from one to educate another's child. This implies what is practiced in places that the child of one shall be compelled to receive the scholastic benefit of another's money. So goes the work of compulsory legislation on moral duties. The church believes that each parent is responsible to God for the educational training of his child. Yet many parents seem to labor almost solely to feed and clothe the bodies of their children, while they starve and dwarf their souls. Minds and hearts need to be fed as well as bodies.

To lay up money for a boy is to take the mainspring out of his energies and forestall that development of manhood which comes only from self-reliance and a conscious ability to meet personally the demands of life. Do not set a boy to build on another man's foundation. If he is no longer a child, let him walk alone. Strengthen his native powers and store his mind with the wisdom of God and of men, and let him become, under Providence, the maker of his own fortune. All the strongest and most worthy men are thus self-made. Put virtue into the boy, but do not burden him at the outset with property accumulated by others. Mr. Vanderbilt grew strong in making his great fortune and lived long; but his son, William H., did not long survive the transfer of the millions to his shoulders. Your son can make money as you did. Don't treat him as a pauper or an incompetent.

But surely money should be laid up for daughters! Not largely, unless you would make them the prey of fortune-hunters. Better far to risk the pains of poverty than to endure the lot of her who is married for her money.

The young need to have most of their capital stored in their heads and hearts, where it can not be stolen nor lost in the strifes of trade. One chief excellence of the possessions we carry within us is, the more we sell or give away of them the more we have left.

But let it be remembered that not all education is equally good. The devil may here, as elsewhere, be transformed into an angel of light. Many a youth has been ruined at college. It is only godliness which is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. What the young need to have given them is not money so much as training and culture, so that they may know how to make and use all earthly values for the highest ends.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Mississippi Educational Association.

To the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference we would again appeal in behalf of our young ministers who are seeking an education preparatory to their entering upon the regular duties of the pastorate. Our work in the past has been so successful, and the standing of those whom we have sent forth has been so satisfactory, that we feel that everyone among us capable of appreciating the advantages of an education will deem it a privilege to aid us in our efforts. We do not appeal unto you as those who would seek aid for the unworthy or the indigent; we come presenting to the church some of her most worthy and faithful children who say to us, "Give us aid, if you can, that we may be more thoroughly prepared to do our Father's work." Children crying out for help! Can the church refuse the aid they seek? Dare we offer them a stone, a scorpion or a serpent? How many there are among us who could help us in this work, and yet from whom we receive no encouragement. We do not ask for large contributions from any. If we can secure small amounts from the many, we can accomplish our object. Let those who can not give by tens, give less, even down to fractions of a dollar.

Brethren, help us by sending some amount at once, if possible, to our treasurer, Dr. C. G. Andrews, Meridian, Miss.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee at Crystal Springs, a few days ago, when we had a full report from our secretary, Rev. M. L. Burton, we found that during the past year we had kept five young men at Centenary College at an expense of about $500. This year we have received applications from seven—all of whom have been entered upon our roll, and will enter school at Centenary for the coming session. It is easy to see that we need additional help to carry these additional men; therefore, we call upon all who have given notes to pay up, if possible, their annual subscriptions, and upon all others who may have a kindly feeling for this work to come to to our help.

One feature in our work I desire to call especial attention to again, and that is, that nearly all of our notes are held against ministers—very few being against laymen. Why should this be thus when the laymen reap all the results? Preachers rarely have the opportunity of hearing the gospel from others, while the membership of the churches are weekly auditors of those sent to them to preach the Word. Reason—aye, justice, would say that this work of preparing the ministry for better and more effective work is clearly the duty of the laity more than of the clergy. Some of our pulpits are being filled to-day by young men educated by this association who would not be tolerated by their hearers but for the advantages thus afforded them. Where the cry comes from more loudly for an educated, refined pastor, the least is being done. We call upon you, brethren, to examine yourselves, and see whether or not you stand in the faith as to this one important matter.

T. B. HOLLOMAN, Pres't.

Epworth League.

On the sixth instant I organized in my charge an Epworth League. After reading the Constitution and making a few remarks explanatory of the character and aims of the organization, and enrolling the names of those desiring to become members, I appointed the following persons as a committee on nominations: H. H. Hines, Mrs. H. E. Galloway and Miss Fannie Lusk.

The said committee reported the following nominations, which were unanimously adopted: President, G. W. Carlisle; vice-presidents, T. P. Barr, Mrs. S. H. Parker, Miss Addie Purnell; secretary, Miss Iola Tapley; treasurer, Miss Cecile Nugent. Committee on Christian Effort—T. P. Barr, Mrs. Mary J. Griffith, Miss Annie Buckley. Committee on Charity—Mrs. S. H. Parker, Mrs. Sallie Harding, W. H. Kennon, Mrs. Mattie V. Brown, Miss Lela A. Black. Committee on Literary Work—Miss Addie Purnell, Miss Willie E. Galloway, Miss Sue S. Stevens, Luther Manship.

The League starts with a membership of twenty-seven, and a prospect for a considerable increase in the near future.

Notes.

Bishop Foss: "The evangelistic preaching of to-day needs the blood and iron of intense conviction as to sin and punishment."

Bro. Dubose, of the Pacific Methodist Advocate, does not fancy sensational preaching. He says, "It is an ichorous, pyæmic, soul-hurting disease. Common sense and gospel preaching are at a premium."

It seems that the different kinds of "facts" will never cease to grow in number. We have had "cold facts," "hard facts," "bald facts," "naked facts," "fixed facts," "stubborn facts," and now the editor of the Great Central gives us a string of "frozen facts." We are prompted to enquire, "Where unto will this thing grow?"

"I have something more to do than feel," said Charles Lamb in a time of great anguish of heart. How much of the weight of sorrow would be lifted from suffering souls, if they could realize that they had "something more to do than feel!" Christians should remember that, whether suffering or rejoicing, they, too, have "something more to do than feel."

Paul's expression at the close of his life is the more significant the more we meditate upon it. Said he, "I have kept the faith." Long before he had "counted all things but loss" for that and now at life's close he said, "I have kept the faith." It was really the only thing worth keeping. It's possession in that culminating period of life was more than a balance for the loss of everything else. He died poor, but "kept the faith" that introduced to the riches of the eternal inheritance. No matter what you lose, if you keep "the faith."

George Jones, the deceased editor of the New York Times, refused the offer of $5,000,000 cash, if he would keep silent on the Tweed matter. He promptly spurned the offer and went forward in his fight against the Ring until the whole rotten mass was exposed and the principal actors were lodged in the penitentiary. That was praiseworthy in Mr. Jones. We don't believe he stands alone in such integrity and devotion to the public welfare. There are thousands of men in Louisiana to-day who can not and will not be bought by Lottery money, and they will fight until that rotten corporation is buried forever out of sight.

An exchange gives this as the origin of the Salvation Army:

It had its origin in a sensational way in the English town of Whitby, in the rough coal-mining district of Yorkshire, where Gen. Booth, at that time Rev. Wm. Booth, was doing humble mission work. England was then in arms, expecting to jump into the Russo-Turkish war. It occurred to Booth that he might attract a crowd by issuing a declaration of war himself, so he prepared one forthwith, sprinkled it plentifully with hallelujahs and posted 2,000 copies of it about town. The device tickled the British sense of humor, there was a "red-hot rousing meeting," to quote Gen. Booth, "the penitent felt down in heaps," and the Salvation Army sprang into life full-grown.

It is well for us who preach to remember that preaching is not merely for the "development of the subject in hand, but principally for the good of the hearers. We may often preach to edification in much less time than we can "develop a subject," and in that development harass the audience to weariness. "Doing justice to a subject" is often a good way to do injustice to the hearers. Sometimes the best way to "do justice to a subject" in preaching is to follow the example of the doctor in "doing justice" to medicine—that is, give it in "broken doses." No doctor would give a pill as big as a marble at one time. He breaks it up into small ones to be given at regular intervals. This may be the best way to administer spiritual physic. It may be the most effective method of "doing justice to a great subject."

New York Christian Advocate, Sept. 3.

The Century Company has published an important work, entitled "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War." In volume 1, page 47, General Abner Doubleday writes: "Bishop Stevens, of the Methodist Church, stated in a speech made by him on Memorial Day in the Academy of Music, New York, that he aimed the first gun against the Star of the West." This is an error. At the time referred to there was no "Methodist Church." There was a Methodist Episcopal Church, but it had no "Bishop Stevens," and if Bishop Stevens had belonged to the Methodist Episcopal Church he would never have aimed a gun at the Star of the West. The Bishop Stevens mentioned was of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. History should be written accurately in order to be valuable.

"Bishop Stevens, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," is a man we never heard of before! Such inaccuracy in a paper that talks so much about its accuracy is inexcusable. "History should be written accurately in order to be valuable," and so "personals" in a newspaper should be written accurately in order to be "valuable." "Bishop Stevens, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South!" Well! well!

Personal and Otherwise.

We call special attention to Dr. Harrison's "Earnest Appeal" in another column. It will be an everlasting disgrace if we do not meet the assessment for the expenses of the Ecumenical Conference. Our record for generous hospitality will be marred and Southern Methodism will lose caste. Brethren, let not such things be. What you do, do quickly. There is no time to lose.

If "Ephram Smasher" will give us his name, his article will go into the paper.

Washington Duke, of Durham, N. C., has given $500,000 to Trinity College. Now for Centenary! Who speaks?

Rev. T. B. Holloman writes: "I am daily strengthening for the pulpit, though advised to desist until cooler weather."

Rev. J. T. Cunningham, Buena Vista circuit, writes, Sept. 5: "I have just closed a meeting, which resulted in twenty-eight conversions."

The news from different sections indicate that the cotton crop has fallen off, at least, twenty per cent., and, in consequence, the prices are getting better.

Some of the reports from the work were so long that we could not find room for them. The brief report is in demand, and always commands preference.

The "Week of Prayer" was observed at the Seashore Camp Ground, and $14.26 collected for the general mission fund and paid over to the editor by Bro. David Zable.

We are informed that our friends at Slidell, La., "have a mind to build," and have really began a church-house. We congratulate them on their beginning and pray for their success.

We have received a communication, signed "Christian," with no clew to the name of the author. Will people never learn that we can not publish articles unless we know the writers?

Bro. Haynes, of the Tennessee Methodist, in neat compliment to us and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, perpetrated unconsciously, no doubt, the neatest joke of the season. "Wielding the scepter of the tripod" sounds funny to a man yoked to a "Conference organ."

What are the Louisiana and Mississippi preachers doing in regard to the Ecumenical collection? This money is to be used to entertain the foreign delegates and should be forthcoming. Send all amounts collected to Barbee & Smith. Our home delegates will pay their own expenses if they go.

A brother in this office, the other day, suggested that the name of the Conference Board of Missions be changed to "The Itinerants' Aid Society." A man in high position has already said that it is nothing more than what other churches call a "Sustentation Board." Change the name or change the thing.

Dr. Sullivan writes, Sept. 7: "I am just home from Walthall circuit, where I found the pastor in charge, Bro. Jno. R. D. King, in the midst of great spiritual prosperity. At Long Branch he has just closed a meeting with an ingathering of more than seventy members, and a great lift-up. At other points more than fifty have joined us on this circuit. Showers of grace are falling all about. To Jesus be the praise."

Bro. Blocker, Church Point, La., Sept. 7: "Opened up at this place yesterday, with about 600 in attendance. Deep move throughout the congregation. Three conversions and two accessions. The meeting will continue ten days. Brethren, pray for this meeting, for it is one of the devil's strongholds. Our meeting at Rayne last week was a success. Sinners were converted and believers sanctified. Glory to God."

One of our preachers writes: "I am sixty-two years of age; have this season attended five protracted meetings, coming in almost continuous succession, each holding from five to ten days. Have done more than four-fifths of the preaching—say, fifty-six discourses; led in most of the singing, leading in the prayer and praise services, and laboring constantly in the altar exercises. Have had all good services and happy conversions."

Ocean Club Hotel.

The papering of this immense establishment has now been completed, and reflects great credit upon Heath, Schwartz & Co., Lim., the contractors. The parlors and office are furnished in a delicate shade of blue, and the selections for all the rooms were made from patterns of the most subdued colors. All the rooms were cottoned previous to papering—12,000 yards of domestic being used. About 200 rooms were papered, making the contract one of the largest which has ever been given out in the South.

Pin Your Faith.

Pin your faith to Creole Female Tonic and you will never regret it. It is a remedy particularly prepared for ladies.

A Canard.

THE NEW YORK PRESS EXPOSES THAT "IMPORTANT BILL" BUSINESS.

The article credited to the New York Press going the rounds of the papers, in which it is alleged that unfavorable action has been taken in the New York Legislature against the Royal Baking Powder, proves to have been a canard, gotten up and circulated by opposition baking powder makers for purposes quite apparent to everyone.

The New York Press, in exposing the fraud, says: "No such legislation as that stated in this article has ever been had in this State—or in any legislation, to our knowledge." The lie is made from whole cloth. The Press disclaims any responsibility for the publication, and objects to being made a party to such methods adopted by some baking powder manufacturers in their efforts to substitute their goods for others now in use.

An Earnest Appeal.

By no fault of any man in the Southern Methodist Church, we are in danger of failing to meet our assessment for the expenses of the Ecumenical Conference, which meets Oct. 7, 1891, within five weeks of this date. We have sent circulars to presiding elders and to pastors of churches in the towns and cities, and we earnestly beg our brethren to come to our relief. If all responses are made by Sept. 20, we shall be secure, and the record of Southern Methodism for generosity and hospitality will not be marred by a failure to provide for the strangers who have visited our shores to take counsel with us concerning the affairs of our Lord's kingdom in the earth. I beg the brethren to make their contributions first, and then call upon me to make any explanation that may seem to be wanted. The time is short. The danger is very near to us. Let us pay first, and explain afterward! Our Northern brethren have paid more than their assessment already. We can not afford to fail to pay ours.

Please remit to Barbee & Smith, Agents, Nashville, Tenn.

W. P. HARRISON,
For Executive Committee.

Sept. 1, 1891.

Warm weather often causes extreme tired feeling and debility, and in the weakened condition of the system, diseases arising from impure blood are liable to appear. To gain strength, to overcome disease, and to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Dedication.

On the fifth Sabbath in August I had the pleasure of dedicating our new church at Zachary, La. The weather was perfect, bating the dust. The congregation was immense, far exceeding the capacity of the auditorium. The building is thirty-six feet by fifty-two, exclusive of vestibule. It is a very tasteful structure of Gothic architecture, with a corner tower, and is handsomely furnished. The cost of the building and furniture was $2,300. The entire amount was prepaid, so that the usual "dedicatory collection" was dispensed with. This is certainly a noteworthy achievement on the part of a flock of considerably less than a hundred. The grace of liberality is surely theirs. Pastor Leggett and his people are entitled to congratulations. During my stay in Zachary I was the guest of Bro. C. B. Brown and his excellent wife, and more hospitable entertainment one need not desire.

"Don't Kick if You Are Sick."

Creole Female Tonic makes the weak woman strong, and sends new blood bounding through the veins, imparting new life and strength to the weakened parts.

It stimulates nature to its work with the happiest effect. We commend it to suffering women everywhere, as a sovereign remedy for their peculiar ailments.

Sympathy from Mississippi Baptists.

MR. EDITOR: At its meeting in the city of Natchez, on July 23, 1891, the Mississippi Baptist State Convention adopted the following resolutions, which I have the honor to communicate to you, as instructed therein:

Resolved, That the Baptist State Convention of Mississippi, representing 83,000 Baptists, express their sympathy for the good people of Louisiana in their fight against the Louisiana State Lottery.

Resolved, That our secretary be requested to forward a copy of the above resolution to the religious papers of Louisiana, the New Delta, the Times-Democrat, the Picayune, and the Southern Baptist Record. JNO. T. BUCK,

Cor. Sec. Miss. Baptist Con.

Jackson, Miss. Sept. 5.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Rev. C. A Powell.

A note from Bro. Beall, Sept. 7, says that Bro. Powell has recovered sufficiently to go to Canton, where he will remain with friends, recruiting. Bro. Beall says, "I am glad to inform his friends that he is rapidly recovering." We are glad to publish this good news.

Sic Semper Tyrannis.

Eighty dollars having been raised for the gratuitous distribution over the State of Louisiana of 10,000 copies of Dr. Carradine's celebrated pamphlet, "The Louisiana Lottery Company Examined and Exposed," and $270 more being needed to carry this purpose into effect, we appeal to the friends of liberty and morality everywhere for aid in ridding our State of this monster evil.

Contributions can be sent to this office, or to Rev. F. D. Van Valkenburgh, 106 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

HOME LIFE.

TO WOMAN WHO TOILETH.

BY JULIA ANNA WALCOTT.

Place a spray in thy belt, or a rose on thy stand,
When thou settest thyself to a common-place seam;
Its beauty will brighten the work in thy hand,
Its fragrance will sweeten each dream.

When life's petty details most burdensome seem,
Take a book—it may give thee the solace thou'st sought,
And turn its leaves o'er till thou catchest the gleam
Of some gem from the deep mine of thought.

When the task thou performest is irksome and long,
Or thy brain is perplexed by a doubt or a tear,
Fling open the window, and let in the song
God hath taught to the birds for thy cheer.

And lean from the casement a moment, and rest;
While the winds cool thy cheek, glance thou up at the sky
Where the cloud ships are sailing, like argosies blest;
Bright-winged, they pass majestically by.

Then, steal a fair picture of mountain or glen,
A smooth-gliding streamlet through green meadows sweet;
Or, if thy lot's cast 'mong the dwellings of men,
Of some radiant face in the street.

Then carry it back to thy work, and perchance
'Twill remind of thy childhood, or sweetly recall
Some long faded page of thy bright youth's romance,
It may be the dearest of all.

Oh, a branch of wild roses the barrenest ledge
Maketh fit for a throne, while the blossoming vine
Will turn to a bower the thorniest hedge;
So will beauty make stern life divine.

Make Home Happy.

Can there be a more important theme to claim the attention of thinking parents than that of making the home happy? Every parent should seek to make the home life pleasant and full of kind courtesy—so pleasant that its members will look upon it as the sweetest place on earth. Parents should find their highest enjoyment in advancing the innocent pleasures of the home. It is the duty of both the mother and the father to make their home as delightful to their children and each other as possible. What is more charming than the happy voices of children heard in mirthful laughter, while they are enjoying a mirthful frolic?

Do you ever think of your responsibilities regarding the training of your children, of making their young lives happy? Many a child goes astray, not because home wants prayer or virtue, not because it has no flower garden, but simply because it lacks pleasant sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as the flower needs the sunbeam. Children do not look far beyond the present moment. If it is pleased, it does not stop to ask itself why it is pleased, or whether the pleasure is harmless or harmful to it. It is their nature to seek that which pleases, and avoid that which displeases. Parents will do well to study the character of their young charges. The majority of parents do not understand how to train their children. They keep them under restraint; consequently, the children live a life of fear instead of love. This is a sad mistake in the management of children. The law of love is great, but it showeth not its full strength save when it is united with kindness. Teach your children to be hopeful and useful, and you will teach them to be happy. They should early learn from the habit of neatness, and when you are old their carelessness will not worry you or others. Teach them to be refined and courteous, and they will live to honor you. Parents should take care to have the home attractions stronger than outside attractions.

Young boys and girls should speak kindly to the mother—the father may turn his back on the children, but the mother, never. A loving mother will sacrifice every comfort for her children's enjoyment. She will glory in their fame and exult in their prosperity. If misfortune overtakes them; they are the dearer to her; and if disgrace settles upon them, she will still love and cherish them; if all the world crush them, she will be all the world to them.—The Old Homestead.

The Way to Use Sunday.

What is the use of Sunday to a business man or a working man? It often seems to put a stop to his work just as he wants another day; but a sensible man knows that he can not get on without his Sunday or day of rest and change and recreation. Men have tried to do without it, and some men have no real Sunday. Napoleon tried to make his army do without it, but was obliged to give that up. The men who do not keep Sunday are generally bitter, discontented, hard, and disagreeable. Why is it so, and what is the use of Sunday?

1. Sunday is a day of rest. No man was ever intended to go on with his work day after day without change. It is not healthy. This was partly the reason why one day in seven was appointed for rest. The Sabbath was made for man. God considered man's health when he made the law. He told him to do things because they were good for him, and not to do other things because they were bad for him.

2. Sunday is a day of worship. Man is an animal, and needs rest. Man is a spiritual animal, and needs to lift his mind to God, and hold communion with him, and offer sacrifice and thanksgiving. Without these there is no worship, and Sunday is a day on which he can do this without the distraction of business.

3. Sunday is a day of instruction. Sermon hearing is not worship, however much we may learn from it or be moved by it. But we ought to know whom and why and how we worship. Wilful ignorance is a common vice among Christians, and many men who think that they worship God do not know as much about their religion as they could learn from a five-cent catechism.

4. Sunday is a day of good works. Our Lord and Master healed the sick on the Sabbath, and preached that the right use of the day was rest from work for self, but not from work for others. Sunday may be used as a day for works of mercy. All spiritual works of mercy may be done on Sunday. To convert the sinner, instruct the ignorant, counsel the doubtful, comfort the sorrowful, bear wrong patiently, forgive injuries—all these are Sunday works, and every man can do some of them if he will. But that is not all. The corporal works of mercy can be done on Sunday. A man may feed the hungry, clothe the naked, entertain strangers, visit the sick, go to see prisoners, even if he has no other opportunity.—Iron Cross.

CHRISTIAN OLD AGE.—Old age, we admit, has its disabilities. At this period of life the dearest earthly friends are often gone. At the morning and evening meal stands a vacant chair; companionship ordained of heaven has been smitten by the fell destroyer, and the future walk is one of loneliness. Children may be far away, battling in the conflicts of life, or may have been translated to the unseen world. A new generation appears upon the stage, most of whom are unable to appreciate the labors that have been performed, or the inevitable infirmities of advancing years. The plaintive cry of David has been the experience of many since his day: "The days of my years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow."

Sanctified old age has its many lessons. We are taught in it the divine reality of religion. Enter that lowly cottage; see suspended from its walls such mottoes as "God bless our home!" "Thy statutes have been our songs in the house of our pilgrimage." Mark how piety fills the dwelling with richest fragrance, a piety matured under the varied processes of life-long discipline. Happy will it be if we may pass the closing days of life in contentment, anticipating the eternal Sabbath in the immediate presence of God.—New York Christian Advocate.

THE VALUE OF LEISURE MOMENTS.—Wide Awake gives the following story, which is all the better for being true:

Two men stood at the same table in a large factory in Philadelphia, at the same trade. Having an hour for their noonday every day, each undertook to use it in accomplishing a definite purpose; each persevered for about the same number of months, and each won success at last.

One of these two mechanics used his daily leisure hour in working out the invention of a machine for sawing a block of wood into almost any desire shape. When his invention was complete he sold the patent for a fortune, changed his workmen's apron for a broadcloth suit, and moved out of a tenement house into a brown-stone mansion.

The other man—what did he do? Well, he spent an hour each day during the most of a year in the very difficult undertaking of teaching a little dog to stand on his hind feet and dance a jig. At last accounts he was working ten hours a day at the same trade and at his old wages, and finding fault with the fate that made his fellow-workmen rich while leaving him poor.

Leisure moments may bring golden grain to the mind as well as the purse, if one harvests wheat instead of chaff.

SPECIAL PRAYER.—One of our contemporaries takes opportunity of calling attention to the importance of prayer for special matters, remarking "we are too general in our prayers. We pray much and receive but little just because we expect but little. When the disciples prayed for the gift of the Holy Ghost, they prayed for that, and that only. When the prophet prayed for rain, he bowed seven times on Mt. Carmel, and asked the Lord for rain, and nothing else. When the disciples undertook to get Peter out of prison, they assembled at the house of Mary and prayed, not for the conversion of anybody—not for the universal spread of the gospel—but they prayed for the liberation of Peter: they prayed until they sent an angel and a light into the prison, until they knocked the chains and the fetters off of Peter, until they removed the locks and bolts of the doors, and opened the gates for his passage."

There is truth in this; if we prayed for the conversion of one person and made efforts for the good of that one person, more might be accomplished than by scattering efforts. At any rate, we leave it to the consideration of all interested in prayer and in doing good.—Southern Churchman.

PLEASANT PEOPLE.—Some men move through life as a band of music moves down the street, flinging out pleasure on every side through the air, to everyone far and near that can listen. Some men fill the air with their presence and sweetness, as orchards in October days fill the air with perfume of ripe fruit. Some women cling to their own houses like the honeysuckle over the door, yet, like it, sweeten all the region with the subtle fragrance of their goodness. They are trees of righteousness which are ever dropping precious fruits around them. There are lives that shine like star-beams or charm the heart like songs sung upon a holy day. How great a bounty and a blessing it is to hold the royal gifts of the soul so that they shall be music to some and fragrance to others, and life to all! It would be no unworthy thing to live for—to make the power which we have within us the breath of other men's joy; to scatter sunshine where only clouds and shadows reign; to fill the atmosphere where earth's weary toilers must stand with a brightness which they can not create for themselves, and which they long to enjoy and appreciate.—Selected.

THE BEST CURE FOR WEARINESS.—There is nothing which will give a chance for rest to over-tired nerves so surely as a simple religious faith in the over-ruling, wise and tender Providence which has us in his keeping. It is in chafing against the conditions of our lives that we tire ourselves immeasurably. It is in being anxious about things which we can not help that we often do most of our spending. A simple faith in God which practically and every moment, and not only theoretically and on Sundays, rests on the knowledge that he cares for us at least as much as we care for those who are the dearest to us, will do much to give the tired nerve the feeding of the bird in its nest. Do not spend what strength you have, like the clematis in climbing on yourself, but lay hold on things that are eternal, and the peace of them will pass into your soul like a healing balm. Put yourself in the great everlasting currents, and then you can rest on your oars, and let those currents bear you on their strength.—Harper's Magazine.

WHAT KEEPS WOMEN YOUNG.—A woman is happy just in proportion as she is content, writes Edward W. Bok, in the September Ladies' Home Journal. The sun has a way of changing the spots upon which it shines. Especially is this true of our land, when one is up to-day and down to-morrow, and vice versa. The wisest woman is she who trusts in a to-morrow, but never looks for it. To sit down and wish that this might be, that that would be different, does a woman no good. It does her harm in that it makes her dissatisfied with herself, unpleasant to her friends, and makes her old before her time. Happiness is not always increased in proportion to enlarged success. This may sound like an old saw, and I think it is, but there is a world of wisdom in many an old proverb just the same. Contentment is a wonderful thing to cultivate. There would be fewer premature-old women in the world if it was given more of a trial and it became a more universal quality in womanhood.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE GREATEST PIES.

O, the apple pie is a very nice pie,
And a very nice pie indeed;
And some there are who say to me,
"Of all it takes the lead."
And the mince pie, too, is a very good pie,
As good as good can be,
If the crust is crisp and brown enough,
And the raisins, one—two—three.
And the pumpkin pie is a very nice pie,
For now and then you know;
If it's well made, 'tis fairly good—
As squash and pumpkin go.
And the cherry pie is a very nice pie,
Of fruit so tart and red;
And many a child will call this pie
Of every sort ahead.
But the greatest pies in all the land,
If you listen well to me,
Are the dear sand pies the children make
In the summer by the sea.

Letter to Country Boys and Girls.

Dear Young Friends: Perhaps many of you have heard of cities, and, like young Norval, who had "heard of battles," and determined to see one, you would like to see something of city life. You have read of the many and varied scenes, the beautiful parks, buildings, and monuments to heroes. You have heard of its wonderful activity, of the many avenues open to a poor boy or girl to make a living for themselves, and your greatest hope, desire and ambition is to go to the city and see the sights, get a situation, make money, get up in the world, and then go home and "astonish the natives."

The humdrum life on the farm, with its never-ending work, year in and year out, is so unsuited to your taste. If you could only get to a city and find congenial employment, congenial companions, have some place to go, something to see, the work would not seem so irksome and life would be worth living. This is, no doubt, what the boys say, and the girls think and say pretty much the same thing. Poor Joan, her work is never done and even drags along with a monotony that the boys know nothing of in comparison with their grievances. Added to their every-day-of-the-year duties, there is the extra busy times when the men folks and boys have hired help, and this means for them miles of tramping through, around and about the house with blistered feet, tired backs and throbbing temples. All this, and more, often makes them think that a change to a city life would bring a change for the better to their cramped enjoyments.

But, O ye boys and O ye girls in the country, "lend me your ears." If you have any homes, any friends or any way to make an honest living in the country, stay there, though you have to work hard, live on plain fare, wear plain clothes and be a plain country boy or girl. Better that a thousand times than to venture into a city, where gilded sin beckons you to come in and see the sights; where boy-trappers are on the lookout for you to lead you right into temptations that you never dreamed of in your country homes, and where girls are lured into dens of infamy with the promise of a home or employment. This is but a mere mention of some of the pitfalls that are laid to catch the country boys and girls that rush to the cities, hoping to find a situation in some pleasant place where they can see a little of the world.

Hist, O ye girls and O ye boys, the little of the world that you will see will be, perhaps, a dear sight, if you, as many do, pay for the sight with a lost character and perchance a lost soul.

Where one girl or boy from the country that comes to the cities, hoping to succeed, do succeed in winning a place in some honorable employment, hundreds—aye, thousands, fail, utterly fail. Better, far better, it will be for you to be satisfied with your dull country life than to take up arms against the wilderness of evils that beset the pathway of the uninitiated in the great cities.

No pen can describe, no tongue can tell half of the devices of Satan and his emissaries when they set to work to ruin a young woman or man. Their work is deplorable enough everywhere, but tenfold power is added to their wiles when they once get a mesh around those fresh from the country.

It is a hard matter for those young people who are born and raised in the cities to keep out of the traps that the Evil One spreads for their unwary feet. The Christian workers are doing all they can to help those that do come to the cities, friendless and alone, but they can not help all. So, my dear young friends, I would say to you, if these were the last words I should ever write, keep away from the big cities unless you have friends to help you. May God bless you all!

MRS. L. CHAPP SADLER.

GO HOME, BOYS.—Boys, don't hang around the corner of the streets. If you have anything to do, do it promptly, right off, then go home. Home is the place for boys. About the street-corners, and at the stables, they learn to talk slang, and they learn to swear, to smoke tobacco, and to do many other things which they ought not to do.

Do your business, and then go home. If your business is play, play but make a business of it. I like to see boys play good, earnest, healthy games. If I were the town council, I would give the boys a good, spacious playground. It should have plenty of green grass, and trees, and fountains, and broad spaces to run and jump and to play suitable games. I would make it as pleasant, as lovely as it could be, and I would give it to the boys to play in, and when the play was ended I would tell them to go home.—Sunday-School Scholar.

CHARACTER FOR INTEGRITY.—We have seen a notice of a Rotterdam thread merchant who had accumulated a fortune by industry, punctuality, and integrity. It was remarked of him that he never let a yard of bad thread go out of his hands, and would never take more than a reasonable profit. By these means he acquired such entire public confidence, that his customers would as willingly send a blind man or a child to buy for them as to go themselves. Boys, even from a purely financial view honesty brings reward. Ben Franklin said, "Honesty is the best policy," and so it has proven all through time. Openness, frankness, honesty pay in the end.

A little Detroit girl was bidding her boy playmate good-by, and on this occasion her mother told her to kiss him. She offered him a roguish cheek, and when the salute was gravely given began to rub it vigorously with her handkerchief.

"Why, Laura," said her mother, "you're not rubbing it off?"

"No, mama," answered the little maiden, demurely, "I'm rubbing it in."—Detroit Free Press.

SCIENTIFIC.

The Earth's Heat.

Many scientific men are devoting their lives to finding out all that can be learned about the interior of this wonderful globe of ours. One of the interesting problems on which they are engaged is the depth and geographical limits of the permanently frozen soil. The British Association has collected a large amount of data on this question. It has already told us some curious things, such as the fact that excellent wheat lands north of Manitoba overlie frozen earth that never thaws.

Sometimes geologists find strata of rock that they are able to show must have been buried at a remote age 20,000 feet under the surface. These upturned edges of rock, which some terrible convulsion lifted to the air, give us a glimpse of the condition of the interior some way below the greatest depth to which we can attain. The workmen in the deepest mines of Europe swelter in almost intolerable heat, and yet they have never penetrated over one-seven-thousandth part of the distance from the surface to the center of the earth. In the lower levels of some of the Comstock mines the men fought scalding water, and could labor only three or four hours at a time, until the Sutro tunnel pierced the mines and drew off some of the terrible heat, which had stood at 120 degrees.

The deepest boring ever made, that at Sperenberg, near Berlin, penetrates only 4,172 feet, about 1,000 feet deeper than the famous artesian well at St. Louis. The result of this imperfect knowledge is that there are more theories and disputes among scientific men with regard to the interior of the earth than about any other problem of physical science. Some eminent physicists, for instance, like Sir William Thomson, have believed that the crust of the earth is at least eight hundred miles thick. The majority adduce good reasons for believing that the crust is only twenty-five to fifty miles thick. All agree that the temperature within the earth continues to increase as it does near the surface—at the rate of one degree Farenheit for about every fifty-five feet of descent. All igneous rocks must be fused at no great depth.

In fact, at this rate of increase, the temperature at 200 miles is 28,000 degrees Farenheit, which is Professor Rosetti's estimate of the probable temperature of the sun. It is improbable, however, that this rate of increase is maintained for a great distance, and many physicists believe that at some unknown, but not very great depth the increase in temperature ceases. One of the most wonderful things in the study of sciences is the fact that the mysteries of one science are sometimes completely or partly explained by knowledge gleaned in some other department of study. It is thus that naturalists who have investigated the fauna and flora of scores of Pacific Islands have learned how far south Asiatic types prevail, and have added great weight to the conclusions of geologists that these Islands were once a part of the big continent north of them. —Geographical Magazine.

THE SPEED OF ELECTRICITY.—Philadelphia scientists are preparing to find out how fast an electric current travels. An experiment will be made, probably from the Franklin Institute, by connections over the Atlantic cable to Liverpool and return.

A recent test appeared to show that an electric current is a slow coach as compared to light, being only able to get over to Europe and back in something like a second, or only some 100,000 miles a minute, while light rambles along at a million-mile-a-minute gait. The Philadelphia scientists who are proposing to make further investigation are not satisfied to give up the record to sunlight, and hope to prove that the electrical current, if not handicapped, is the swifter element.

The most recent experiment was tried at McGill College, Montreal. The current was transmitted in Montreal, was transferred to the cable at the Newfoundland cable station by means of Thompson's mirror galvanometer, sent across to the station at Liverpool, and returned to Montreal by the same method. The distance traversed, partly by overhead wire, and partly by cable, was 8,000 miles. From the time the current left the key in Montreal until it returned to the receiver in the same office, just one second and one-twentieth of a second had elapsed; but the conditions were not as good as they might have been; hence the further experiment to be made here.

The rapidity with which the current travels over short wires, with no delay indicated unlimited possibilities in the direction of practical tests. Professor Marks, of the Edison Electric Light Company, is authority for the assertion that if the globe was encircled with a continuous cable, a current would travel the entire distance in a trifle over three seconds. At this rate a current would travel to the sun, covering the distance of 96,000,000 miles in three and a half minutes (or twice as fast as light).—Standard.

LARGE TREE.—The Arlington Times says that the largest tree in Snohomish county, Col., probably is a cedar which stands a little way from the Kent's prairie and Stanwood road, about six miles from Arlington. A party of nine went down from that place lately to satisfy themselves of the truth of what by them were regarded as exaggerated reports of its size. The measurement taken shows it to be 68 feet, being nearly 23 feet in diameter. If measured around the roots and knotty protuberances, the tree would likely measure 99 feet. The measurement was as close to the body of the tree as line could be drawn. About 75 feet from the ground the tree forks into four immense branches. Just below the forks is a big knot-hole, and five of the party—Jack Howard, J. F. Shannon, A. Engberg, Ralph Morris, and Harry Patterson—climbed up and made an exploration of the inside of the tree, which is a mere shell, though still green. They went down some 15 feet in the tree and claim that there is standing room for at least 40 men there. A peculiar feature which they noticed was that the tree is barked on the inside the same as on the outside.—Scientific American.

HEAVY WOODS.—There are 413 species of trees found within the limits of the United States and Territories, sixteen of which, when perfectly seasoned, will sink in water. The heaviest of these is the black ironwood (Condalia ferrea), found only in Southern Florida, which is more than 50 per cent. heavier than water. Of the other fifteen, the best known are the lignum vitæ (Guaiacum sanctum) and the mangrove (Rhizophora mangle). Texas and New Mexico lands, full of queer, creeping, crawling, walking, and inanimate things, are the homes of a species of oak (Quercus grisea) which is about one and one-fourth times heavier than water, and which, when green, will sink almost as quickly as a bar of iron. It grows only in mountain regions, and has been found westward as far as the Colorado desert, where it grows at an elevation of 10,000 feet.—Scientific American.

In our world there are two very interesting sights—the one is that of the young disciple entering the church militant; the other, that of the old disciple about to join the church triumphant.

BOOKS.

OUT FROM UNDER CÆSAR'S FROWN; OR, THE BELLE OF THE DISMAL. By Rev. J. W. Daniel. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. Price, $1.

This story is introduced by Prof. A. Coke Smith, of Vanderbilt University. It is a story of war times, and is told in a forcible style, and lessons are taught which are very much needed at this very time.

THE RED CORN FROM CREATION TO CHRIST. By S. B. Rossiter, D. D. A. D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. F. D. VanValkenburgh, 106 Camp St., New Orleans. Price, 50 cents.

This is the old Bible story made plain to young readers. The child takes hold of the "red cord" at creation and follows it till it brings him to Christ. The last chapter, "How to Be Saved," is especially valuable.

THE LAST PAGES OF AN OFFICER'S DIARY. Fleming H. Revell, New York and Chicago. Price, 25 cents.

This is a booklet giving the thoughts and doings of a man of the world when informed by the doctor that he could not live longer than one month. It shows in a vivid way the processes which issued in his conversion.

THE YOUNG ASTRONOMER. By James H. Carlisle, President of Wofford College. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. Price, 60 cents.

This delightful little book is brought out by our Sunday-school Department, and is intended specially for young people. Dr. Carlisle styles it, "Helps to a knowledge of the leading constellations," and our young people will find themselves delighted with the information given in such a simple and pleasant style. Here they may learn much of the "heavens" that "declare the glory of God."

A LIVING SACRIFICE—ANNA CLARA CHRISMAN. By her Sister, Agnes G. Chrisman. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

This beautiful little book is tenderly introduced by Bishop Galloway. Then follows a loving sister's tribute of affection and devotion to "the child, the student, the teacher and the missionary." Then comes Bro. Mellen's comforting funeral sermon and the tributes of loving friends, and it all makes up a little volume whose sentiments perfume the memory of the lost missionary with a fragrance as grateful to the spiritual sensibilities as it is just to the departed.

JUDGE LONGSTREET: A Life Sketch. By Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. Price, $1.

This is a "sketch" of an interesting character by an entertaining writer. Anything from the pen of this biographer is calculated to arrest the attention of the reader. This book forms no exception to the long list of the Bishop's contributions to the entertainment and instruction of young and old alike. It is written in his happiest vein, and will have a large reading. There is appended to the volume some "Georgia Scenes"—a part of which have never before been published.

MAN, MONEY AND THE BIBLE. By Rev. John R. Allen, D. D. Barbee & Smith, Nashville. Price, 80 cents.

This volume is designed to show the applicability of biblical principles and teachings to political economy. The author combats most vehemently that selfish school of economists which waves religion out of the realm of practical business, and, as a wiser and better course, substitutes the doctrines of the Bible. By clear and cogent reasoning he shows that they are the most practical and sensible, and that their adoption will tend to the greatest good both of the individual and of the body politic.

SONGS OF JOY AND GLADNESS, No. 2. By McDonald, Gill & Co., Boston. Price, forty cents.

CHEERFUL SONGS. By L. L. Pickett, Columbia, S. C. Price, fifty cents.

We suppose that these song books are as good as any of their kind; but we have determined to recommend only the hymn book of our own church. That is good enough for us, and it ought to be good enough for all our people. There is too much disposition to put aside the substantial for the trashy, especially in the matter of songs. We think it time for our people to go back to the grand old hymns of Wesley and Watts and others. We have very little use for the twaddle that passes for hymns in many quarters these days.

MARRIAGES.

LYNN—THOMPKINS.—At the residence of Jacob Denton, Esq., near West, Texas, Aug. 26, 1891, by Rev. D. M. Cogdell, Mr. S. W. Lynn to Miss Sophia E. Thompkins.

HARMON—HARRIS.—In Tyro, Miss., Aug. 26, 1891, by Rev. T. W. Dye, Prof. K. Harmon, of the Abbeville Normal High School, and Miss Annie P. Harris, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Harris, of Tyro, Tate county, Miss.

OBITUARIES.

JACKSON—WILLIAM WARREN JACKSON, son of Edward W. and Maude Jackson, was born in Red River parish, Feb. 8, 1880, and died of swamp fever in Natchitoches, La., Aug. 16, 1891.

He was a precocious youth, of fine moral principles. At an early age learning to frown upon every dishonorable action, to love the exalted and pure in life, he soon gave flattering evidences of being a powerful factor for truth and heaven. But his energies were not made to war with the raging elements of destruction here, his faculties to rise in opposition to all that is ungodlike in time; so, at the call of his Father, he leaves the companionship of earthly ones, and, under the vitalizing effects of divine love, enters into the most blessed relationships of heaven. Loved ones, meet this boy "where the surges cease to roll."

ARTHUR D. MCVOY.

PRICE—ELIZABETH SEALS was born Dec. 25, 1861; married when fifteen years of age to Mr. A. M. Price, of Clarke county, Miss., and died near Shubuta, Miss., Sunday evening, Aug. 9, 1891, leaving behind a stricken husband and six bright children, with a number of sorrowing friends, to look onward and upward to a meeting that shall never know a parting. For our sister, even as a child, gave her hand to the church and her heart, as we believe, to God. Her quiet, unobtrusive life bespoke a heart at peace with all. Those who knew her best bear most hearty testimony to the truth and righteousness of her every-day life.

Recently she had been very diligent in coming with all her family to Sunday-school and church. The sudden violence of the fatal malady precluded "dying testimony." For this we look with greater assurance of hope to the daily life. Our farewell is not forever.

J. P. DRAKE.

GRIGG—Miss MARY J. GRIGG, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Grigg, was born in Wayne county, Miss., Dec. 22, 1855. About fourteen years ago she removed with her parents to Quitman, in Clarke county, where she resided until the heavenly Father called her to a better home, June 8, 1891.

These dates outline a life-picture beautiful to the beholder. When conviction of the need of an open confession of Christ seized her heart, she asked permission of her parents; as they were members of the Presbyterian Church, she was not certain they would approve of her choice in joining the M. E. Church, South. But these servants of God had no touch of bigotry in their religion and gave ready assent. Soon after joining the church she professed conversion, and ever continued to witness a good confession. Kind and charitable to all, she was much beloved. Her active industry at times was such as Solomon commends, marking virtues precious above rubies. Her devotion to filial duty was striking and lovely to behold. She was very thoughtful for the sick and distressed. Herein she received the fulfilment of a gracious promise, for during her long and painful illness she had the sympathetic aid of a whole community. She endured excruciating pain for many months with wonderful patience. She went from us singing, "Jesus is tenderly calling thee home."

Her afflicted pastor, J. P. D.

JACKSON—Mrs. E. W. JACKSON (nee Foster) was born Aug. 7, 1855, and died in Natchitoches, La., May 1, 1891.

Her young life was full of sunshine. Being of that radiant, generous disposition, she rapidly drew around her a concourse of friends, many of whom, receiving inspiration from her gentle, faithful life, are now drinking in the glories of Paradise with their immortalized associate. Feeling at an early stage in life her individual responsibility to God, and her eternal incompleteness without Christ, she sought the fellowship of God's people, by connecting herself with the Methodist Church, in 1866. She was married to Mr. E. W. Jackson, Aug. 7, 1873. Fashioning her life after the world's great Model, she proved to be a genuine helpmeet to her husband, a conscientious Christian guide to her children, an obedient member of Christ's militant kingdom; at last approximating the deathless honors of Christian womanhood. Her fatal sickness, beginning last December, preyed gradually and painfully upon her physical being, until in May "the silver cord was loosed."

For weeks before her death she was a great sufferer, evincing through it all a perfect Christian resignation, a beautiful, divine fortitude, daily "enduring as seeing him who is invisible." The "ministry of suffering" had a complete illustration in the protracted illness of Sister Jackson, and dying, as she said, "resting in Christ," she felt, "There is no death to those who know of Life"—the endless life of love and power, wherein we are indissolubly one with God.

May her loved ones enjoy an everlasting reunion beyond the stars!

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of those woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

There's a good deal of guarantee business in the store keeping of today. It's too excessive. Or too reluctant. Half the time it means nothing. Words—only words.

This offer to refund the money, or to pay a reward, is made under the hope that you won't want your money back, and that you won't claim the reward. Of course.

So, whoever is honest in making it, and works—not on his own reputation alone, but through the local dealer, whom you know, must have something he has faith in back of the guarantee. The business wouldn't stand a year without it.

What is lacking is confidence. Back of that, what is lacking is that clear honesty which is above the "average practice."

Dr. Pierce's medicines are guaranteed to accomplish what they are intended to do, and their makers give the money back if the result isn't apparent.

Doesn't it strike you that a medicine, which the makers have so much confidence in, is the medicine for you?

Am I willing to deny myself and, in a sense, take up my cross and aim to follow Christ?

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dollinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amonnt.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

The resignation of Mr. Proctor, Secretary of War, may not be the only vacancy created in the Cabinet, as there is a possibility that Mr. Tracy, Secretary of the Navy, will become the Republican nominee for governor of New York.

A heavy rainstorm and high seas have caused much damage along the New Jersey coast. The bluff at Long Branch has been eaten away in many places and bulkheads badly shattered. At Seabright the Highland Beach tracks are inundated.

It was thought that when Fred Douglass resigned his place as minister to Hayti that the President would appoint a white man to the mission, but he seems to have yielded to the pressure brought to bear upon him by the colored politicians and has designated another negro for the position

The action of many insurance companies withdrawing from Dallas, Texas, on account of the recent disastrous fires, and the Board of Underwriters making a general advance of 50 per cent. all along the line, has aroused a spirit of resentment and a counter-move to establish a co-operative company with city capital.

Parnell Branch of Nashville, of the Irish National League, at a meeting elected delegates to the National League convention, and resolved as the sense of the members that Parnell and McCarthy should both retire and a new leader of the Irish party be called to the helm. Parnell Branch has hitherto been almost unanimous for Parnell.

Vessels were chartered in Chicago, on Sept. 4, to carry 1,750,000 bushels of grain to Buffalo. Not only were all the boats in port taken by the grain shippers, but nearly all the fleet to arrive there the following week were also chartered in the rush. Every vessel on the great lakes not tied down by contracts was called for, and still the shippers wanted more.

At a meeting of the Lady Board of Managers of the World's Fair, Mrs. Lucius, of Pennsylvania, again urged the adoption of her resolution, declaring in favor of closing the Fair on Sunday. Arguments in favor of Sunday closing were made by Bishop Fowler and Miss Frances E. Willard. The result of the vote on the resolution was—yeas, 56; nays, 36.

Postmaster-General Wanamaker denies the report that the free delivery of the mail in small towns is not a success. He caused an examination of the latest reports from these experiments to be made, and found that they were succeeding beyond his most sanguine expectations, and in a way to confound the critics of the experiment. It is already an established fact, it is stated, that the increased revenue in those offices where the free delivery experiment is on trial almost pays for the increased expenditure.

An Italian paper states that a Catholic power, presumably Austria, having sounded the college of cardinals on the election of a non-Italian Pope, ascertained that a large majority of the cardinals are determined to elect an Italian Pope.

The Austrian so-called "smokeless powder," which was used at the Schwarzenau maneuvers, produces clouds of light blue smoke. The German powder, which produces a brown puff, hardly distinguishable from the ground, is much superior.

Our Public Schools

Are the main-stay of our republic. In them are being cultivated the minds which are to be our future law-makers and leaders in every walk in life. How essential it is that these minds should be united to strong, healthy bodies. So many children suffer from impurities and poisons in the blood that it is a wonder that they ever grow up to be men and women. Many parents own not find words strong enough to express their gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for its good effect upon their children. Scrofula, salt rheum and other diseases of the blood are effectually and permanently cured by this excellent medicine, the system being given strength to resist attacks of disease.

Science in Bread Making.

At the recent annual meeting of the American Chemical Society, held in Washington, D. C., the question of the value of carbonate of ammonia as a leavening agent in bread, or as used in baking powders, came up for discussion, in which Prof. Barker, of the University of Pennsylvania, and President of the Society; Dr. Richardson, late of the United States Department of Agriculture in Washington; Dr. Wm. McMurtrie, late Prof. of Chemistry in the University of Illinois; Dr. E. H. Bartley, late Chemist of the Brooklyn, N. Y., Board of Health, and Prof. of Chemistry of the Long Island College, and others took part.

The consensus of opinion was overwhelming in favor of the employment of ammonia. It was stated as a fact that ammonia rendered the gluten of the flour more soluble than the original gluten, and that the bread in which this action was produced by carbonate of ammonia must be more digestible and hence more healthful, and because of the extreme volatility of carbonate of ammonia, and its complete expulsion from the bread in the process of baking, it is one of the most useful, most healthful and most valuable leavening agents known.

These conclusions are borne out by the very elaborate and exhaustive experiments made by Prof. J. W. Mallet, of the University of Virginia, which show conclusively that bread made with a baking powder in which one per cent. of carbonate of ammonia is used, in connection with cream of tartar and soda, is not only of uniformly better color and texture, but a product more wholesome, because the ammonia serves to neutralize any organic or lactic acids present in the flour.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

The eighth annual exhibit of the St. Louis Exposition was formally opened last week, and a good crowd was in attendance on the opening day.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1062 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. C. Callaway, Sept. 12: "I have just closed a meeting at Shiloh, resulting in nineteen accessions and twenty-five or more conversions. The church wonderfully revived; a regular prayer meeting established."

Rev. N. M. Clark, Lauderdale, Miss., Sept. 15: "Sunday, Sept. 13, was a good day at our new Soule's Chapel. Received four new members, baptized three adults and ten children. The Lord was present in great power. Two subscriptions to the ADVOCATE were last, but not least."

Rev. L. D. Worsham, Newport, Miss.: "I have just closed my meetings on the Newport circuit. We have had 40 conversions and 30 accessions. Have baptized 16 infants and 14 adults. Was assisted in my meetings by Bro. J. W. Treadwell, of Indian Mission Conference, and Bro. R. M. Evans, of Sallis circuit. Bro. Commander, a local preacher, also rendered efficient help. To God be all the glory."

Rev. M. E. Tumlin, P. C., Netticton circuit, Sept. 15: "We have just closed a good meeting at Evergreen, on this charge. There were fifteen conversions and twelve accessions, and a glorious revival in the church. The new church at Nettleton nears completion, and will be an ornament to the town as well as a necessity to Methodism. Pray for us. We are now at Palestine, assisted by Rev. W. A. Bowlin."

Rev. W. J. Dawson, Oktibbeha, Miss., Sept. 14: "Please make a correction in my letter of last week. You make me say, 'I was assisted by Bro. Bowen, of East End, Meridian.' I intended to say Bro. Brown. I received nineteen in the church at Linwood yesterday, making thirty-five accessions to the Methodist and three to the Baptist Church as the result of our revival. Have received forty-seven to date."

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Pineville, La., Sept. 16: "I wish to report a glorious meeting at Oak Grove. About twenty conversions, eight sanctifications, and seven received into the church, with others to follow. Old feuds were settled, and the church in better condition than ever before. Bro. Manly preached eleven true gospel sermons at this meeting. We have begun a meeting in Pineville, and God is owning our humble efforts."

Rev. B. H. Rawls, Montrose, Miss., Sept. 12: "We closed a meeting the eighth of this month at Mount Zion that was a blessing to that community. We received sixteen members into the church, and the church was built up. The meeting commenced with the Quarterly Conference. Bro. Johnston, our presiding elder, preached Saturday and Sunday. We thank God for his presence and convicting power, which was realized. We were assisted by Bro. C. C. Evans, who preached to the satisfaction of all."

Rev. G. H. Jacobs, Olive Branch circuit, North Mississippi: "I report the result of two more meetings. One at Kelly's, assisted by Bros. Boswell (P. E.), Anderson, Harris and Bowling, whose preaching was highly appreciated by pastor and people. Results: eleven accessions, fifteen conversions, and the church much revived. At Center Hill we were assisted by Bros. Batt and Young, whose preaching will not soon be forgotten. Results: fourteen accessions, and the church much edified. So we can truly say the Lord is good to us."

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Pleasant Hill, La., Sept. 12: "Our camp meeting at Beulah was a grand success. Ten accessions, a number of conversions. At Gum Grove two conversions, no additions. At Hayti, a new appointment, I began a meeting last Saturday, Bro. Cassity helping two days, doing mighty deeds for the Lord. Closed last night. Result: twenty-two accessions, and about fifteen conversions, an organization of thirty members. Thanks be unto God! Begin to-night at Marthaville."

Rev. W. H. Sanders, Belzona, North Mississippi Conference: "The season for protracted meetings is over on this charge. Since writing my last card, have held three meetings, and had seven accessions at one place, four at another, and eleven at the last place. This makes an increase for this year of twenty-eight in all. We are still gaining ground, and hope to gain still more. The finances of the work are somewhat behind, but I think they will finally come out all right. I have just spent two weeks assisting Bro. Phillips on the Black Hawk work. Those Black Hawk people are good people."

Rev. Robert Randle, Homer, La., Sept. 10: "The Lord of hosts is blessing us also. O, may it be continued and increased; we need it much. I have held two meetings. One at Arizona, resulting in thirty-four conversions and twenty-four accessions to the church, with a most gracious revival through the whole church. All who attended were blessed. The other at Lisbon. The church greatly revived, fifteen accessions, and about the same number of conversions. God was with us in demonstration of the Spirit's power. I commence my meeting here (Homer) to-morrow. The Quarterly Conference is Saturday and Sabbath. I am praying for and expecting much."

Rev. W. J. O'Bryant, Cockrum, Miss., Sept. 12: "I have just closed my round of revival meetings on the Cockrum circuit. This is my third year with this good people, and the Lord has crowned our labors with abundant success. We have had about seventy conversions, forty-five accessions up to date, others likely will join; have baptized fifteen infants. A gracious revival at all the appointments. We were assisted at Independence by Rev. W. T. Barnett, of Wall Hill, who did fine work, preached with power and demonstration of the Spirit. We were assisted at Cockrum by W. L. Davis, a local preacher, who did good preaching; also by T. B. Clifford, of Pleasant Grove, who won the affections of the people and did fine work."

Rev. N. J. Roberts, Utica circuit, Mississippi Conference, Sept. 14: "We closed a two weeks' meeting with the Utica Church last night, with glorious results. About fifty conversions, and the church was most wonderfully revived. Thirty-six additions to the church. I never saw greater manifestations of divine power in my life. Men who had never been moved before came to the altar for prayers, and many of them were converted. Bro. L. S. Jones was with us a few days, and preached some masterly sermons. Bro. Joe Nicholson was with us twelve days of the meeting, preaching twice nearly every day until the last service; God honoring every service with his presence. Never were the people of this town so stirred, religiously, as Bro. Nicholson has stirred them within the last eight days with the gospel of Christ."

D. K. Hunt, steward, Vidalia, La., Sept. 14: "Our third Quarterly Conference for the Vidalia and Jonesville circuit was held here on Saturday last. Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir, presiding elder of the Alexandria district, failing to attend, Rev. J. J. Kelley, assisted by Rev. J. H. Callaway, pastors in charge, conducted the proceedings. Reports submitted show that the work of the circuit is progressing reasonably well. The absence of the presiding elder was a disappointment to all. Rev. J. H. Callaway preached four sermons during the meeting, which were well received. Bro. Joe Waltman, of Natchez, Miss., preached an appreciative sermon Sunday afternoon. The number of participants at the Lord's table on Sunday is an evidence that the church was stirred by the workings of the Holy Spirit. The meeting was an interesting one from beginning to end, and it is to be hoped that much good will result therefrom."

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, Simsport, La., Sept. 10: "Our Fall meeting at this place began on Sunday, Aug. 30. We were looking for Rev. Wm. Wimberly to do the preaching; but, without a word of warning, he left us in the cold, as he has done at this place on two or three previous occasions. In answer to a telegram, the Rev. H. D. Knickerbooker, of New Orleans, came and did us royal service. We might sum all up by saying, 'The right man in the right place at the right time,' for so it was. He gained the ear of the people by his eloquent earnestness the first night; and those who know him, know he is the man to hold on to such when he gets hold once. The people were not only charmed with him as a man and a preacher, but helped to hold up his hands. The result was, we had a glorious time and a great awakening. Rev. J. E. Denson was with us, and preached a characteristic sermon, and did yeoman's work at the altar and organ. The good people prepared two basket dinners, which were of high order. We thank our Baptist friends for kindly calling in their appointment, and allowing their people to come to our services. God be praised for his goodness."

Rev. L. W. Wood, China Grove circuit, Miss., Sept. 11: "Last Wednesday night I closed a four days' meeting at Tylertown. I preached the opening sermon Sunday morning, and before I had finished I rejoiced to see Bro. Dan Scarbrough, one of our young local preachers, coming to my aid. He remained with me during the meeting, and won the hearts of our people by his Christ-like deportment and earnest preaching. Monday night I preached, and never have I so sensibly felt the presence of God, nor witnessed such serious, undivided attention during the forty minutes' sermon. Wednesday morning we held a special service for the children. They did the singing while the older ones bore them up in prayer. O, how my heart rejoiced to see so many of the little ones come to the altar desiring to be more like Jesus! Bro. Scarbrough preached that night, and at the close, upon invitation, every unconverted person in the house sought God in prayer. The visible results were a revival of the whole church, ten accessions—all of whom were thoroughly converted—and four children baptized. It was good to be there, and, praise God, I feel I have had a renewed baptism of the Holy Spirit."

Rev. John B. Kent, Rayne, La., Sept. 16: "Last September, under an old mill shed, half a mile from the town of Church Point, we held a very successful meeting and organized a church. The church has continually grown, and some months ago a valuable lot was purchased within the incorporated limits of the town, on which we expect, at an early day, to erect a church-building. In the meantime a commodious shed was built, under which we began, on the sixth instant, another meeting, which resulted in much good. There were about six hundred persons present a portion of the time. The revival fire broke out right at the beginning, and last night we closed with twenty-four accessions and about forty conversions. We are under many obligations to Bros. Pilley and John A. Miller, P. E., for valuable services rendered, and also to the people of Church Point for their generous hospitality in support of the meeting. The music was very fine, which attracted numbers of Creoles, several of whom were converted. At the close of the meeting a resolution was offered by Mr. W. K. Hornsby, a Roman Catholic, thanking the ministers for the great good accomplished. This paper was unanimously adopted by the congregation. Brethren, the Spirit of God is waking the people up in these ends of the earth. All praise to his name!"

Rev. John A. Miller, P. E., Opelousas district, Louisiana Conference, Sept. 18: "Since my last note I have closed my third round, Indian Bayou being my last appointment. Bro. Pilley had a good meeting under way when I arrived. It increased in interest to the close. About thirty-five or forty accessions were the net result of the meeting. It was a grand success. Bro. Pilley is doing a good work at that point. I have just returned from Church Point, on Bro. Blocker's work. The revival was in full blast when I reached that place. Bro. Blocker was sick; had been confined at home for a day or two with fever. Other brethren were conducting the services. Doctor, you missed a treat in not getting there to hear the singing. It was grand old Methodist singing, with soul and power. The Creoles were attracted to it from far and near, notwithstanding the threat of the priest to excommunicate them if they attended the Methodist meeting. A brother said he heard the singing at the Sam Jones meeting in your city, and it did not excel the singing we had here. Bro. Blocker is educating all his people to sing. Forty souls were happily converted to God, and twenty-four joined the church. A meeting of the citizens (outsiders), headed by a prominent man, who was a Catholic, was called, and passed very commendatory resolutions on the moral effect of the meeting in the community, and sent them to Bro. Blocker, asking him to read them to his congregation. Thank God for the power and success of the gospel."

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Lest I should be thought of as the brother reported in one of Bishop Marvin's Conferences, who had "described a circle and was engaged in revolving in it," I have thought it best to be heard from. The trouble in my case is, that the tangential lines of this district require sharper rural acumen than I possess to keep to the circle. I never was much of a forester; but for the kindness of the brethren in furnishing faithful guides, I think I should find myself often in the perplexity of the Dutchman who said, "I vinds plenty of roads; but mit all mine eyes I can't see one vot looks like going anywhere." But this vast region of level pine lands, with its rich waving grasses, abounding in crystal streams, with banks elaborately tessellated with green, and small rivers lined with tall cypress, bordered, next to the pine forests, with sylvan groves of mixed growth of oak, hickory, beech, etc., is enough to inspire all the sentiment that is in a man. It moves even me to poetic thoughts; but I venture no farther. The metre, rhythm, etc., are wanting.

Bro. Huntley, in his beautiful letter in the early Spring, referred to my toothache as the only affliction I had then suffered. The same, with slight exception, may still be said in closing up this, my third quarter. But, Mr. Editor, did you ever have a genuine case of toothache? If so, didn't it take all of the poetry out of you? I may almost say I have had it by the month, and have not been free from it long at a time for years. I have suffered much from the hands of many dentists; yet there is no class of men to whom I am more indebted. They have been just as kind and considerate toward me, both as to kind words and sparing my purse, as it is possible for men to be compatible with faithful dental surgery. But the tender mercies of the kindest-hearted in the world seem like barbarous cruelty to the man at the other end of the forceps. But the matter is settled now. Dr. Watts, than whom I have not found a greater expert at the business, has relieved me of the last fifteen, and I am rapidly recovering from the effects thereof; and he assures me that, under the recent rapid process of dentition, I will soon have a full mouth as good as ever.

We are happy to be able to report that Whitworth College has opened with good attendance and flattering prospects. New students are arriving daily. President Fitzhugh and Dr. Murrah, with their superior faculty, will continue to sustain the high standard of this deservedly popular institution.

Our four camp meetings have passed with gratifying results. Successful protracted meetings have been held in pretty well all of the pastoral charges. Hazlehurst, Wesson, and Henington Camp Ground enjoyed the ministry of Rev. George Ingo. Bishop Galloway was with us at China Grove Camp Meeting; Bro. Clay, of New Orleans, at Topisaw. We had a good supply of effective preachers at all. Finances are depressingly low, and some feel much discouraged; yet, I suppose, our district will compare favorably with others.

The moral standard will compare favorably with any portion of our Southern country. There is not a saloon in the bounds of the district, and comparatively few "blind tigers!" This proves that where the white population predominates, prohibition finds but feeble opposition. But prohibition in this county has a strong and bold leadership, with a numerous and intelligent following.

Brookhaven Methodism is looking forward to the Annual Conference, in December, with increased interest, whilst our Presbyterian brethren are busily preparing for their Synod, which meets here early in November. We will help each other, and we expect our citizens generally to extend cheerful hospitality to both. The membership at Wesson is becoming so large that a swarm seems inevitable. Hazlehurst and Crystal Springs are also growing strong. McComb City wants to be made a station, while Magnolia is aspiring in the same direction.

Bros. F. M. Williams, D. G. W. Ellis and H. R. Caldwell—the three senior pastors of the district—have passed a most vigorous campaign in the Master's work; equal in success to their palmier days. Bros. Boone, Miller, Sibley, Galloway, Wood and Hicks M. Ellis, with the holy zeal of consecrated young manhood, have pressed the battle into the very camps of the enemy with glorious success! Drs. West, Cooper and Norsworthy, with strong, commanding influence and ability, have held high the standard of the cross, and rendered most effective service, while Bro. Huntley, the affable gentleman and scholar, dispenses the Word of Life at the center of the district and of learning. Bros. Havers, Hoover, Mullins and King and supplies have done faithful work. Bro. A. D. Miller is still pressing the Indian's claim on us for the gospel. His perseverance deserves and, we believe, will finally be crowned with success. Brethren, help him in his good cause.

R. S. WOODWARD.

DELHI DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The twenty-fifth session of this body convened at West Monroe, La., Aug. 27, 1891. Rev. Henry O. White, the presiding elder, carried forward the "King's business" with dispatch. Three preachers were absent—Revs. N. S. Cornell, T. B. Reneau, and J. F. Patterson. The first day was devoted to the Sunday-school work on the district, according to previous announcement. There seems to be a general awakening on this line, indicated by the preachers' reports. The Sunday-school, as "preparing the way of the Lord" and "making his paths straight" for young and old, was made prominent. The brethren have found it hard, in many cases, to get anybody to be Sunday-school superintendents. As a general rule, the children were reported as attending the regular church services. One pastor mentioned that he found it a great help to his preaching to engage first in teaching a Sunday-school class. Several preachers ascribed many of the souls harvested into the church to efficient Sunday-school work. Our own literature is used.

The spiritual condition over the district is very encouraging. Many glorious revivals, a healthy growth of the missionary spirit, and enlarged gifts into the Lord's treasury. Ministerial support moderately good, but no financial system on most of the charges. One brother gave a hopeful report on finances, but a gloomy one on spirituality, which elicited some remarks. Some 300 accessions, more or less, reported, with a good prospect of more to follow. The ADVOCATE is well represented on some of the circuits; but its circulation needs largely to be increased over the district, as a whole. There has been a very good demand for our standard hymn books. One preacher, Bro. Mandeville, had sold about $400 worth of books, and expected to get rid of $800 worth before Conference. And his allowance for the year is $700. Were each preacher on the Delhi district to do that much on the book line, with the presiding elder's help, the sales would foot up to $10,400!

Church building and repairing has been moving forward. There is good prospect of soon having new churches at Rayville, Tallulah, Newelton, on the Waterproof work, and two will probably go up on the Harrisonburgh circuit. (I give some of these items from memory; hence, excuse any mistakes.)

A committee was appointed to look into building a new district parsonage at Monroe, and disposing of the old one at Delhi, viz.: R. B. Blanks, Sam Whited, Dr. A. S. Holmick, Jno. B. Reily and E. W. Thompson. One hundred and twenty-seven dollars and fifty cents was promised towards building this new district parsonage by the brethren present at the Conference.

Rev. A. D. McVoy appeared during the session, and made a most encouraging report of Mansfield College. President McVoy is certainly felicitous in representing his (our?) girls' school. He was luminous and edifying, also, in his sermon before the Conference on "I am the light of the world." After his sermon we had a precious altar service.

During the Conference we had a regular "protracted meeting," with exhortations and altar work. There was little or no attendance on the business sessions of the Conference beyond preachers and delegates. The preaching was well attended. President Hunnicutt, of Centenary, was not on hand; neither was our honored editor of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Bro. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, a promising young preacher, represented our colporteur with business-like affability. Bro. Isbell offered the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse and recommend the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and will continue to enlarge its circulation within the limits of the district, and wherever we can find subscribers.

Resolved, That we regard the Nashville Advocate the equal of any other Christian periodical in the land, and that it ought to be in every Methodist household in the Southern Church, and that, as far as we can, we will obtain subscribers within this district.

Resolved, That as we have in Louisiana two excellent church institutions of learning—Centenary College, for the education of our boys, and Mansfield Female College, for the education of our daughters—it is our duty to commend these institutions to all who have sons and daughters to educate, and to increase the patronage of these schools to the extent of our ability.

Revs. B. F. White and J. M. Brown offered the following resolutions condemnatory of the Louisiana State Lottery:

Whereas, There is now agitating and soon to come before the voters of our great commonwealth a grave moral as well as political question; And, whereas, Our State Constitution declares "gambling to be a vice," and that "the General Assembly shall enact laws for its suppression;" And, whereas, The Bible condemns all vice of every kind; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we most solemnly condemn the rechartering of the Louisiana State Lottery as a vice of the most heinous character, in that its influence ramifies all classes of society, beginning with childhood and not ceasing till within a step of the grave; leading to theft, idleness through the hope of dishonest gain, and to all the multitudes of ruinous practices and passions, sapping the very foundations of civil and religious liberty.

Resolved, That we sincerely, prayerfully and thoughtfully say to all Christians, and especially the members of our own church, that you can not in any way encourage the rechartering of the Louisiana State Lottery without violating your solemn obligation to your church, and all the sacred teachings of God's Word, and branding yourselves as either dupes from ignorance, or willful violators of all the known laws of righteousness.

Resolved, That in the rechartering of the Louisiana State Lottery through fraud, and the bribing of the ignorant and deeply depraved of our citizens, we see far greater and more just cause of "revolution," which we deplore, than our forefathers had in "taxation without representation," which led to the great Revolution of 1776, of the blessed fruits of which this monster iniquity is threatening to rob us.

Resolved, That we prayerfully, prudently and earnestly use our influence in leading the people to see the magnitude of the indescribable evils to be entailed on our great State in the prolongation of the existence of this institution in our midst.

Resolved, That we approve the efforts of our last National Congress in trying to curtail its hellish influence in our great government, and pray that the next Congress continue the good work until it be impossible for such institutions to exist in our nation.

These resolutions were also adopted, and a vote of thanks were passed confessing our many obligations to the people of West Monroe and vicinity for their hospitality, and to the railroads for reduced fare.

The following are the delegates elected for the Annual Conference: Dr. A. S. Holmick, Samuel Whited, A. L. Hopkins, James Beard. Alternates: J. J. Harper, J. Moore.

Rayville was selected for the place to hold the next session.

A SONG OF REST.

BY FLORENCE TYLEE.

O weary hands that all the day
Were set to labor hard and long,
Now softly fall the shadows gray,
The bells are rung for even-song.
An hour ago the golden sun
Sank slowly down into the west,
Poor weary hands, your toil is done,
'Tis time for rest'—'tis time for rest!

O weary feet that many a mile
Have trudged along a stony way,
At last ye reach the trysting stile
No longer fear to go astray.
The gently bending, rustling trees
Rock the young birds within the nest,
And softly sings the quiet breeze
"'Tis time for rest'—'tis time for rest'"

O weary eyes! from which the tears
Fell many a time like thunder-rain—
O weary heart! that through the years
Beat with such bitter, restless pain,
To-night forget the stormy strife,
And know what heaven shall send is best:
Lay down the tangled web of life:
'Tis time for rest'—'tis time for rest!

Little Children Again.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON FOR JULY 26—THE EDITOR—DR. WHEDON—DR. ABBEY—INFELICITIES—BLUNDERS.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

V.

In concluding these papers, I turn away from a very strong desire to review some recent writers on this question, in order that we may inquire, not what "the fathers" taught, nor yet what modern theologians have believed, but "what saith the law" touching the effect of the atonement.

To this end I will submit in this paper three propositions, the traversion of which I can merely outline, and must ask the reader to carry on the investigation which I hope to suggest.

1. Salvation is freedom from all cause of condemnation, no matter how or when such freedom is bestowed.

Having a penitent, believing adult human being in mind, this proposition is easily grasped. The only trouble comes when we speak of an infant being saved hundreds of years before it was born. Yet there seems to be no trouble, not in the mind of Dr. Ralston even, in grasping the fact that children were condemned thousands of years before they were born!

"If Christ died for all"—those who are not yet born, and may not be born for a thousand years—"then were all dead." That the unborn race died in Adam all—Arminians at least—admit; but to say that the unborn race was "made alive in Christ" seems, at least, to some writers, to be "absurd." The trouble is that we look at the question of dying in Adam, generically, while we look at the question of being saved in Christ, abstractly.

Taking an abstract view of it, what could be more absurd than that one died a thousand years before one was born? Still this is a truth everywhere taught in the Bible, and almost everywhere accepted by theologians. Now, view the question of being saved from the same point you view the question of being condemned, and tell me why it is any more difficult to understand the one than the other.

"As in Adam all died (even so),
In Christ shall all be made alive."

The dying and the making alive depends not on the individual, but on the representative. "The first Adam was of the earth, earthy; the second Adam was the Lord from heaven."

That freedom from all cause of condemnation came, unconditionally, upon the unborn race, the most ultra writers admit; but they seem not to realize that the bestowment of this freedom is salvation. Conditional salvation is from conditional condemnation, and is for the individual, while unconditional salvation is from unconditional condemnation, and is for the race. The fact, therefore, of one's being born, or not born, at any particular time, has nothing to do with the fact of salvation from the unconditional condemnation of Adam's sin. "For as by one man's offense many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous."

"He comes to make his blessings flow
Far as the curse is found."

Whatever benefit comes to one by repentance and faith, after having fallen under voluntary condemnation, he has no more a perfect salvation from his personal sins than each member of the race has through the atonement from the condemnation of Adam's sin. "In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified." (Isa. xlv, 25.) "The free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." (Rom. v, 18.)

Here is justification for "all the seed of Israel"—for "all men." Whether saved or lost in the end, they have been justified.

Dr. Ralston asserts that none of our writers believe that infants are responsible in such sense as to be lost should they die in infancy. Still, he would scoff the idea that they were justified "centuries before they were born."

All justification is through the merit of Christ. This has been true from the time Cain was born. Salvation is a river that flows "part toward the former sea, and part toward the hinder sea," and its healing waters have been shared as well by those unborn when Jesus came as by those who had been born and were dead when he came.

2. Salvation from unconditional condemnation must be unconditional to be effective and just; while salvation from voluntary condemnation must be voluntary.

Herein is harmony, for while, of the effect of Adam's sin, "the Lamb of God . . . taketh away the sins of the world"—Jesus made "all alive"—it is equally true that "he that believeth not shall be damned;" "the wicked shall be turned into hell with all the nations that forget God."

Infants were not consulted in the fall, nor is there a single passage of Scripture which requires their assent to the atonement. Yet it is perfectly clear that their salvation depends on a transformation from the fallen, corrupt state, upon which their condemnation rests, to a justified state in which they were restored to the favor of God. (See Rom. v, 13-17; John xii, 32.)

(This space is getting short, and the next proposition must be taken up.)

3. In order to be just, the conditions of salvation must be such that anyone under condemnation can comply with the terms and be saved.

If this be not true, anything which disqualifies for heaven, if found in one who can not repent and believe, would place that one out of reach of salvation. On the other hand, if it be true, then the conditions of salvation as effectually reach the infant as the adult, and it is thereby as thoroughly fitted for heaven as an adult could be, even by repentance and faith.

We know that unholiness disqualifies one for heaven, and if infants are "unholy and depraved creatures," whose depravity has not been corrected by the atonement, and whose unholiness has not been removed by the merit of Christ, then there are no conditions of salvation in reach of them discoverable to us in the Scriptures.

Psalms lviii, 3, is sometimes referred to as teaching that infants are born "unholy, depraved creatures." The passage does not necessarily teach such doctrine; but, on the contrary, teaches that this is a state into which children degenerate early in life. Surely the Psalmist does not intend to say that infants "speak" as soon as they are born, much less that they speak "lies." He says they, "Go astray as soon as they are born, speaking lies."

Psalm i, 5. This is the universal proof-text. The writer refers to his own wayward life, verse 4. There is no more sin referred to the child than may be referred to the mother. It shows that in the moral make-up of his nature there was the inclination to sin. The parallel in Job xiv, 4, also refers to the weakness of man's moral nature.

The fact that a child naturally runs off into sin—goes astray as soon as it is born—does not prove it to be unholy at birth any more than the fact that fruit will rot, proves it was rotten in the bloom. The tendency to decay is in the fruit and can be counteracted only by means extraneous to the fruit. But though it will not, if not preserved, it is, at its first appearance, as perfect as any fruit. Thus the preserving grace of God can alone keep our infancy's purity through the trials of life.

What, then, is the true condition of infants?

From the point of observation previously suggested in these papers, the answer is easy and uncomplicated with the errors of Augustin, Pelagius, Calvin or Rome.

They fell in Adam, and were condemned unto eternal death. They were "made alive" in Christ—redeemed by his "precious blood." This redemption justified them in the sight of God from all the moral consequences of the act by which they were condemned.

Being "justified freely" through the grace of God in Christ Jesus, they are not only in a "salvable state," but are saved, not by water, but through the merit of our Lord Jesus Christ. This justified state can be retained only by sustaining grace; because one is unable, whether in infancy or adultage, to live righteously by one's own strength.

By failing of this sustaining grace they will fall under personal condemnation, from which they can be recovered only by repentance and faith.

Hard Knots—Rom. viii, 29-32.

"BY GILDEROY."

Whom did God foreknow?

Ans. God foreknew all things and all men.

Whom did God predestinate?

Ans. Those whom he foreknew, or all men.

What did God predestinate concerning all men?

Ans. That all men be conformed to the image of Christ.

Will all men bear the image of Christ?

Ans. They will: "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Will the decree of God fail, or will Christ die in vain in any case?

Ans. No, for all that he has decreed will surely come to pass; and Christ will save all men from the guilt of original sin and from the grave—from the sleep of death.

Why did God foreordain that all men be conformed to the image of Christ?

Ans. That Christ might be the first-born among many brethren.

What is the meaning of "many brethren?"

Ans. It means all men, for he is the elder brother of every man.

Whom does God call?

Ans. All men—all who were foreknown and foreordained to be fashioned in the image of Christ. "Come unto me all ye ends of the earth and be ye saved." All are called.

Whom does God justify?

Ans. Those whom he calls, or all men. "As by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of One the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life."

Whom does God glorify?

Ans. Those whom he justifies, or all men.

What does glorify mean in this connection?

Ans. It means to elevate, to lift up, to confer a great favor and privilege.

Has God thus elevated, or lifted up, all men?

Ans. He has. All have been lifted up and put upon a platform of second probation. "The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." "God is no respecter of persons."

"What shall we say to these things?"

Ans. God is the father and friend of every man. "Who can be against us?"—against any man? or say that any man has been left without mercy and without hope?

How has God shown himself the friend of every man? And what has he done towards the salvation of all men?

Ans. "He spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all."

Why did God give his Son to die for the world?

Ans. Because he loved the world and wanted to save it.

When did God give his Son to die for the world?—for all men?

Ans. In the beginning, before the foundations of the earth were laid.

Why did God do this so early?—in the beginning?

Ans. Because he foresaw that it would be necessary, and "according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus before the world began."

What pledge or guarantee have we that God will give us all needed good in this life?

Ans. This, that as God spared not his own Son, he will "with him also freely give us all things." If we accept the Son, we become fellow-heirs with him of the inheritance.

Is the above a correct interpretation of Romans viii, 29-32?

Ans. It seems to be. It satisfies my mind better than any other.

If this is not correct, let a better be given.

The Millsaps College Location.

It fell to my lot to be in Jackson, Miss., on Sept. 9, as a member of the Prohibition Convention in session on that day. This gave me a much desired opportunity to see the grounds selected as the site for Millsaps College. Bishop Galloway and Bro. Watkins were there to point out boundaries and explain positions; Bro. S. D. Long and I looked and listened. Beautiful, indeed, is that situation. These grounds lie three-quarters of a mile along the crest of a ridge sufficiently high to overlook the valley to the west, through which the Illinois Central road passes, and the gently sloping hills beyond. This is one of the most charming landscape views I have seen in the State; it stretches almost a full semi-circle from the point where the college building will sit. From the ridge to the railroad the ground slopes gently, and at the northern end the college ground extends to the road. The family residence now there is near the south end of the plat, in a beautiful grove on a swell in the ridge, and a little more than a mile north of Depot street. The new building, soon to be erected, will occupy another swell three or four hundred yards to the north of this. About the same distance further to the north is a hill which is equally commanding and eminently suitable for building. This hill slopes off to the northern boundary, which is a public road. Beyond this road, and stretching far to the east, are the extensive grounds belonging to the State and connected with the Insane Asylum, thus excluding from that region all undesirable residents. The college building, as existing buildings do, will front west, and will be in full view of West Jackson and of passing trains, and will be near the street leading from the city direct to the college. The great cylindrical tower, which supplies the city with water, stands probably four hundred yards, or less, east of the college. A drive from the Capitol north to the road which bounds our college grounds on the north, thence west to the street which passes in front of the college, and south along this street to Depot street, will take in view every important public structure connected with Jackson. The natural drainage is all that is needed to protect that whole region from local malaria; nor is there any building or business near by that can be offensive to health. The premises of the school for colored people bounds ours on the east, and may be thought to be a serious objection. But the buildings of the two institutions front opposite directions, and streets amply separated, and the occupants of the two need scarcely know of each other's presence.

The plans of the new building reveal a design which will give a structure at once imposing and well adapted to the uses of instruction. A little delay will not harm the great work of this great enterprise. Only we need the work—now greatly need it.

This college, with a complement of correlated training-schools, will give to Christian education, under the care of Methodism in Mississippi, a service whose value can not be measured by arithmetic estimates. Let all hands help to the glorious end. Why should we not all unite to make this institution an offering devoted to the service of our Lord Jesus Christ?

Letter from China.

All quiet in this city. Serious attempts to raise a riot were made in Fouchow and other places in the Fukien Province last week; but the prompt arrival of two or three foreign gunboats, and the energetic action of the native officials, prevented an actual outbreak. It was reported that two foreign missionaries had been killed; but this report has not been confirmed, and is probably false. No other attempts at raising a disturbance have been reported for some time, and the excitement seems to be quieting down. But the triennial examinations are to take place at Nanking, Hangchow, and other provincial capitals in September, and fears are entertained, both by Chinese and foreigners, that efforts will be made to take advantage of the collection of several thousands of students, servants, visitors and rowdies, to raise a mob and attack the Chinese officials and the missionaries that may be located in these places. It is hardly probable, however, that these attempts will succeed, as the Chinese government has matters well in hand, and will take every precaution to prevent trouble.

We received an anonymous letter here a few days ago, thrown inside the front door of the hospital, purporting to come from a member of the Ko Lao Hwui, the secret society that has been instigating the attacks on foreign missionaries during the past few weeks. It accuses us of all sorts of crimes and evil motives in coming to China to teach our foreign religion, and threatens to burn all our property and drive us all out of the country. It warns us to flee at once, if we would escape personal violence. Ordinarily, we should pay no attention to such a letter; but, in view of what has occurred here and elsewhere recently, we thought it best to send the letter to our Chinese district magistrate, so as to keep him posted as to all that is going on, and let him take such action as he may think best. I do not think the letter means anything serious. So far as I can judge, it is in all probability a malicious attempt, on the part of some one not connected with the secret society above mentioned, to raise a false alarm, either out of pure spite, or in the hope of some kind of advantage to himself. So we do not feel seriously disturbed over it. The soldiers are still on guard around our mission premises, and occasionally the magistrate comes around to see that everything is quiet.

There is a great deal of cholera in the city this Summer, and a large number of deaths have occurred. I hear it reported among the people that the foreign missionaries in the city have put poison in the canals, which is the cause of so much sickness and death! What these Chinese don't think of to charge up to the foreigners it is not worth while for anyone else to try.

Two men concerned in the murder of the two Englishmen in the town of Wusueh have been executed. Eight others implicated in the same affair have received various sentences—imprisonment for life, banishment, branding on the face, etc.

The settlement of the indemnity for the mission property that has been destroyed in various places, is still pending. No doubt the Chinese government will cheerfully pay the actual value of the property that has been destroyed; but they will never consent to pay the exorbitant demands that have been made in some instances by the Roman Catholics, in the form of a fine for the desecration of Christian graves, etc. If, as is intimated in a recent telegram from London, the treaty powers concerned unite to demand of the Chinese government more adequate protection of foreigners, the punishment of the rioters, and the prompt payment of indemnity, matters will be greatly complicated, as the Chinese will resent a show of force by the foreign governments. But it is hardly probable, for many reasons, that there will be war between China and any of the foreign nations.

Laws of Nature vs. Miracles.

1. A law of nature is the way God does certain things in the visible world.

2. A law of nature is a habit of God.

3. That is, a law of nature is the way God seems to always act.

4. From the way God appears to an observer to act in a few cases, the observer makes the generalization that he knows God's invariable method of procedure. From a few known cases we reason away God's freedom in an infinitude of unknown circumstances. We forget that the highway of history is strewn with cast-off generalizations and outgrown theories.

5. Another method used in the manufacture of "laws of nature." We use facts reported to us by other men. We receive these facts on human testimony, and from them build on the foundation of human testimony an iron law which we claim no weight of testimony can break. "Laws of nature" are merely our conclusions from a few facts reported to us by men and supported by human testimony. They are subjective, mere guesses by men at the methods of God. They are largely the creatures and dependents of human testimony. But we make this creature by use of testimony, and then declare the creature greater than the instruments of creation. Laws of nature, we say, can be shown to exist by testimony. But it is not admissible to show there is a real or apparent exception to these laws by means of that same testimony which helped to create them. What slaves we are to words! A law of nature can not be established by testimony. What is proven is the facts from which the mind infers the law.

6. Granted that the facts are true, the inference may be false. A new "law" may at any time be demanded to suit new facts.

7. A miracle is a seeming violation of one of these inferences or generalizations based on facts, which facts are to be established by human testimony.

8. If a miracle can not be proven, neither can a "law of nature" be established. Because a law of nature is a conclusion of the mind from facts, which facts must be established by human testimony.

9. To deny the credibility of miracles is to deny trustworthiness to human testimony, and so it is to destroy confidence in the past, and shut man up to the sensations of the present moment, as his only field of mental activity. The stock objection to miracles proves, or rather disproves, too much.

10. Miracles share in the presumption common to all alleged facts. They must be proved before they can be believed.

11. When occasion comes, there is no greater presumption against the occurrence of a miracle than against the occurrence of any other fact.

12. The question, then, about miracles is not, "Can they occur?" but, "Did they occur?" It is not a philosophical question, but an historical question, to be determined by the testimony in every given case.

Mr. Price Hughes' Visit to America.

When Mr. Pearse was about to start for Australia we published a programme of his tour, now happily and successfully completed. In response to many requests, and especially for the convenience of our numerous readers in America, we announce the arrangements which have been provisionally made for Mr. Price Hughes' visit to the United States. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Price Hughes, who represents the Sisters of the People; Mr. Percy L. Parker, his private secretary, and the Rev. W. D. Walters, the general secretary of the London Mission. Mr. Bamford Slack, one of the circuit stewards of the West London Mission, and Mrs. Bamford Slack will also, probably, be of the party. The Rev. Peter Thompson, of the East London Mission, and Mrs. Peter Thompson will cross the Atlantic in the same steamer, and so will many other personal friends and representatives to the Œcumenical Conference. But those whom we have named above are the official representatives of the West London Mission who will accompany Mr. Price Hughes to the various cities in which he is expected to speak or preach. All being well, he and his friends start from Liverpool on Wednesday, Sept. 16. The directors of the Inman Line have, with much courtesy, placed at Mr. Price Hughes' disposal a commodious cabin in the magnificent City of New York, one of the two largest and finest steamers on the Atlantic. So swiftly do these "floating palaces" of 10,500 tons move, that the City of New York is due at the great port whose name she bears on Wednesday, Sept. 23. Mr. Price Hughes must arrange somehow to recover quickly from the turmoil of the sea and the luxury of the great Atlantic liner, as he is expected to speak in Buffalo on the following day, Thursday, the 24th. On the 25th his party will visit Niagara Falls, and on Saturday travel to the "delightful town" of Boston. On Sunday, the 27th, he preaches at Boston, and on Monday, the 28th, pays a reverent visit to Plymouth Rock, that he may salute the memory of the Pilgrim Fathers who saved the English-speaking world from degradation worse than death. It is possible that on Monday or Tuesday evening he may address a public meeting in Boston. On Wednesday, the 30th, he has been requested to take part in a convention of the Epworth League at Portland in the State of Maine. This will enable him to see with his own eyes the results of the Maine liquor laws. So many English wine-bibbers have brought away an evil report of that famous temperance stronghold that it will be well to have the testimony of one who has no vested interest, either fleshly or financial, in the liquor trade. On the 1st and 2nd of October it is hoped Mr. Price Hughes may be able to speak in Philadelphia and Baltimore, or, at any rate, in one of those famous cities. His party returns to New York on Saturday, the 3rd, and he preaches there on Sunday, the 4th. On Monday, the 5th there is a banquet of welcome to the Conference representatives from Europe, and on Tuesday they all proceed to Washington, so as to be ready to take part in the opening of the Œcumenical Conference, on Wednesday morning, the 7th. The Conference sits until Tuesday, the 20th, and during that time the representatives are at the disposal of the Organizing Committee; but Mr. Price Hughes hopes to be able to preach, at least, at Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia during the fortnight. It would also be a great gratification to him if, without neglecting his Conference duties, he could visit Pittsburgh and Cincinnati. He greatly fears that mighty Chicago is too far off. On Monday, Oct. 19, Mr. Price Hughes has been asked to address a great mass meeting at the Opera House, New York, on "The Evangelization of Great Cities." He has also been requested to select a suitable English lay representative to speak on the same occasion, and he has been so fortunate as to secure the services of Mr. T. Morgan Harvey, who, as treasurer of our most important connectional fund, the Foreign Missionary Fund, and as former treasurer of the London Mission, is eminently qualified, officially and personally, to represent the Methodist laity at what will probably be the most important public meeting in our list. Mr. Price Hughes is extremely anxious to see something of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as well as of the great Northern Church, with which we are more familiar. He has, therefore, arranged as soon as the Conference is over, to visit Nashville, the capital of Tennessee, on Friday, Oct. 23, and to preach in Richmond, the capital of Virginia, on Sunday, the 25th. Then his party must hurry back to New York, to embark on the City of New York, on Wednesday, the 28th. They will be due in Liverpool on Wednesday, Nov. 4, and arrangements have already been made to give the travellers a public welcome home to "Old England" in St. James' Hall on Friday, Nov. 6. Let us hope and pray that a programme involving so many thousands of miles of travel may be carried out as easily and safely as has been planned and described on paper.

All the arrangements for the other side of the Atlantic are being most kindly made by Dr. Hamilton, of Boston, and Dr. King, of New York. Any of our readers in the United States who want further information, or who desire a visit from the West-End missioners, will please, therefore, to put themselves into communication with one or other of the two distinguished and well-known ministers we have named. Mr. Price Hughes has placed himself entirely in their hands. We should add that, before Dr. Hamilton and Dr. King undertook the programme, the Rev. W. D. Walters had extensive correspondence with leading ministers in the cities we have named, and all of them expressed the heartiest sympathy with the West London Mission, and a readiness to welcome Mr. Price Hughes into their churches. Nothing could be more encouraging than the way in which the representatives of the great Methodist community in America sympathize with the Mission. The fact is, that great numbers of American pastors visit England, and it is now the regular habit to attend the services at St. James' Hall. Hence our brethren all over the States know, in the personal testimony of their own representatives, the nature and extent of the work in West London. Mr. Price Hughes is exceedingly anxious everyone should understand that he does not wish to make a single penny—we ought to say a single cent—by his public utterances in the United States. Spontaneous collections will be made after his sermons and addresses, but the whole of the proceeds, after defraying expenses, will go to the West London Mission. The Rev. W. D. Walters will receive collections, and pay them over to the treasurer. That kind of help will be very serviceable and timely; but Mr. Price Hughes and his friends care nothing about that in comparison with their prayerful hope that the methods which have proved so successful in London may, mutatis mutandis, be tried in New York and all the great cities of the vast republic to which the future of the world belongs, if that republic seeks first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.—Methodist Times, London, Sept. 3.

Brookhaven—Population, 2,000; total trade, $500,000; cotton shipments the past year, 10,000, as compared with 11,695 for 1889-90. None of it comes to Memphis. Total trade with this city, $20,000.

Industries—The Enterprise planing mill. We have two machine shops and about twenty saw mills in the county. They manufacture about 80,000,000 feet of rough and dressed lumber a year. The Brookhaven Grocery Company, organized with a capital stock of $10,000, will be ready for business Sept. 1; $30,000 was expended for new stores and dwelling-houses. The Illinois Central is building the Natchez, Brookhaven and Meridian railroad to Pearl river.

REVIEW.

Sunday-School Lesson—Sept. 27.

Lesson 1.—"The Son's Personal Glory" fitly opens this magnificent Goepel and the quarter's work. What he is in himself—his personal glory—is (1) Glory Enjoyed with the Father, from the beginning; (2) Glory Proclaimed by John the Baptist, in a holstry of unparalleled fidelity; and (3) Glory Displayed among Men, in the peerless ministry Jesus pursued.

Lesson 2.—Here we behold "The Son Manifested to Men." (1) By Divine Attestation, as prearranged with John the herald; (2) By Faithful Declarations of this herald, who had been thoroughly convinced of the divine mission of Jesus; and (3) By Personal Fellowship between Jesus and his early disciples, who thus learned for themselves that he was indeed the Son of God.

Lesson 3.—"The Son's Wonderful Works" now begin to appear before men. At the wedding feast at Cana there is (1) Need Discovered, with which Jesus kindly sympathizes; there are also (2) Means Used, not because the Lord needed to use them, but because he ever honors and encourages such use. There is also (3) Success attained, as is ever the case when Jesus works alone, or with his servants.

Lesson 4.—"The Son's Matchless Teachings" now begin to command attention, and Nicodemus seeks him that he may learn more of the great things of God. (1) Essential Things, including the birth of the Spirit, are presented. Advancing beyond these, he presents (2) Spiritual Mysteries; and so leads up to that most amazing of all mysteries, (3) Wondrous Love, as shown by the Father, in the gift of the Son, for the salvation of men.

Lesson 5.—Now the Lord comes in even closer contact with man. "The Sinner and the Sinner" meet at Jacob's well, and the narrative illustrates three views of his methods: (1) Approaching the Sinner, so as to secure a hearing and gain a victory; (2) Interesting the Sinner, so as to ensure a reception of saving truth; and (3) Enlightening the Sinner, so that sin and salvation may both be realized.

Lesson 6.—The Son wins sinners to himself, and hence "The Son and his Subjects" comes in for consideration. He is thus discovered to be (1) Fitted to Rule; (2) Able to Bless; (3) Appointed to Judge. Such a ruler is worthy of most loyal homage.

Lesson 7.—Not alone as a Ruler is the Lord presented, but this lesson sets forth "The Son, Man's Helper." A hungry multitude is before him in a desert place. There is (1) Great Necessity; but, alas! there is also (2) Great Supply. Man's extremity, however, was the Lord's opportunity, and (3) Divine Sufficiency shines out as the sun at noonday.

Lesson 8.—Not alone for the wants of the body, but for the superior wants of the soul, is the Lord qualified; and so, in this lesson, "The Son, Man's Food," is set forth. There is first presented, that it may be justly estimated, (1) The Meat which Perishes; then (2) the Bread of Life, which transcends all earthly supplies; and (3) The Blessedness of Partakers, who use the Bread of Life, and so gain life eternal.

Lesson 9.—This lesson presents a view similar to that just given. "The Son, Man's Drink" is its topic. In this relation he is (1) Rejected by the Wicked; (2) Needed by the Perishing, and (3) Vindicated by the Scriptures.

Lesson 10.—"The Son and His Brethren" is here discussed in a series of nice discriminations which set forth those who are (1) Disciples Indeed; those who are (2) Children in name only, while they are (3) Enemies in Fact.

Lesson 11.—The incident with the man born blind sets forth "The Son, the Light of Men." Three views cover the ground: (1) The Blind Man Met; (2) The Blind Man Healed; (3) The Blind Man Saved.

Lesson 12.—The crowning glory of the quarter's work is in this lesson, "The Son, the Good Shepherd." Nothing can more lovingly set forth the Lord than these three showings: (1) The Shepherd's Fold; (2) The Shepherd's Flock, and (3) The Shepherd's Care.

Through these lessons the divine glory of Jesus shines; and he who sees Him, and who believes on him, shall surely have eternal life.—Sunday-School Times.

Acts x, 25-35.

MEMORY VERSES.—34, 35.

CRITICAL NOTES.

BY PRESIDENT TIMOTHY DWIGHT.

Versee 25, 26. The meeting of Cornelius and Peter was at the door of the house or in the court; more probably, it would seem, at, or just within, the door. The vision which Cornelius had had, with the message of the angel, had deeply impressed his mind with the thought of Peter as an extraordinary person. The expression which is used is a strong one, "He fell down at his feet, and worshipped him." There would seem to have been something more than the mere act of prostration, and yet we can hardly suppose that there was worship, in the strict sense of the word as we now use it. It was an act of solemn reverence, and with a mingling, as we may believe, of some religious awe connected with the angel's words. This is suggested by Peter's answer also, or at least is harmonious with it. Peter rejects the homage altogether, assuring Cornelius that he is a man like himself.

Verses 27, 28. The going in, here spoken of, was apparently an entering into the apartment where the family and friends of Cornelius were assembled. Cornelius had gone forth from the room to welcome Peter as he was told of his arrival.—Unlawful: This was held apparently by the rabbinical teachers, but it is not distinctly declared in the Mosaic law. Perhaps it expresses in a strong way the feeling of unfitness in such intercourse which was characteristic of the nation and its teachers. The expression "unto me" is made emphatic by its position—unto me, a Jew, God has taught this by the vision which was given me.

Verses 29, 30. The expression at the beginning of verse 30 is somewhat uncertain in its meaning, but the translation given by the Revisers is probably correct. The words thus mean that Cornelius had had the vision four days previously, and that it occurred at the same hour on that former day as that in which he was now addressing Peter. The hour was the ninth, or three o'clock in the afternoon, and it was the prayer-hour which he was observing. The word "fasting," which is found in the Authorized Version, is omitted by the best authorities.

Verses 31, 32. The prayer here referred to is that which Cornelius was making at the time, but it was doubtless the expression of a desire which he had long had. The "alms" were the manifestation of the true religious spirit which inspired his prayer.—Therefore: By sending for Peter, he would receive the answer to his desires. Joppa was thirty miles or more south of Cesarea, where Cornelius was.—By the seaside: The sea here is the Mediterranean. The words are repeated, with substantial exactness, from the earlier verses of the chapter.

Verse 33. "Forthwith," as we see in verse 7.—Thou hast well done: Cornelius expresses, in a gracious phrase of the time, his thanks for the coming of Peter in answer to his request. He then reverentially expresses himself as prepared to receive the message, whatever it may be, which is divinely sent to him.

Verses 34, 35. The word "respecter of persons" refers to partiality in favor of members of one nationality—the Jews—as compared with others. The great lesson of the opening of the gospel and of the kingdom of God to the Gentiles is thus taught to Peter.—He that feareth him, and worketh righteousness: The one whose mind and whose action are in the right state.—Is acceptable to him: The acceptance is connected with faith and righteousness by faith, but it does not depend on membership of the Jewish race. "God will confer the blessings of his grace as readily upon the Gentile who desires to receive them, as upon the Jew."—Sunday-School Times.

A Childless Home.

Smith and his wife have every luxury that money can buy, but there is one thing lacking to their happiness. Both are fond of children, but no little voices prattle, no little feet patter in their beautiful home. "I would give ten years of my life if I could have one healthy, living child of my own," Smith often says to himself. No woman can be the mother of healthy offspring unless she is herself in good health. If she suffers from female weakness, general debility, bearing-down pains, and functional derangements, her physical condition is such that she can not hope to have healthy children. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sovereign and guaranteed remedy for all these ailments. See guarantee printed on bottle-wrapper.

Louisiana Notes.

The Democratic State Central Committee will meet in New Orleans, in Parlor P, St. Charles Hotel, Tuesday, Oct. 13.

The depot of our street railway is nearly completed. Postmaster Foster has had electric lights put into the postoffice.—Lake Charles Echo.

The people of Jeanerette have voted to tax themselves five mills per annum for ten years to provide means for establishing waterworks.

The new Natchez was launched at Howood's yards, Jeffersonville, the twelfth. She was built by Capt. Leathers for the New Orleans and Vicksburg trade.

We are pleased to see that bricks are now being hauled preparatory for building the Methodist Church. All are anxious for the commencement and trust it will be very soon.—New Iberia Cor. to Sugar Bowl.

Mr. H. C. Blessing informs us that he has just harvested 19½ tons of crab grass hay from 6 acres of land. This hay at the market price, $11 per ton, gives a revenue of $214.50, or $35.75 per acre. How does this compare with raising cotton at 7 cents, especially when the cost of the hay crop was only in the harvesting?—Baton Rouge Truth.

The German government is now negotiating with prominent lumber men in New Orleans for the delivery at German ports, within the next eighteen months, of 50,000,000 feet of pine lumber, to be used in railroad construction in that country. To transport this large amount of timber will require the full capacity of one hundred large ships.

The Monroe Compress began work for the season of 1891-2, on the twelfth, when it compressed some 350 bales, which have been received from the present crop. With the additional shed-room erected this Fall, the company now has a storage capacity of 10,000 bales, and as they can compress from 800 to 1,000 bales a day, the prompt handling of all cotton intrusted to them is assured. With these excellent facilities, Monroe can and does offer to the farmer a superior mart in which to dispose of his crop.—Monroe Paper.

SUGAR SCHOOL.—At the Sugar Experiment Station, at Audubon Park, New Orleans, a sugar school has been established, with a two years' course. The following is the faculty: Wm. C. Stubbs, Ph. D., director and teacher of sugar agriculture and sugar agriculture chemistry; H. D. L. Horton, A. M., professor of organic and sugar chemistry; J. T. Crawley, A. M., professor of analytical chemistry and chemist in station; Robt. T. Burnwell, M. E., professor of sugar mechanics and in charge of sugar house; E. A. Newman, instructor in sugar making. The regular course begins Oct. 1; the tuition per session for citizens of Louisiana is $100; for all others, $200.

Mississippi Items.

The condition of the cotton crop in Mississippi is reported by the Agricultural Bureau as being better than any other State except Arkansas.

The artesian well now being bored at Wesson has reached the depth of 1,000 feet, with no evidence of water. It will be carried 2,000 feet, if necessary.

Hon. P. Lewenthal, mayor of Brookhaven, has sent in his resignation, to take effect Oct. 4. He will remove to Greenville, where he will engage in the practice of law.

Vicksburg's cotton receipts for the year ending Sept. 1, were 70,784 bales, by far the largest on record and several thousand bales ahead of the year ending at the same date in 1890. The exact comparison can not be given because one or two errors accidentally crept into 1890's calculations and the total of sixty-six thousand and odd bales is only approximately correct.—Herald.

Nearly all the foundation of the Spengler Mills' new sash and blind factory is in place and also a considerable number of the sills. It will be much larger than the old factory and will be supplied with the latest and best machinery. The building will cut the present line of Washington street in two and the city will begin filling in on the new line in a short time.—Herald.

The assessment rolls of Washington county, as approved by the Board of Supervisors, give the amount of taxable personal property at $2,061,945, and real estate at $5,145,385. Total, $7,206,925. Owing to a slight deficiency in the revenue of last year, a tax levy was raised from 6 to 7½ mills, which will prove amply adequate to the demands of the next fiscal year.

The census of 1880 gives the valuation of all the real estate of Jones county as $90,849; personal property, $103,244, making a total valuation of $194,090. With the exception of Greene and Perry counties, this was the smallest in the State. The assessment of 1891 shows a valuation as follows:

Real estate, $662,656.50; personal estate, $528,602. In 1880, the whole amount of taxes paid by the county was $4,427. The taxes to be assessed and collected in 1891 will exceed $20,000. It will be seen that the value of property in the county has increased since 1880 over 600 per cent., while the taxes have increased something over 400 per cent.

The population of Jones in 1880 was 3,469 whites and 359 colored; total, 3,828. In 1890 it was 7,057 whites, and colored, 1,295: total, 8,322. This makes Jones the banner county of the State. No other county can show so great a gain.

There are eighteen steam saw mills now in operation in the county and nine turpentine distilleries. Several of the saw mills are of the largest capacity, with the latest improvements, and will compare favorably with any in the South. The saw mills in this county, when in full operation, have a capacity to cut fully a million feet of lumber per week.—Ellisville South.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Should be provided with Ayer's Pills. No other aperient is in such general demand or so highly recommended by the profession. Mild but thorough in operation, these pills are the best of all remedies for constipation, biliousness, heartburn, indigestion, flatulency, loss of appetite, liver complaint, and sick headache. They break up colds, fevers, and malaria, relieve rheumatism and neuralgia, and are indispensable to travelers, either by land or sea. Sugar-coated and compounded of the purest vegetable cathartics, they may be taken with impunity by old and young. Physicians recommend these pills in preference to any other. H. W. Hersh, Judsonia, Ark., says: "In 1853, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, September 24, 1891.

Briefs.

The following are the statistics of the Kentucky Conference: Local preachers, 122; white members, 26,985; colored members, 20; infants baptized, 280; adults, 958; Sunday-schools, 242; teachers, 1,870; scholars, 13,956; collected for widows, orphans, etc., $3,000; foreign missions, $5,461; domestic, $2,117; church extension, $1,852; number of churches, 264; value, $712,400; parsonages, 53; value, $86,415.

The following are some of the statistics of the Western Conference: Local preachers, 34; members, 3,375; infants baptized, 121; adults baptized, 242; Sunday-schools, 41; teachers, 340; scholars, 2,478. There were $855.40 raised for foreign missions, and $265.35 for domestic missions. The reports show 47¼ (save the fourth!) churches valued at $89,100, and 17 parsonages valued at $12,500.

Statistics of the Brazil Mission Conference: Number of members, 528; number of Sunday-schools, 10; number of Sunday-school scholars, 333; number of male missionaries, 10; number of female missionaries, 14; amount for domestic missions, 3,666 mil reis, equal at par, $2,000; amount for other purposes, $3,000. The average per member for all purposes, $9. Not many home churches do so well!

Let our lay brethren and sisters remember that Conference will soon be on hand. There is one thing you ought to inquire into without another day's delay. Make inquiries as to whether the pastor has been paid his salary. If you find he has not, then make inquiry among yourselves why he is not paid. Don't rest until you pay him every cent and something over, as the New Orleanians say, "for lagniappe." Then you will feel good and he will feel good, too.

Our law prohibits prize fighting, but allows "glove contests," and there have been several of these. The common opinion all along has been that these "glove contests" are really prize fights. The Grand Jury has taken up a case and indicted several parties for violating the statute under the guise of "glove contests." Now the court and jury will determine the difference between these two. We trust that these brutal exhibitions will be brought to a close. They do nobody any good, but do many an immense harm. Let the court and jury by all means uphold the law against savagism.

The following are the statistics of the Missouri Conference: Local preachers, 148; members, 37,334—last year, 36,368; increase over last year, 986; infants baptized, 681; adults baptized, 2,263; churches, 410—value of churches, $736,003; parsonages, 94—value, $105,105; value of other church property, $23,405; money expended for churches and parsonages, $70,973; raised for presiding elders, $9,280; raised for preachers in charge, $73,066; Bishops, $1,493; Conference collection, $3,864; foreign missions, $10,769.74; domestic missions, $5,052.30; church extension, $2,961.45; reported $206,016 for all purposes; number of Sunday-schools, 364; number of officers and teachers, 3,246; number of scholars, 23,705; amount collected for Sunday-schools, $6,997; collected for missions, $1,754.85; collected on Children's Day, $242.83; increase in schools, 11; increase in scholars, 1,685.

When you put a religious newspaper in a family where there are children, you have started an influence for good which will affect several generations. Think of that.

Political Meetings on Sunday.

The papers have reported several political meetings held on the Sabbath day. We regard this as one of the worst features of the campaign now being waged in Louisiana. It is bad enough for an individual to violate wilfully and openly the law of God, but when political parties so arrange their programs of public speaking as to include the Sabbath, and thus flagrantly set aside God's law, and publicly insult the Christian sentiment of the country, it is so much worse that it calls for a vigorous protest from every lover of righteousness. We are aware that political parties, as such, have very little use for God's law, and do not scruple to override it when it is found in opposition to their partisan schemes; but many people composing these parties bear the Christian name, and when the trend of party practice is to antagonize and overthrow the law of God those people are bound by the principles which they profess to protest against those practices and to resist them by every lawful means. Louisiana is down low enough now in the estimation of the world without sinking her infinitely lower by desecrating the holy Sabbath in holding political meetings for the purpose of persuading the people to legalize gambling by making it a part of the supreme law of the commonwealth! The lottery has already brought upon us the scorn of the whole land, and these Sunday political meetings to further it can but intensify that scorn!

An anti-lottery meeting held on the Sabbath is an indirect argument in favor of the lottery. We declare that the lottery is a vice, and we raise our voices against it being enthroned in the Constitution because it is a vice, and if we hold an anti-lottery meeting on the Sabbath, we violate God's law and commit a sin. The two positions can not be made to harmonize. If gambling in lotteries is a sin, breaking the Sabbath law is no less a sin, and to commit one sin in order to counteract another is an argument whose absurdity will be used most powerfully against those who make it. We do hope that our anti-lottery friends will not allow themselves to be placed in such an absurd and unreasonable position before the world!

The law of God is the foundation of good government, and obedience to that law is the essential qualification of good citizenship. The restraints of God's law are necessary to a stable condition of society. "A free government of popular suffrage" can not live without those restraints. These are fundamental principles recognized as such by all students of history and civil government, and an open and public repudiation of them bodes no good to the people who acquiesce in it. That acquiescence arrays them, not only against the moral convictions of Christendom, but against the God of nations and the author of all good government. These political meetings held on the Sabbath flaunt defiance in his face by trampling under foot a law written by his own hand and promulgated to the world under the most awful sanctions. If we do not protest against such flagrant violations of the Sabbath law, and urge that protest with a vigor that will stop such lawlessness, how can we expect the favor of Heaven?

We protest against this wholesale Sabbath breaking by the political parties in this State. In the name of a sound and safe political economy, in the name of the Christian patriotism of Louisiana, in the name of the churches of Jesus Christ in this commonwealth, in the name of God, the Arbiter of the destiny of States, we protest against these political meetings on the Sabbath day, and call upon the Christian men and women of the State to put them down. At this juncture of affairs the good citizens of Louisiana—those in favor of righteousness—can not afford to tolerate practices which will surely weaken the respect and turn away from us the moral support of the outside world. We are in too much need of each to do that which will destroy both!

Episcopal Districts.

Our esteemed contemporary, the editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, recently published a lengthy leader advocating the formation of permanent episcopal districts. He thinks the present "district" is an anomaly for the reason that it has neither "metes nor bounds," and "may extend from North Carolina to California, and yet include none of the intervening space." Well, that does look a little absurd, to be sure. He goes on to say:

> It is simply the jurisdiction of a Bishop, which may be changed ad libitum by the Bishops. It has no organic or corporate existence, and is held together only for the time being in the authority of the Bishop and as a matter of convenience for the performance of episcopal labor. . . . Of course such a thing (what else shall we call it) can not be clothed either with advisory, executive or legislative powers. There is absolutely nothing in the "episcopal district" to unite the Conferences composing it on any common interest.

All of which is simply true, but we suppose, like most other parts of our church machinery, the present episcopal districts owe their formation to the growing necessities of the church. When Asbury rode up and down and across the continent the whole church was an episcopal district, and after the church added to the number of Bishops they often travelled together and held Conferences together. But the church grew, and a division of episcopal labor was necessary to meet the demands of growth. Then the present plan of forming districts every year came into practice, and yet each Bishop was and is considered a general superintendent of the whole church. The districts were such simply in respect to the Bishop's work. As respects the general church, it is as if they had no existence at all. An episcopal district exists only in the Bishop and for his convenience of work. It is incarnated in him, so to speak. The circumstances which led to its formation preclude the idea that it was intended to be "either advisory, executive or legislative." It has no functions whatever.

Now this is what Bro. Campbell thinks ought to be changed. He would have the episcopal districts composed of contiguous Conferences, and their boundaries fixed by the General Conference, and the affairs common to the Conferences composing the district managed by boards, "composed of members elected by the several interested Conferences." As to what is meant by "affairs common to the Conferences composing such districts," Bro. Campbell mentions the church papers and church schools. Bro. Campbell thinks that the formation of such districts "would naturally ally the Conferences of which it is composed in such undertakings." Besides this, he would have each district furnish an episcopal parsonage for the Bishop, and in order not to "destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency," the Bishops would have to exchange parsonages occasionally.

It seems to us that permanent districts are desirable, and that they should be designated by a proper name, instead of a number. To say that Bishop Hargrove has charge of the sixth district does not locate his work to many people. But to say he has charge of the Nashville district locates his work to everybody. The plan now operated may, and frequently does, change the sixth district to some other next year. We do not see why an episcopal district shall not be defined by exact geographical lines, like a presiding elder's district, and be made as permanent, until some development of the work necessitates a change. And we see no reason why a Bishop should not stay on one district four years subject to the same conditions as a presiding elder. It appears to us that it would lessen the chances of making unfortunate appointments. To say that a Bishop, who is a stranger, can adjust the work to the men and the men to the work as well as the Bishop who knows both, is to say what very few believe.

We agree to this much of Bro. Campbell's plan. As to the balance—the boards, schools and papers—we had not thought of before we read Bro. Campbell's editorial, and hence are not prepared to speak.

Responsibility for the Collections.

BY "X."

The assessments for missions, church extension, Conference collections, education, Bishops and for all other purposes are made on the charges and churches, and not on the preachers. The responsibility for raising these collections, the amounts necessary to meet these assessments, is, primarily, with the charges and churches. In the matter of missions and church extension the Discipline makes it the duty of the presiding elder to bring this subject before the Quarterly Conference, and to see that well devised plans are laid to raise the sums assessed.

I have yet to see this done in a single case. If the matter is mentioned at all, some brother moves to leave the whole subject in the hands of the pastor. I have never known a Quarterly Conference to devise a plan for raising these sums, or any other collections ordered by the Conference. The Church Conference has the reserved right of devising its own methods of raising certain moneys, but I have yet to see a Church Conference devise a method of raising any of these collections. For a time the presiding elders, by order of the Annual Conference, took up the collection for the support of the Bishops, but for many years past they have left this, with eight or nine other collections, in the hands of the pastor.

It is rare that a presiding elder takes up a collection for anything now, except for a district parsonage. This has gone on, year after year, until some of the preachers, and, perhaps, a majority of the laymen have begun to think that the whole responsibility of raising these sums is on the shoulders of the preacher, and that if they are not raised in full, he alone is to blame for it. If I am not mistaken, the Discipline of the church makes it the duty of the preacher to take up only two collections—one for missions and one for church extension. And in both of these cases the Quarterly Conference is specially charged with devising plans to raise them. This statement, I am sure, will be a surprise to some preachers and to a larger number of laymen, but so it is.

The Annual Conference has authority to say how some collections shall be raised, and this implies the right to say the preachers shall take up certain collections; but the Annual Conference can not assume to do, or to order done by others, things that have been specifically committed to the Quarterly and Church Conferences. In other words, it can not nullify a law passed by the General Conference.

These things have crept up on us slowly and insidiously until, in some instances, our preachers are more burdened with the collections than with the care of souls and the work of preparing and preaching sermons. The ability to collect money is becoming the test of ministerial and pastoral capacity. Good collectors are more in demand than good preachers. Money sense is more appreciated than preaching and pastoral sense. This is a growing evil. Young preachers try to measure by the new, and I may say unscriptural, standard set up. The effect is often seen in a failure to cultivate the preaching gift that is in them.

When we first began to read statistical reports in the Annual Conference the whole report was read, and special attention was called to the number of converts and additions to the church. In a few years only part of the report was read; and now, for some years, it is enough to say: "The collections all full." This seems to be the main thing. It is enough if the preacher is a good money gatherer; if he is not this, he is voted a failure.

We need to have a change in these things. Laymen and laywomen ought to raise most of these collections, and leave the preachers free to attend to the special work they were called of God to do. It is the duty of the preacher to preach on missions, church extension and education, and he can take up collections for these causes, and he ought to co-operate with the laymen in raising money for all church purposes, but to leave him single-handed and alone with all this work to do is an outrage and a prostitution of his holy calling. From two to three months of the year is spent in tramping round and round after money till the people dread to see the preacher coming. This thing tells seriously on the religious life of the preacher, and it also tells on his preaching.

By what rule of God's Word or by what law of our church is the preacher taxed with all this work? Is it not properly the work of laymen?

Prize Fighting.

The evident intention of the prize fighting fraternity in the United States, and, perhaps, other countries, to make our city a headquarters and general rendezvous for their exhibitions, together with the consent of the municipal authorities, as shown in permits issued to notorious prize fighters, to have what they call "glove contests" of skill—but which are in reality prize fights for money, as all know—call upon the ministry and membership and press of the Christian Church in all its branches to cry mightily unto God, imploring him to put it into the minds of our rulers to discountenance instead of encouraging that particular style of sin. It might well form the subject of special supplication, private as well as public. (See Malachi iii, 16, 17 and 18; Matthew viii, 19 and 20.)

ORLEANS.

Where Are the Five?

Another of the five who had agreed to join the hand of ten has gotten weary of waiting for the other five and has paid over his $100 for this year, but continues to extend the invitation. Where are the five others who are needed to carry out this good work? Only $100 a year, and so many can afford it. Scores, if not hundreds, of young men in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference spend $100 a year for cigars, and some even more than that. Men of wealth in the Meridian district waste far more. Let them now make this investment for time and eternity.

T. L. MELLEN.

Dr. R. A. Young will soon publish another volume entitled, "Sketchy Pages of Foreign Travel." All who read his "Twenty Thousand Miles" will be eager to get "Sketchy Pages" of England, France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Russia, Turkey, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, etc.

Notes.

An Italian has defined genius as a "degenerated epileptoid psychosis!" We ought to rejoice now that we are not geniuses!

"Pious platitudes of popular pulpiteering" is the characterization Dr. Candler gives to some of the present-day preaching. Pious, platitudinous, popular preaching, as it were.

The London Methodist Times:

> It is a remarkable coincidence that the ornel and wicked persecution of the Jews in Russia has been followed by a great famine in that country. It may be said that this is nothing more than a coincidence. The striking fact however, is that for some thousands of years the persecution of the Jews has been followed by such "coincidences." Neither men nor nations can sin deliberately and flagrantly against the moral law of God without suffering even in this world.

"Soul-converting prayer meeting!" We were surprised to meet with that phrase in a newspaper the other day. We don't recollect that we ever knew a conversion in an ordinary week-night prayer meeting! And yet why should there not be such at every such meeting? Is the Lord's hand too short to reach the souls in a prayer meeting? Why should there not be conversions in every meeting of every sort, if the unconverted are there? Brother, why do you not have conversions in your prayer meetings? Ponder the question.

The Missouri Conference passed the following resolution relative to our missionary debt and its payment:

> Resolved, By the Missouri Annual Conference, that we will call upon the people throughout our bounds for a speoial Christmas-offering for the purpose of paying off the debt now embarrassing our Mission Board, that the Sunday of Christmas week shall be observed as a special missionary day when thank-offerings and self-denial offerings shall be called for for this purpose; and resolved further, that we request the other Conferences to cooperate with us in this movement, and respectfully suggest to the missionary secretaries that they make a call upon the whole church for the observance of this day.

A minister sometimes makes the mistake of trying to make his sermons suit his own taste about such matters. That is not the object of preaching. People are like hungry sheep. They want food. If we give our people that they will grow and be strong. The people want help. That is the whole of it.

On the other side. The sheep that is hungry is constantly on the lookout for food. The man who realizes spiritual hunger will be looking for spiritual food in every direction. He specially looks for it in all the services of the sanctuary. And he generally finds it. Long or short sermons afford him pasturage, and he goes home to grow and get strong.

St. Paul says that Jesus said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Did you ever suppose this saying could redeem the case of the man who clung to his money till death came in sight, and then, under stress of fear, willed it to some benevolent institution? That can not be called "giving." That is simply a "forced let-go."

Speaking of such giving, Mr. Gladstone says:

> My objections against such bequests is that they offer a ready and seductive method of escape from that exercise of self-denial which is required in order to part, on any adequate scale, with our means while we are alive. Moreover, these posthumous dispositions of property give to the disposer a character for virtue to which he is in no way entitled. What is wrested from me by the gripe of death, I can in no true sense be said to give; and yet we hear of the bounty and munificence of A. or B., where there was neither bounty nor munificence, since no man can spend his money, any more than he can walk in Bond street or Hyde Park, after he is dead.

The editor of the Mid-Continent, Dr. Taylor, has been attending the meetings of the Salvation Army in Jersey City. After a description of the place and surroundings, of Gen. Bailing-Booth and his methods, he has this to say of Mrs. Booth:

> Mrs. Booth, who had sat by her husband at the front, and had occasionally participated with a word or two, was now called to the desk. She is rather small of stature, graceful in form and movement, having a tender and melodious voice whose rich tones penetrate to every corner with rare pathos and persuasion. Her face is singularly attractive, being round and full with strong jaw and firmly set red lips, straight black eye-brows, great dark speaking eyes and rich brown hair curling around her brow inside the great projecting bonnet such as all their women wore. Mrs. Booth was the daughter of a clergyman of the English Church, who left her home to join the Army in England and share her fate in the commander. Her address was chaste, elegant, rarely beautiful and touching. She modestly pleaded with the bearers to come to Christ, interspersing her pleas with anecdote and illustration, keeping her wavering arms in almost constant graceful motion, never rising to shrill tones or false measures. It was one of the most eloquent and effective addresses we ever heard from woman's lips, and the audience sat spell-bound for a half hour or more under the witchery of her words. She closed by calling penitents to come and kneel at the front, a space being cleared.

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will be sent to all new subscribers from this date to January 1, 1893, for two dollars. The usual commission will be given to agents.

Personal and Otherwise.

A note from Rev. F. R. Alexander informs us of the severe illness of his father, Rev. B. F. Alexander. We trust the prayers of the church will go up for his speedy recovery.

We call attention to Bro. B. F. Lewis' card about "Special Missionary," In another column. That remaining $500 ought to be raised as soon as possible and sent forward.

A clear thinker says:

I think that sixth page ought to draw out some fine writing from some of our preachers. I like it. It has added immensely to the value of the paper. It gives a new field.

We have information of the death of a personal friend, and a member of our church at Grand Cane, La.: Mrs. M. J. Spearman. She died in Texas while on a visit to her daughter. We sympathize with the bereaved friends.

"A Methodist fallen from grace" sent us last week five dollars in answer to Dr. Harrison's appeal for the amount to entertain the foreign delegates to the Ecumenical Conference. We think that is an evidence of rising in grace.

Bro. E. P. Mackie reports a fine improvement made on the Seashore Camp Ground. An artesian well has been sunk, and a flow of delicious water, fifty gallons per minute, has been obtained. The well is neatly arranged with four spouts and basin and drainage pipe to the sea.

We hope the brethren will be patient toward our "infirmity," when we ask them not to load their reports heavily with commendations and laudations of the preachers. Our readers want a clear and brief statement of the results of their work. Space is worth a good deal in accounts of God's work.

We have received an invitation to the marriage of our young friend, H. F. Foster, youngest son of the late Wm. H. Fosier, to Miss Lucy Applegate, of this city, in the Lafayette Presbyterian Church, Oct. 5, 6:30 P. M. We wish our young friends all the compliments of such an occasion.

With the "compliments of Mrs. J. B. Stone" came to us the Minutes of the twelfth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, held at Winona, during the past summer. It is an interesting document, full of hopeful figures. Mrs. Hargrove's able address is included.

Rev. Dr. J. C. Simmons, of the Pacific Conference, paid us an appreciated call last week. He was en route to the Ecumenical Conference, being the only representative of our church from the Pacific Coast. This is Dr. Simmons' second visit East, since he went to California in 1852. He represents our church as doing well in all the Conferences in the West.

Quite a number of notes from the work and some fine articles on various subjects we have had to hold back for want of space this week. Let our friends be as patient as they can. Even Bro. Watkins' "Notes from Millsaps College" have to wait this time. Dr. Sullivan, however, has a fine paper on the location of the college, which we commend to our readers.

The Sunday-school Superintendents' and Teachers' Union of the city will inaugurate a weekly meeting for the study of the Sunday-school lessons. The first meeting will be held at Carondelet M. E. Church, South, Friday, Oct. 2, beginning at 7:30 P. M., and will be conducted by Rev. W. H. LaPrade, who will have charge of the meetings for three months. All are most cordially invited to attend these meetings.

We saw in the New Delta, a few days ago, an account of the golden wedding of two old friends of the editor's family: J. Warren Taylor and Mary Pipes, of East Feliciana parish. We knew them as friends in our earliest boyhood, and some of the pleasantest recollections of those days are associated with the venerable couple. The editor sends congratulations, and prays that peace may still abide with the aged pair, and that this life may enlarge into the brightness and beauty of the life eternal.

A short note from Prof. Magruder, of Baton Rouge, brings the painful news of the death of his youngest son, Albert Sidney Johnston Magruder, in Chicago, on the morning of the sixteenth instant. Thus in a short space Prof. Magruder and his wife have been called to weep over two sons gone from earth. Johnston Magruder was a rising attorney of brilliant promise, and his early death crushes a thousand hopes out of the hearts of his aged parents. We tender them our deepest sympathy.

Soreness in body or limbs promptly relieved by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, used external.

Wanted.

We want a man to take charge of a high school. We want a Methodist and a good Christian man, 25 years old; 30 or 35 preferable. We want a man that will succeed. We have a strong Methodist community; good church; preaching by pastor twice a month; Sunday-school and class meeting; good place to build up a fine high school. We are building now. Want to open about Nov. 10. We have about sixty-five or seventy pupils subscribed already, with possibly about one hundred local patronage. Please find us a man, and let him put in his application at once. Address me at Barlow, Copiah county, Miss.

Special Missionary.

I would like to call the attention of the brethren of the Mississippi Conference to the special missionary subscriptions made in Canton, last December. To date eleven hundred dollars have been sent to Dr. John, leaving five hundred dollars yet to be raised. The present condition of our missionary treasury should make us more diligent than ever in paying these pledges. Personal notices will be sent each delinquent in a few days.

B. F. LEWIS, Special Treas.

Jackson, Miss.

Notice.

Rev. George S. Inge will begin a meeting in this town on the first Sunday in October. He will bring his large tent, which will comfortably seat 1,500 or 2,000 persons. Visitors will be entertained at very reasonable rates in hotels and private boarding-houses. All visiting ministers will be entertained free of charge.

B. F. JONES.

An Afflicted Pastor and Family.

The following note from our Bro. Mandeville shows how severely he and family have been afflicted. We trust the worst is over, and that God's light and peace may shine as before.

I was in the midst of a good meeting when I was summoned home, July 20, to nurse my wife and two youngest children, who were very ill. For five weeks I nursed. Three times the dark shadow of the death-angel fell on my loved ones, but as often driven back by the mercy of God, and at last worn out I fell on the last day of August, and have been very ill, and am still so weak I can do nothing. I believe I will now get well, but fear it will be some time ere I can do my work properly, and in the meantime have lost the season for protracting. My eldest daughter is now ill. We need the prayers of God's children. Though sorely tried, I realize most fully his sustaining grace.

G. A. MANDEVILLE.

Girard, La., Sept. 19.

The confidence of people who have tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, in this preparation, is remarkable. It has cured many who have failed to derive any good whatever from other articles. For diseases caused by impure blood or low state of the system it is unsurpassed.

Errata.

Several errors occur in my articles, probably by the writer's fault, most of which the intelligent reader will correct.

In the second article, at the end of the fifth line after the first proposition, read "place," instead of plan. Last line of second paragraph, same paper, add "out" to with in the middle of the line—"without," etc.

In the third paper, read "Johanic" instead of Pauline, and in the next sentence, "John" instead of Paul. In the same paper, third line from top of second column, read "may" exist, instead of must exist. Other errors the reader will see and correct.

"Don't Kick If You Are Sick."

Creole Female Tonic makes the weak woman strong, and sends new blood bounding through the veins, imparting new life and strength to the weakened parts.

It stimulates nature to its work with the happiest effect. We commend it to suffering women everywhere, as a sovereign remedy for their peculiar ailments.

There is nothing which succeeds like success; and the success of any publication which admits advertising is also the success of the advertisers.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 500½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Inducement for Cash Renewals.

All subscribers owing the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE that will in the next thirty days send the amount due to this office, or hand same to preacher in charge, will have their time extended 3 months.

HOME LIFE.

THE OLD FIRE-PLACE.

BY J. N. MATTHEWS.

The blessed old fire-place! how bright it appears
As back to my boyhood I gaze,
O'er the desolate waste of the vanishing years,
From the gloom of these lone latter days;
Its lips are as ruddy, its heart is as warm
To my fancy to-night as of yore,
When we cuddled around it and smiled at the storm,
As it showed its white teeth at the door.

I remember the apple that wooed the red flame
Till the blood bubbled out of its cheek,
And the passionate popcorn that smothered its shame
Till its heart split apart with a shriek;
I remember the Greeks and the Trojans who fought,
In their shadowy shapes on the wall,
And the yarn, in thick tangles, my fingers held taut,
While my mother was winding the ball.

I remember the cat that lay cozy and curled
By the jamb where the flames flickered high,
And the sparkles—the fireflies of winter—that whirled
Up the flue, as the wind whistled by;
I remember the bald-headed, bandy-legged lores
That frowned like a fiend in my face,
In a fury of passion, repeating the wrongs,
They had borne in the old fire-place.

I remember the steam from the kettle that breathed
As soft as the flight of a soul,
The long-handled skillet that splattered and seethed
With the batter that burdened its bowl;
I remember the rusty, identical nail
Where the criminal pot-hooks were hung,
The dragon-faced andirons, the old cedar pail,
The gourd and the peg where it swung.

But the fire has died out on the old cabin hearth,
The wind clatters loud through the pane,
And the dwellers—they've flown to the ends of the earth,
And will gaze on it never again;
A forget-me-not grows in the moldering wall,
The last, as it were, of its race,
And the shadows of night settle down like a pall
On the stones of the old fire-place.

—Omaha World.

Safeguards to Purity.

There are parents who think they can bring up their children, and especially their daughters, in a large degree ignorant of the evil that is in the world. As the king in the fairy tale banished all spinning-wheels from his dominions that his daughter might not wound her fingers with a spindle, and realize the prophecy of the spiteful fairy at her christening, even so mothers withhold useful and necessary knowledge from their daughters, lest with it may be mingled something leading to harm. And even as this charming princess, notwithstanding every precaution, as by accident came upon the only spinning-wheel in the realm, was wounded by the spindle, and fell into her hundred years' slumber, so often does the young lady unaware stumble upon experiences of whose possible existence she never dreamed, and which are even more disastrous to her than those that befell the Sleeping Beauty.

Boys and girls as they grow will learn the ins and outs of this wicked world. If their parents do not give them this knowledge somebody else will, and the manner in which this information is given is in all moral respects vastly more important than the matter. The parent may instruct the child in everything it should know, satisfy its curiosity within proper limits, and thus preoccupy the ground that would otherwise be sown by chance cultivators more with the tares of vice than with the wheat of knowledge.

It is simply astonishing how soon young children pick up slang words, vile words, profane words, and attach to them meaning. Objectionable words and phrases seem armed with hooked burrs and cling tenaciously to the mind they catch hold of. It is equally surprising how instinctively they conceal all this knowledge from their parents. It is not possible for the mother to cultivate too great intimacy with her child. She should have the juvenile heart spread out before her as a mirror, reflecting every thought, every feeling, every passion of the child. Thus she will be able judiciously to administer antidotes to vice and build up safeguards to virtue. When there is a perfect understanding between parents and children; when the daughter feels that she can carry every thought and desire to her mother, and the son is in full sympathy and counsel with his father, there is little danger that the happiness of Christian parents will be wrecked by the profligacy of their children, little danger that the children will wander far from approved lines of conduct.—New York Christian Advocate.

PATIENT BELIEVING.—The trouble with most is, we want to see our path to the end before we take the first step. We want to know, before we start how we are to come out. But this is not God's way. A man who is traveling in a dark night on a country road does not have the whole way lighted at once by the lantern he carries. It shows him only one step; but as he takes that the lantern is borne forward, and another step is lighted, and then another and another, until, in the end, the whole way has been illuminated, and he is safe at his destination. God's Word, as a guiding light, is a lamp unto our feet, not a sun flooding a hemisphere. In the darkest night it will always show us the next step; then, when we have taken that, it will show us another; and thus on, till it brings us out into the full clear sunlight of the coming day. We need to learn well the lesson of patience if we would have God guide us." Now we understand what the Apostle meant when he said, "Be patient, brethren."

THE SIN OF SELF-CONFIDENCE.—The secret of the failure of more than one young convert—yes, and of many a young minister, too—has been overweening self-confidence. "He that trusteth his own heart is a fool." To every beginner in the Christian life we would say, you can not trust yourself too little, and you can not trust Jesus Christ too much! In fact, the real conflict with you will be just this: "Shall I trust myself or my Lord and Savior?" Your soul has no soul-lifting power, any more than your body has to lift itself by grasping at the straps of your boots. You can no more find your way to heaven without Christ than you can find your way through the Mammoth Cave without a guide or a torch. Let poor Peter in Pilate's court-yard show you what a poor figure a boastful Christian cuts when he relies on his own strength.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

Food for Children.

"She is such a dainty little thing, I don't believe she'll eat it," said a mother, as a plate of roast beef cut in bits and mashed potato was placed before her child.

"She is such a dainty little thing!" echoed a female friend, who sat near. So a piece of pound-cake and of rich pastry was provided for the "dainty little thing," of which she made her dinner.

This was at an open-air picnic, or camp meeting, rather, where everybody has, or ought to have, a wholesome and sharp appetite, both for spiritual and physical ailment. An hour after this occurrence, as we sat under the sermon, a brisk crackling in the rear caused us to look behind for a moment, and there sat the "dainty little thing" devouring candy at a rate that ought to give dyspepsia to an ostrich, and we wondered if that mother did really possess good common sense. No, we didn't wonder; we were certain that she did not.

For the first years of a child's life it does nothing but sleep, eat, play and grow. The very law of growth and assimilation gives it a sharp craving for ailment, and the craving is fed by sound sleep and constant activity. If its digestive organs have not been tampered with by irregular and improper food, or bewitched by that abomination, "soothing syrup," it will have a normal appetite, and crave only nutritious and simple food. One can tell properly fed children by a glance at their teeth as quickly as a jockey can tell the age of a horse by his teeth. A shining row of unstained pearls in a juvenile mouth is quick witness to the intelligence and wisdom of the mother; it speaks of wholesome and regular food, of early and long sleep, of sound and easy digestion.

Cake, pie, candy, sweetmeats are not food for children any more than coffee, tea, pickles, pepper, horse-radish and tobacco are food for grown people. Our future Anakim will not come from luxurious nurseries, groaning tables, and pampered households. They are running around out-of-doors in plain clothes; they eat plain food; they are not afraid of sunshine or of shower, of winter snows or summer heats, for their parents protect their bodies against the inclemencies of the weather, and inure them to exposure. With the birds they go to sleep, and with the birds awake. Thus living according to natural laws, they are laying up a fund of health and vitality from which to draw when the "twelve labors" are given them to accomplish.—New York Christian Advocate.

PICKING UP.—One of the time-consuming cares of every housekeeper may be described under the general head of picking up. She picks up after her husband, after her girls, after the babies in the nursery. The latter strew the nursery floor with their blocks, toys and picture books: about one baby in a hundred being taught to put its little properties away when done with them, while the other ninety-nine are diligently instructed at an early age in the art of being waited upon by their elders. Girls come in from their pleasant excursions here and there, flushed, dimpled, sweet as the rose that laughs in the hedge; but, sweet as they look, they are thoughtless beyond belief in the matter of making work for their mothers. Doubtless their intention is to carry their things to the proper places themselves, after a period of rest; but she who procrastinates in such an affair is lost. In putting away one's out-door clothing, one's letters, one's books, it is the first moment of decision which counts—the primary indecision which is fatal. What the young person lazily or thoughtlessly imposes on somebody who is older, and by reason of her added years less able to bear the strain, may be just the traditional straw, beyond which strength and vigor will endure no more.

For the good man of the house we have always the most elastic toleration; yet we think that too often he binds a burden on the shoulders of his wife, which frets her unwarrantably, though she makes no sign of complaint. "My husband's progress through the house," said a matron recently, "is marked by a litter of hats, coats, slippers, newspapers, pamphlets, books, boots, corkscrews, inkstands, collars, handkerchiefs," etc. He is forever saying, "Dear, do you remember where you put such or such a thing of mine?" and wondering why his wife has so inconvenient a habit of clearing things up.

It needs only a glance to show that, if everybody were of one mind about putting articles at once where they belong, picking up would be reduced to a minimum, and one labor of the house-wife greatly simplified.—The Home Maker.

MANNERS OF CHILDREN.—One of the serious mistakes made by mothers in training their children is in supposing that careful habits can be cultivated in careless surroundings. A ragged or worn carpet, so little valued by the mother that grease or ink spots can be left on it without causing comment, may become a moral calamity. Tying the child up in a bib and giving it the liberty to spill its food when eating, is responsible for bad table habits in the men and women whom we meet. A child who is made to eat its food carefully, in a room where the furnishings are respected, where a penalty will follow carelessness, naturally acquires careful, refined manners. Many a mother spends more time repairing damages—the results of careless habits, due largely to the furnishings in the dining-room, than she would need to spend in setting a table carefully and keeping the room in order, so that its order and neatness commanded the respect of the children. The ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure in the training of children, and it is a pity that the ounce of prevention is not administered in the infinitesimal doses necessary in early childhood, rather than in the radical doses necessary to overcome neglect in matters that are never minor—for manners and habits mark the man. A man may be a moral man and eat with his knife; but he would be a more valuable man in the community if he recognized the uses for which the knife was designed and applied it only to those uses.—Christian Union.

RECREATION.—One of the busiest of men is and has been Mr. Gladstone; he tells us how he was able to work so hard; because he believed "that change of labor is to a great extent the healthiest form of recreation." He would drop political studies for those of Greek and both for those of theology; and so in good health this grand old man stands to-day as one of the great defenders of the Christian religion both as to doctrine and life.

Our American climate is more exciting than that of England, and so our busy professional men of all kinds may need not only change of work, but change of locality as well. Those busy men and women, privileged to take holiday this summer, may enter upon it, and we hope will enter upon it with thankfulness to God. But by all means let them take their religion with them.—Southern Churchman.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE USELESS TASK.

When Hercules was walking out one day,
He met a trifling object on his way;
It seemed at first quite lamb-like in its guise,
But when he struck it, lo! it grew in size.

Then, thinking he could soon take down its pride,
His stalwart arms more heavy blows supplied;
The more he gave, the heavier they fell,
The more this object seemed to swell.

To such a bulk the monster soon arose,
It blocked his way and overmatched his blows.
Not knowing what would happen, and much vexed,
The champion dropped his club and stood perplexed.

At length Minerva dawned upon his sight,
And told him he should now give up the fight;
"Save all your wrath and vigorous strength," said she,
"For Strife is this strange object which you see

"Let it alone and it will quickly die,
But blows and anger lift it to the sky."

MORAL.

Since Strife could foil the mightiest mortal thus,
If we provoke it, it will master us.

Children's Scholarship in Millsaps College.

MR. EDITOR: I have read in the ADVOCATE a great deal about Millsaps College, and wish that the children could help in building it up. I propose that the little boys and girls in Mississippi try to raise $1,000, to be called the "Children's Scholarship in Millsaps College." I have sold scuppernongs, and made one dollar, which I send for that scholarship. Now, can't each little boy and girl in the State send one dollar for this good cause? Won't you, Mr. Editor, open a column in the children's department, and get all the young folks to help raise this money? What do the little readers of the ADVOCATE say? Send your names to Dr. Carter, and your names and money to Bro. A. F. Watkins, the agent, at Jackson, Miss.

Your friend, H. OTIS WHITE.
Vaneleave, Miss.

Betting and Gambling.

[The Rev. Charles Kingsley on a certain occasion wrote a letter to a public school boy in England, which was afterward printed in tract form and widely circulated. America needs just such stirring words for our youth.]

My Dearest Boy: There is a matter which gave me much uneasiness when you mentioned it. You said you had put into some lottery for the Derby, and had hedged to make safe.

Now, all that is bad, bad, nothing but bad. Of all habits, gambling is the one I hate most and have avoided most. Of all habits, it grows most on eager minds. Success and loss alike make it grow. Of all habits, however much civilized men may give way to it, it is one of the most intrinsically savage. Historically, it has been the peace excitement of the lowest brutes in human form for ages past. Morally, it is unchivalrous and non-Christian.

1. It gains money by the lowest and most unjust means, for it takes money out of your neighbor's pocket without giving him anything in return.

2. It tempts you to use what you fancy your superior knowledge of a horse's merits—or any thing else—to your neighbor's harm.

If you know better than your neighbor, you are bound to give him your advice. Instead, you conceal your knowledge to win from his ignorance; hence come all sorts of concealments, dodges, deceits—I say the devil is the only father of it.

I hope you have not won—I should not be sorry for you to lose. If you have won, I shall not congratulate you. If you wish to please me, you will give back to its lawful owners the money you have won. As you had put in, you could not in honor draw back till after the event. Now you can give back your money, saying you understand that the head master and I disapprove of such things, and so gain a very great moral influence.

Recollect always that the stock argument is worthless. It is this: "My friend would win from me if he could, therefore I have an equal right to win from him." Nonsense. The same argument would prove that I have a right to maim or kill a man, if only I give him leave to maim or kill me, if he can, and will.

I have spoken my mind, once and for all, on a matter on which I have held the same views for more than twenty years, and trust in God you will not forget my words in after life. I have seen many a good fellow ruined by finding himself one day short of money and trying to get a little by play or betting—and then the Lord have mercy on his simple soul, for simple it will not long remain.

Mind, I am not the least angry with you. Betting is the way of the world. So are all the seven deadly sins, under certain rules and pretty names; but to the devil they lead, if indulged in, in spite of the wise world and its ways. Your loving friend, C. KINGSLEY.

SCHOOL BLUNDERS.—A teacher in a public school gave out a list of words to be defined and put in sentences. Among them was the word "chasm." A little girl looked in the dictionary, and, not being quite satisfied, inquired if "chasm" meant "gap."

The teacher absently replied, "Yes," but was astonished when she presented her paper with this sentence: "When I am sleepy, I always chasm."

But this is hardly equal to another teacher's experience in a little district school some years ago. She gave out words for analysis. "Bank-note" was one of them, and the teacher's astonishment may be imagined when one young lady brought the following unique analysis:

"Bank-note is a compound primitive word, composed of 'bank' and 'note.' 'Bank' is a simple word, meaning the side of a stream; 'note,' to set down. 'Bank-note,' to set down by the side of a stream."—Vineland Independent.

ROSALIE'S PRAYER.—Rosalie, after saying her prayers at evening, kneeling beside her little bed, always murmured after her devout little "amen" some soft words whose meaning her aunt could not catch.

One evening she questioned the child:

"Rosalie, what is it that you say every night after you have finished your prayers?"

"Aunty," said Rosalie, solemnly, "I just say, 'Dear Lord, this is Rosalie Pittman praying now.' You see so many little girls pray at just this same time, and I thought I'd best say which was me."—Wide Awake.

OFFICIAL FOOD TESTS.

THE UNITED STATES AND CANADIAN GOVERNMENTS ANALYZE THE BAKING POWDERS.

COMPARATIVE STRENGTH AND PURITY OF THE DIFFERENT BRANDS OFFICIALLY DETERMINED.

PROF. HAINES, CONSULTING CHEMIST OF THE CHICAGO BOARD OF HEALTH, GIVES HIS OPINION.

(From Chicago Tribune.)

The public is always responsive to suggestions about the food it eats. Great interest has been taken in the investigations made by the United States and Canadian governments and by the different Boards of Health to show the purity or impurity of milk, baking powders, spices, and other articles of daily use in the culinary department of our households.

Just now the subject of baking power is claiming public attention. We all desire pure and wholesome bread, and this can not be had with the use of impure or poisonous baking powder. There can be no longer any question that all the cheaper, lower grades of baking powders contain either alum, lime, or phosphalic acid.

The official analyses by the United States and Canadian governments have, therefore, been studied with interest and have pretty clearly established the facts upon this subject. The United States government report gives the names of eighteen well-known powders, some of them advertised as pure cream of tartar baking powders, that contain alum.

The report shows that the Royal baking powder was found the highest in leavening strength, evolving 160.6 cubic inches of gas per single ounce of powder. There were eight other brands of cream of tartar powders tested, and their average strength was 111.5 cubic inches of gas per ounce of powder.

The Canadian government investigations were of a still larger number of powders. The Royal baking powder was here also shown the purest and highest in strength, containing 129.32 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder. Nine other cream of tartar powders were tested, their average strength being reported to be 89 cubic inches of gas per ounce.

These figures are very instructive to the practical housekeeper. They indicate that the Royal baking powder goes more than 33 per cent. further in use than the others, or is one-third more economical. Still more important than this, however, they prove this popular article has been brought to the highest degree of purity—for to its superlative purity this superiority in strength is due—and consequently that by its use we may be insured the purest and most wholesome food.

The powders of lower strength are found to leave large amounts of inert matters in the food. This fact is emphasized by the report of the Ohio State Food Commissioner, who, while finding the Royal practically pure, found no other powder to contain less than 10 per cent. of inert or foreign matters.

The public interest in this question has likewise caused to be made investigations by our local authorities. Prof. W. S. Haines, of Rush Medical College, consulting chemist of the Chicago Board of Health, has found results similar to those reported by the national and Canadian authorities. Dr. Haines says:

RUSH MEDICAL COLLEGE, CHICAGO, Ill.

I have recently obtained samples of the chief baking powders in the market, and have subjected them to careful chemical examination to determine their purity, wholesomeness, and leavening power. As the result of my tests I find the Royal baking powder superior to all the others in every respect. It is entirely free from all adulteration and unwholesome impurity, and in baking it gives off a greater volume of leavening gas than any other powder. It is, therefore, not only the purest, but also the strongest powder with which I am acquainted.

WALTER S. HAINES, M. D.,
Consulting Chemist, Chicago Board of Health.

The statistics show that there is used in the manufacture of the Royal baking powder more than half of all the cream of tartar consumed in the United States for all purposes. The wonderful sale thus indicated for the Royal baking powder—greater than that of all other baking powders combined—is perhaps even a higher evidence than that already quoted of the superiority of this article, and of its indispensableness to modern cookery.

REST FOR WOMEN.—No woman can rest thoroughly in her own home with her work ever before her eyes. Involuntarily she carries the details in her mind, and is in consequence nearly as tired as if she had actually done the work. Let her go away to rest, even to some place less comfortable than home, where she can join in a dinner she did not cook, sleep in a bed she did not make, and forget her weariness in other people's cares and pleasures. Thousands of bottles of patent medicine are swallowed annually by women who would much better have spent the same money in change of scene. To get away from herself is the desire of the nervous, tired-out woman. To see how other people live suggests new ways of doing things and makes one contented with much that before seemed irksome.—Selected.

PREACHING AND PRACTICING.—That was plain and noble testimony that the young man is reported to have given to the examining committee of our church. "Under whose preaching was you converted?" they asked. "Under nobody's preaching," was the reply; "I was converted under my mother's practicing." Gracious tribute was that to parental example! And perhaps there was little talking in it all, little urging to duty and exhorting to obedience. The temperature of the mother's life was so sweet and salubrious that it woke and matured the seed of grace that had been dropped into the heart and it sprang up spontaneously.—Dr. A. J. Gordon.

One of the best things that parents can give their children is a love of nature, based upon a real knowledge of some of its wonders. The sight, the other day, of a company of young people gathering ferns and searching for new varieties of plants was much more pleasing than one that lingers in memory of a group of boys and girls spending the days at a beautiful resort among the mountains, playing cards and dancing, and reading novels between whiles. One fancies that it would not be easy for some people to tell what they go into the country for; certainly they do nothing different there from what they did in the city. A little knowledge of nature, inspiring love of its study, might do something to change this.—Watchman.

SCIENTIFIC.

A New Theory of La Grippe.

The unaccountable nature of the influenza commonly known as the grippe has invited the theories of all sorts and conditions of men, not to say of doctors; but amongst all no one is, perhaps, so well calculated to commend itself to confidence as that of Sir Morell Mackenzie, M. D., who, in a paper in the June Fortnightly, asserts that in his opinion "the riddle of influenza is poisoned nerves," and from this hypothesis "the bewildering diversity of symptoms becomes intelligible, if we regard them as the results of disordered nervous action." Dr. Mackenzie compares it to the extraordinary disturbance in telegraphic systems produced by a thunderstorm, and says this is nothing "compared with the freaks played by the living conductors in the human body, if anything throws the governing centers out of gear."

Now, the theory of "poisoned nerves" is one that explains the almost infinite variety of attacks and curious freaks that mark the disease. No two persons, it is safe to say, have ever experienced precisely the same symptoms, and if it is a nervous disturbance, this is the natural result. Dr. Mackenzie regards the epidemic as falling under three general types, each of which includes many varieties; these are the catarrhal, the digestive, and the nervous. "Influenza," he says, "is the very Proteus of diseases, a malady which assumes so many forms that it seems to be not one, but an epitome of all diseases. And its symptomology includes almost everything, from a cold in the head to inflammation of the brain. . . . It is really an acute specific fever, running a definite course like measles or scarlatina. . . . It is a disease with that superficial complexity of aspect which made Mrs. Carlyle playfully suggest that the doctors had agreed to call half a dozen different diseases by one name in order to simplify treatment."

Dr. Mackenzie adds that under all its disguises, he believes the disease to be perfectly simple; that the profound impression made on the nervous system by the poison explains nearly all the after effects of the malady, and especially that curious loss of vital energy which is so disproportionately great in comparison with the disease itself. The cause Dr. Mackenzie believes to be a living germ, air borne, but of what nature is not yet, he believes, established.—Scientific American.

EATING BEFORE SLEEP.—Some persons, though not actually sick, keep below par in strength and general tone, and I am of the opinion that fasting during the long interval between supper and breakfast, and especially the complete emptiness of the stomach during sleep, adds greatly to the amount of emaciation, sleeplessness and general weakness we so often meet. Physiology teaches that in the body there is a perpetual disintegration of tissue, sleeping or waking; it is, therefore, logical to believe that the supply of nourishment should be somewhat continuous. As bodily exercise is suspended during sleep, with wear and tear correspondingly diminished, while digestion, assimilation and nutritive activity continue as usual, the food furnished during this period adds more than is destroyed, and increased weight and improved general vigor are the result.

All beings except man are governed by natural instinct, and every being with a stomach, except man, eats before sleep, and even the human infant, guided by the same instinct, drinks frequently day and night, and if its stomach is empty for any prolonged period it cries long and loud. Digestion requires no interval of rest, and if the amount of food during the twenty-four hours is, in quantity and quality, not beyond the physiological limit, it makes no hurtful difference to the stomach how few or how short are the intervals between eating, but it does make a vast difference in the weak and emaciated one's welfare to have a modicum of food in the stomach during sleep, that, instead of being consumed by bodily action, it may during the interval improve the lowered system.

I am fully satisfied that were the weakly, the emaciated and the sleepless to nightly take a light lunch or meal of simple, nutritious food before going to bed for a prolonged period, nine in ten of them would be thereby lifted into a better standard of health; on the contrary, persons that are too stout or plethoric should follow an opposite course.—New York Medical Journal.

MUSICAL SANDS.—The phenomenon of musical sands, which has only attracted scientific attention during the last few years, is found to be very common. Drs. H. C. Bolton and A. A. Julien, who have given especial attention to the subject, have now collected 610 samples of such sands from different parts of the world, while reports from 85 beaches in the United States have shown them that 65 are famous for musical sands. To the eye a patch of this sand is like any other, yet a blind man who is deaf and dumb can easily distinguish it by a distinct vibration, or tickling sensation, communicated to hands or feet. From about 500 samples examined, it appears that the sounds—which are produced by friction and vary in pitch with the amount of sand acted upon—do not depend upon a particular variety of sand, but upon a condition into which the sand gets. Rolled in a ring, one specimen of musical sand gave a whoop-like sound audible for about 420 feet. Yet this sand—unless bottled—lost its power in a few hours after being taken from the beach, and also became soundless on the slightest admixture of fine powder or of moisture.

HOW TO SEE THE WIND.—Take a polished metal surface of two feet or more, with a straight edge; a large hand-saw will answer the purpose. Take a windy day for the experiment, whether hot or cold, clear or cloudy, only let it not be in murky, rainy weather. Hold your metallic surface at right angles to the direction of the wind. If the wind is north, hold your surface east, but instead of holding it vertical, incline it forty-two degrees to the horizon, so that the wind striking, glances and flows over the edges as the water flows over a dam. Now sight carefully along the edge some minutes at a sharply defined object, and you will see the wind pouring over the edge in graceful curves. Make your observations carefully and you will hardly ever fail in the experiment. The results are even better if the sun is obscured.—Woman's Journal.

CREOSOTE AS A TIMBER PRESERVATIVE.—An ordinary uncreosoted telegraph pole, according to Mr. W. H. Preece, of the British Post-office, lasts about 7 years, whereas creosoted poles have continued sound after 35 years of service. The life of uncreosoted sleepers on the Great Western railway has been found to be 5 years; that of creosoted sleepers at least 8 or 10 years, and often double that time. In warm waters timber is quickly destroyed by marine insects, and on parts of the United States coasts uncreosoted piles last only 2 years, though the creosoted may be depended upon for 5 or 6 years. The cost of creosoting does not exceed 25 per cent. of the original value of the timber.

The apparent total disappearance of Jupiter's satellites occurs every 21 years, and was first recorded by Galileo in 1611. The phenomenon was observed by Flammarion, the eminent French astronomer, on July 15, when three of the moons were passing over the disc and one was behind the planet.

OBITUARIES.

BROWN—Mrs. MATTIE BROWN (nee Bush) entered into rest at her home in Centreville, La. on Sunday morning, Aug. 23, 1891, at 5:15 o'clock. She was born at Williamsport, Ind., Feb. 3, 1859. She was married to W. T. Brown on Feb. 13, 1878. She was converted and joined the Methodist Church at Franklin in 1876.

Queenly in form and feature, she was queenly in character. In her own estimation she was the least of his disciples; but in the regard of others she was among the chief. She improved her talents to their utmost. She seemed to watch always for her Lord. The precious ointment of her soul's adoration she gave to Jesus continually.

The writer, who was her friend and pastor for years, never knew a more perfectly formed Christian character. She was a model wife and sister. I can recall no censurable word nor unchristlike act in all these years. She was blessed with more than ordinary, practical common sense.

Her home duties were performed with so much loving and wifely tact, it was a means of grace to spend the day with her. The home life was beautiful. Centreville to her was Bethany, and Jesus had an abiding-place in her house. This home was the crystallization of her own beautiful soul. Whatever her brain conceived that her hand performed, as an expression of love for her husband and child. In her works of art and other memorials of her genius she will long be cherished by her friends.

We shall miss her in the church, for one of its most beautiful and polished corner columns has fallen. The town will feel her loss most keenly, for she stood among its choice spirits. Age will miss her inspiration, and youth her motherly care. The preacher will miss her loving ministrations and her home. But, most of all, will her husband miss her—the perfect wife. This loneliness and desolateness can only find alleviation in the fact that not even death can rob his memory of those thirteen perfect years of wedded bliss. Blest husband and child, sad loved ones, inheritors of so transcendent a life—an Eden of blossom and fragrance in which you now may live!

The awful mystery of her taking away from us has its relief and compensation partially, at least, in the thought that God must have needed her for some great enterprise in heaven. Yes, those willing hands, that tireless brain, that restless spirit, that self-ignoring disposition, that great, affectionate nature—all, all have found ample scope in heavenly activities, where even toil is rest.

Could we have heard her Savior's plaudit on her ascension, I have no doubt whatever we should have heard him say, "Well done!" Glory be to God I ever knew her! Hallelujah! Farewell and hail! ALFRED E. CLAY.

HOWELL—PIERRE SOULE HOWELL, youngest son of John W. and Bettie Howell, was born March 7, 1872, and died at his home near Carthage, Leake county, Miss., July 26, 1891. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in June last, under the preaching of that godly man, Isaac L. Peebles, who was assisting Bro. Cammack in his protracted meeting, and he lived a consistent Christian life up to the time of his death, leading in family worship.

Pierre was mama's baby boy, and was always ready to lighten the burdens of his mother in every way possible, and was devoted to her almost to idolization.

He had the misfortune to lose a dear brother in February whose lives had been inseparable up to the time of Joe's death, and in seems that God, in his infinite goodness and mercy, preferred not to have them separated long. His life with that of his brothers was one of duty and self-denial to their widowed mother. He was manly and conscientious in his dealing with his fellow-men, and established an enviable character for one so young for integrity in the business relations of life.

The family circle has been broken on this earth; but there are two links in heaven to inspire those remaining in the endeavor to meet them on that peaceful shore where there is no more parting, pain or sorrow, and the chain will be reunited never again to be severed. Yes, "Mother," Joe and Pierre can't come to you, but you can go to them. Joe and Pierre were inseparable on earth, and they are now together again, never to part any more. Blessed thought! UNCLE JOHN.

DAVIS—Died in Lake Providence, La., Monday, Aug. 24, 1891, SARAH ROXANA EPPES, wife of Dr. J. L. Davis, aged fifty-three years. Sister Davis was the child of Methodist parents, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at an early period of life, living a consistent member thereof up to the hour of death. She lived a true life in every sense of the word, evincing that nothing was more repugnant to her feelings than deceit or dissimulation whether in word or deed.

The last years of her life were more or less marked by affliction; yet she was sustained through it all by the presence of her Savior, and ever manifested a quiet resignation to the will of her heavenly Father. Naturally retiring in disposition, there was no room for ostentation, and one had to be intimately acquainted with her to see the inner workings of her spiritual life. She loved her church, and manifested great interest in its prosperity. Her last illness was short and her death almost sudden; yet when admonished by her husband that the hour of her departure was near at hand, she expressed a readiness to go and be with her Savior. Having lived a true life, she died well.

A large crowd of friends and relatives attended appropriate religious services in the Methodist Church, conducted by the writer, and followed her remains to the cemetery. She leaves a devoted husband, one son and four daughters to mourn her death. God help these and other loved ones so to live as to meet her in heaven! R. S. ISBELL.

HOOGE—AUGUST CARL HOOGE was born in Germany in 1873; died Aug. 26, 1891. August was quite a model young man. Just in the beginning of his strong, young life he is called to lay down the cross and wear a crown. Mother and the loved brothers and sisters mourn his loss very much, for he was a Christian and a good brother and son. Friends and relatives all speak kindly of August and endorse his pure and upright life.

But a short time since the father was called away, and now it is one of the boys. May the grace of the Lord sustain the bereaved loved ones and enable them to meet in heaven!

H. BRADFORD.

Obstacles Again.

As Bro. Foster says our obstacles have multiplied, and has a lady to help him, we must, with your permission, say a little more. The brother seems hard of understanding. We have no objection to persons professing the second blessing, or holiness, if they are not exclusive and denunciatory in it. We preach holiness, Bro. Foster, and Christian perfection, too, Sister Collier, and nearly always get happy in the discussion; laugh big and act, as some people call it, undignified. We do not object to perfection; it is not offensive to us. Oh! no; you are mistaken. It is only the noise that some people make about it that we object to. For example: One stands up, Pharisee-like, and declares that he has not sinned in so many months or years, that he is just as pure as Jesus Christ, and at the same time denouncing all others who are not thus "noisy." This has been done, and it can not be denied, and it has not only damaged the cause of "holiness," but the cause of our blessed Lord in general. We have a minister in this parish who modestly claims the "second blessing," but he does not denounce others who do not claim it, but owns them as brethren in Christ. If any of our brethren have more faith and are living nearer to God than we are, which we do not question, we bid them God-speed with all our heart, but please do not exclude us from the narrow path, because we have not yet attained, but are "groaning after perfection." It was this intolerant character that we alluded to in our first article. This was the obstacle. We hope Bro. Foster understands us now, and that we are agreed upon the subject.

H. ARMSTRONG.

Bastrop, La.

[The foregoing ought to satisfy any reasonable man or woman. We are satisfied that it satisfies the majority of our readers, and there is no reason why it should not be "the last word."—EDITOR.]

A Correction Corrected.

I thank Bro. W. B. Hines for correcting some of my data concerning Woodville Methodism. The errors were natural, for in all of the matters to which he refers, except that of Dr. Marvin's coming to Woodville, I got the data from the memories of living persons, none of whom could be very positive as to dates and the minutiæ of detail.

In the matter of Dr. Marvin, Bro. Hines' correction needs correcting. If he will refer to Finney's Life of Marvin (pages 359-362) he will find the matter detailed substantially as I stated it. As I was not writing the story of Marvin, it would have been irrelevant to have detailed his experiences in Price's army and Vicksburg. Dr. Finney, from whom I took my data, got the details from Mrs. Marvin and Dr. W. C. Williams, who assisted Dr. Marvin to leave St. Louis, and who was a most intimate and confidential friend.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

The sixty-odd millions of people of the United States, and an indefinite number from foreign countries, are considering a celebration of the discovery of America. It is not only an age of discovery, but of doubt, and there are people who question whether Columbus really discovered anything, or may not have only followed in the wake of others.

There are some things that may be easily demonstrated, and one of them is that the Louisiana Creole Hair Restorer is the most valuable discovery yet known for putting the hair back in its original condition and remedying the ravages of disease or the effect of neglect.

It contains vegetable ingredients alone, and is free from all caustic compounds which often do the scalp more harm than good. It has a peculiarly refreshing as well as mildly stimulating effect upon the scalp, removing dandruff, opening the pores and stimulating the growth of the roots of the hair.

All such diseases as tetter, salt rheum and even barber's itch yield to it immediately, and there is nothing affecting the hair that it will not cure. There is nothing experimental about it, for it has been tested for years, and enjoys a reputation as a restorer second to none. Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatello or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

A disastrous fire occurred in Chicago on Sept. 18, in which five lives were lost.

A fire in New Iberia, La., on Sept. 20, destroyed twenty thousand dollars' worth of property.

The city council of San Antonio has passed an ordinance forbidding street car companies from working their employees more than twelve hours a day.

The Hotel Natchez, a handsome new structure just completed at a cost of over $100,000, threw open its doors to the public on Sept. 21. It is four stories high.

After a hard fight the change in the text-books in the Dallas public schools was adopted by the city council. There was much opposition to the change from the people.

The Treasury Department has been informed that attempts will be made on the Mexican frontier to smuggle large quantities of lottery tickets into this country through the mails.

Roswell P. Flower has been nominated by the Democratic Convention for governor of New York. J. Sloan Fassett has been nominated for the same office by the New York Republicans.

The Behring Sea agreement with England has been violated by an American company exceeding the limit of its catch of 7,500 skins. The matter is regarded as important, and may lead to the agreement being declared inoperative.

Excitement has broken out among the negroes in Arkansas, which bids fair to rival the Oklahoma fever. Large parties of colored people have left for the Indian Territory, where they go to make settlement on the reservation just opened.

The proclamation opening to settlement the homestead entry to the newly ceded lands of the Sacs and Foxes, Iowa and Pottawattomie Indians in the eastern part of Oklahoma was signed by the President, and the lands were entered on the twenty-second instant, at noon.

Prof. Melbourne, of Australia, has entered into a contract to make rain at Good Land, Sherman county, Kansas, Sept. 26. He is to receive $500 for bringing rainfall over a territory within a radius of fifty miles of Good Land. Good Land is within fifty miles of the Colorado line. The results of Melbourne's experiments in Cheyenne, Wyo., are said to have been very successful.

The comptroller of currency has been informed of the suspension of the Rio Grande National Bank, of Laredo, Tex., of its being placed in the hands of a bank examiner. The failure of the bank is attributed to lack of business and to other causes. The depositors will be paid in full, and, judging from the information now with the comptroller, all the bank's obligations will be met in time.

The extra session of the Tennessee General Assembly has adjourned after a twenty days' sitting. Outside of the passage of the apportionment bill, by which the Democrats gain several additional seats in both houses, and the adoption of some local laws, the session has not been fruitful of important results. The convict lease system and the question of arranging for the building of a new penitentiary were left in statu quo.

FOREIGN.

Alexander Jacques, the French faster, now in London, has completed a fifty-two days' fast.

In an explosion in a colliery near Charleroi, Belgium, on Sept. 19, thirty lives were lost.

A bull fight in Marseilles, France, on Sept. 20, ended in a riot between the spectators and bull fighters.

Ex-President Balmaceda, of Chili, unable to bear the humiliation of his recent defeat and overthrow, committed suicide at Santiago, Sept. 19.

The Mexican government has declared the concession granted for the colonization of negroes in Mexico forfeited on account of non-compliance with the contract.

The London and Westminster Bank, Limited, in London, was robbed of $1,000,000. The amount is said to have been stolen while the bank officials were in another apartment.

The Standard Oil Company has bought out a rival concern which is lately organized in Stettin, Germany, and is erecting large tanks and other structures for use in its business.

The Russian minister to Persia has been instructed to arrange a trade treaty between Russia and Persia. The object is to bring about the exclusion from the Persian market of English goods.

The first party of American pilgrims, numbering sixty persons, under Missionary Braun, of Minnesota, arrived at Treves, Germany, on Sept. 17, to view the holy coat. The newspapers are beginning to publish reports of cures through the touching of the holy garment.

The term of the Austro-German treaty of commerce with Italy has been fixed at six years, at the end of which time the Zollverein convention will be definitely concluded. Negotiations will be resumed with Spain with a view of obtaining the benefits of the most favored nation clause to extend to the Spanish Antilles.

The number of people who perished in the floods in the province of Toledo, Spain, is now placed at 2,300, and the number of lives lost in other localities at 500. In addition many were injured. It is estimated that the total loss from the floods, including the destruction of crops, damage to property, the railways' loss of traffic, etc., will amount to little short of one million pounds.

Large purchases of wheat and other grain have been lately made by numerous French agents directly of the farmers in the provinces of Rome and Puglie at whatever prices the farmers have demanded, with the result of rapidly increasing prices. It is thought that the purchases were on account of the French government. As the grain crop of Italy is no more than sufficient for home consumption, exporting grain now implies the necessity of future imports at higher prices.

Hall's Hair Renewer enjoys the confidence and patronage of people all over the civilized world who use it to restore and keep the hair a natural color.

Have you a Pittsburgh, Rochester, Duplex, or a Student Lamp?

Do they work satisfactorily?

Do your Lamp Chimneys break? You get the wrong sort!

The RIGHT ones are the "PEARL GLASS," made by Geo. A. Macbeth & Co., Pittsburgh, makers of the celebrated "Pearl-top" lamp chimney, which have given universal satisfaction.

Dear Sir: I took your Medical Discovery for one year for Scrofula on my knee. When I began I was told by the Doctors my limb would have to be amputated, but it cured me. Well, that was 13 years ago and no signs of it since. I thought you and the world ought to know it.

Yours very truly,

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Rayne, La., Sept. 21: "Yesterday afternoon we opened up a new appointment at Dupon, about eight miles east of Rayne. Large crowd, and two accessions to the church. About half of the congregation were Creoles."

Rev. S. J. Bass, Houston, Miss., Sept. 2: "We have just closed a meeting at Central Grove Baptist Church, of eight days' duration, resulting in seventeen accessions to our church, and four to the Baptist. Some others claimed conversion, but did not join the church. I don't count much on a man till we get the bridle on him. Bro. H. R. Tucker has a fine meeting in progress here. We are expecting great things of the Lord."

Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, Jonestown, Miss., Sept. 21: "The meeting that we have looked forward to, and have prayed so earnestly for, has come and gone. No, it is not gone, for the rich blessing which came from the presence of the Lord still cheers and comforts our hearts. The church is rejoicing in deeper work of grace in their own hearts, and in the conversion of fourteen souls, nine of whom were received into the church on profession of faith. Bro. T. B. Hargrove and his wife were with us, but 'the best of all is, God was with us.'"

Rev. R. S. Collier, Bellevue, La., Sept. 21: "While we have been much hindered by sickness, yet there has been some progress on Valley circuit. We have held two protracted meetings, in each of which the Spirit's presence was manifest. The church at both places was quickened and revived, backsliders were reclaimed, and some of the church were converted; and while there were no additions to the church, the meetings were times of gracious visitation. My meetings at two other points were deferred on account of the severe illness of my wife. She is just free from fever after twenty-six days of typhoid-malarial fever."

Rev. W. T. Barnett, Wall Hill, Miss., Sept. 21: "The revival season is over with us on Chulahoma circuit; therefore, I will send you a report. We have had very good revivals all over the work. Eleven conversions and ten additions to our church. We were blessed with the efficient service of the Revs. J. H. Shumaker, C. H. Owen, T. J. Newell, W. J. O'Bryant, and J. J. Brooks; also our beloved brother, J. L. Brooks, was with us in the day-time at Wall Hill, and aided us much in our services. It was my very great privilege to listen to him preach one hour and fifteen minutes, last week, at his son's meeting on Holly Springs circuit."

J. A. Leggitt, Floyd circuit, Louisiana Conference, Sept. 18: "Would you like to hear a little news from Floyd circuit? The Annual Conference last Winter supposed, and rightly so, that our circuit had about gone up the spout, and they sent us a little piney-woods preacher, I suppose, to knock round and try and hold the old members together. Well, we received him cordially, and he went to work, and, by the grace of God, he has done a wonderful work. I think from the last that I have heard from the upper part of the circuit, that our little pine knot has taken, altogether, into the church about 125 members, about 25 being old members that have come back to the church. We ascribe all praise to God for his wonderful love."

Rev. R. H. Barr, P. C., Hillsboro, Miss., Sept. 19: "We have just closed a meeting at this place, with glorious results. The meeting was good from the first. On Wednesday night the audience was held awe-stricken with the magnitude of God's power. There were seven accessions to the church—two by transfer. Bro. J. M. Morse, from Newton, assisted me. He preached with power; his presence was impressive. When he arose to introduce the services, his presence commanded respect, and put the audience upon its best behavior. Bro. Morse is a godly man, and will go to the front if he lives. The people of Hillsboro all join in bidding him God-speed in the glorious cause that he is defending. Bros. Cammack and Enochs gave us a pleasant call during the meeting. Praise God for his blessings. Pray for us."

Rev. J. A. Braswell, P. C., Coldwater, Miss., Sept. 18: "I have just closed my last meeting. We have had great revivals at each appointment. There have been sixty-five conversions, fifty accessions, with others to follow. The faithful were blessed, backsliders reclaimed, family altars established, and children baptized. I was assisted by Bro. H. C. Manghan, a local preacher from the Pleasant Grove circuit. He did us good work. I was also assisted by Bro. B. P. Jaco, of Panola circuit, in one of my meetings held near his old home. He did us good preaching, and everybody was glad to meet him. Bro. Miller, the old pastor of this work, arrived home from West Texas just in time to be with us in our last meeting. His help was greatly appreciated by both the pastor and people. We have taken steps toward building a church at one of my appointments, Cypress Corner, a beautiful place with two small stores and a postoffice. I hope to be able to make a full report at Conference. Pray for us."

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Hinton, Ala., Sept. 16: "We have just finished a meeting at New Home Church, near this postoffice, aided by Bro. H. S. Gunn, our faithful local helper. The meeting was a success; sinners wept and Christians rejoiced. Additions were made to the church, and Bro. Gunn baptized five infants. On account of a community wrangle, one of my churches was burned the night before I went there to fill the first appointment. Bro. N. B. Harmon, of Meridian, was with us preaching there for several days last month, and did much to harmonize the two Holiness, the Baptist, the Protestant, and our own elements. Work was done for the idea of sanctification in organization. In the Spring great preparations were made at Manassas, on this circuit, for a Joe Jones meeting; but Joe did not meet the engagement. There is much morality, immorality and ignorance to deal with; but the people are kind, and some are willing to help and encourage."

Mrs. J. C. H. McKinney, Anguilla, Miss.: "Our protracted meeting at Sunflower Chapel, on the Sunflower river, began Saturday, Sept. 11. It was also our quarterly meeting occasion. The presiding elder, generally faithful, being providentially hindered from attending, Rev. Ira B. Robertson, assisted by Rev. Pat Henry (Baptist), presided over the meeting, which was well attended, and resulted in much good. One lady professed conversion, and was herself, with her three children, baptized. Two others said they were willing to give up all for Christ. Many hearts were touched, and we were all made to feel that 'twas good to be there.' On the morning of the last day we had class meeting. Honest confession is said to be good for the soul, so I will confess that I have avoided class meetings. Though I have been a member of the church for sixteen years, that was the third class meeting I ever attended. I fear I would not have gone that day if I had been previously warned. I am glad that I did go, for it was, indeed, a spiritual feast. Bro. Robertson made the invitation to speak so pointed that you had to speak or feel that you were denying Christ. And thus the good work goes on. To God be all the praise."

No name, no date, no signature: "Closed a meeting at Wesley Chapel (formerly known as Porter's Chapel) on Thursday, Sept. 17, and a glorious meeting it was. Bro. Hicks M. Ellis was with us, and did the preaching. There were wonderful displays of divine power in our midst. Nothing short of the mighty workings of the Holy Spirit could have united the neighborhood. For some time the community had been rent by feuds, selfishness had dominated, and by some God was not feared, neither man regarded. But, 'bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name.' It makes the soul grow fat to see those who are at enmity have their stony heart broken and their iron will bent by the influence of God's Spirit, and unite again in brotherly love. The whole church was revived and left in a healthful and prosperous condition. Souls were converted, backsliders reclaimed, believers built up in the faith, family altars erected, and some promised to lead in prayer whenever and wherever called upon. 'The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad.' 'Praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men.'"

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C.: "Two meetings held, with good results. Bro. N. J. Roberts was with me at Boatner School-house. We had eight accessions; four by profession. While in that neighborhood I found out that Campbellites don't like the name of Campbellites. I called them that anyway. They prefer being called Christians. I was never in my life fond of nicknaming anything or anybody; therefore, I call them Campbellites. Our next were held at Rose Hill, where we organized a church with twenty-nine members. This victory won for Christ made me think of the time when the women came out of all the cities of Israel, saying to each other: 'Saul has slain his thousands, but David his ten thousands. . . From that time on Saul always eyed David.' The people of other denominations are casting an eye of jealousy at me. They are saying: 'McAllister has conquered ten, and Shillings twelve, but Woodward has conquered twenty-nine.' We are agitating the question of building a church at Rose Hill. Bro. John May has presented the church with an excellent place on which to build the church. Bro. May is a man with a big heart. The following brethren rendered valuable help at Rose Hill: W. W. Simmons, William Powell and N. J. Roberts. If anyone wishes to aid us in building this church, any amount will be thankfully received. My address is Ollo, Miss."

Mrs. Laura L. Chevalier, Vidalia, La., Sept. 22: "The protracted meeting held at this place began last Saturday week, and ended last Sunday night. The Methodist quarterly meeting was held on Saturday and Sunday. This meeting was presided over by Rev. J. H. Callaway, of the Black River circuit. Sacramental services were celebrated on this occasion, and the sermon preached by Rev. Callaway on this subject was one that will be long remembered. The Rev. Lowe delivered several interesting sermons, followed by Rev. Vernon H. Cowsert, both of the gentlemen being Baptist ministers of Natchez, Miss. The Rev. Cowsert's sermons were highly appreciated by a large audience. A great deal of interest was manifested in our young friend and Bro. Lowe, as he has just taken up the cross, and as he shows such an ardent spirit in his work. It was with a feeling of deep regret that the people of Vidalia bid good-by to the noble young Christian brothers, knowing that both had taken such a deep interest in our behalf. The organist on this occasion was Mr. Partridge. The music and singing were deeply felt by all. We were glad to see so many ladies from Natchez, and hope that they will continue to be with us on such occasions. We are glad to state that the Rev. Walking, from Natchez, is assisting us in our work in the church and Sabbath-school."

Rev. H. P. Lewis, Benton, Miss., Sept. 22: "Our protracted meetings, five in all, have been held, three of them with fine results. The following named brethren have rendered valuable services, viz.: W. B. Lewis, of Vicksburg; J. W. Ellison, of McComb City; R. T. Nolen, of Benton; J. D. Crymes, of Bentonia; W. G. Forsythe, of Satartia. Also R. J. Jones, of Yazoo City; Dr. Newell, of Grenada; J. W. McLaurin, of New Orleans; J. G. Galloway, of Bee Lake, together with our faithful presiding elder, D. A. Little, of Jackson, have been here, faithfully presenting the truths of the gospel to our people. So you see we have been favored with good, faithful help from abroad. Our meeting here in Benton closed last Sunday night, the twentieth instant. Bro. Little preached the first sermon. After that Bro. Crymes and Bro. Forsythe did all the preaching. From the first the meeting increased in interest. Some of the services were peculiarly interesting, lasting two hours and thirty minutes. Many new resolutions were formed, new vows made, old ones renewed. Some people do not like propositions during revivals. I suppose the devil does not, either. Bros. Crymes and Forsythe have endeared themselves to our people. Eight persons presented themselves for membership. God bless the people of Benton charge."

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONFERENCE OF LOWER HALF OF MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

There having been no Sunday-school Conference at the Meridian District Conference, it was determined, nevertheless, to carry out the intent of the Discipline relating thereto. For convenience, the district was divided into two parts. According to request made in the ADVOCATE, the pastors, superintendents and delegates of the schools south of Lauderdale county met in Shubuta, Monday, Sept. 21, and proceeded according to the programme prepared by Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E. Dr. C. G. Andrews, of Meridian, had been appointed to lead, and was at his best, as were most of the members to whom it had been allotted to read papers upon the various subjects discussed. Nine preachers, seven superintendents and eight delegates constituted the membership in attendance. There was no representative from Winchester circuit. We suppose that the pastor was in the midst of a protracted meeting, as, we know, was Rev. B. S. Rayner, of whose circuit (Vossburg) T. C. Baggett, of Goodwater, was the sole representative.

The subjects discussed were: "Our Sunday-school System from the General Conference Board down through the Annual, District and Quarterly Conferences to the Pastors and Schools;" "The Objects and Benefits of Children's Day," "The Epworth League," "The Best Devotional Exercises for Opening a School," "Management of a Library," "How to Conduct a Sunday-school." Nearly every member present contributed to the discussions by giving opinion or explaining individual method, and all must have taken away good ideas that will be advantageous in their respective fields of labor among the children. Some of the talks showed much spirit. Especially spirited were the talks of Jesse Byrd, superintendent of State Line school. He gave, as the way to keep young men and women and older ones in the Sunday-school, "Convert them while children."

On Monday evening Dr. Andrews preached forcibly to parents, and Tuesday morning Rev. J. W. Chambers preached to the children, the town schools turning out in a body. The Conference closed with this latter sermon.

The following is a list of the members present by pastoral charges: Enterprise and Stonewall—Rev. J. W. Chambers, Rev. I. F. Hawkins, Mrs. R. Price, Mrs. Wm. King, J. F. Smith; Shubuta circuit—Rev. J. P. Drake, T. A. Ledyard, Jno. McKay; Wayneshoro station—Rev. W. B. Hines, W. S. Davis, J. W. Wetherbee; State Line circuit—Rev. P. H. Howse, Jesse Byrd, J. C. Nobles; Clarke circuit—Rev. L. P. Meador, Rev. J. N. Broadway, A. M. Carmichael, J. A. Carmichael; Manasseh circuit—Rev. H. G. Hawkins, W. J. Norsworthy, Mrs. W. J. Norsworthy, D. R. McLendon; Vossburg circuit—T. C. Baggett.

W. H. Patton, of the Shubuta Baptist Sunday-school, by request, participated in the Monday afternoon discussions.

Thanks of the members for attention are due to the pastor, Bros. Ledyard, Weems and others.

H. G. HAWKINS, Sec.

Rev. N. B. Young, Mt. Carmel circuit, Mississippi Conference: "This work consists of five appointments. This is my second year on this charge. Eighteen years ago, last December, I closed my first term on Mt. Carmel circuit, which lasted two years. Some one called my attention to the fact that I was the only preacher in charge that had ever been sent back to them a second term. Most of the people speak well of pastors that have served them. Methodism, in seventeen years, has grown from one to three charges, by adding a few appointments. Where I preached in a little school-house in the afternoon from Mt. Moriah, near by now stands a neat framed church (Bethel), painted white, and well seated. This is the result of the devotion of Robert N. Thompson and family to the cause of God and Methodism. This church was the first house of worship to be painted in all this part of the country east of Pearl river, and from the one family the church has grown to 125 members. We held a meeting at this church to embrace the third Sunday in July, with good results. The church revived, and thirteen accessions. Bro. J. H. Evans, of Williamsburg circuit, and Bro. Melborne, a local preacher of Providence circuit, rendered efficient assistance; also Bro. Brown, of this circuit. On Saturday before the first Sunday in August, Bro. A. F. Watkins was with us at Mt. Zion, and at Santee on the Sunday following. His preaching was with great acceptability. I have not heard of saint or sinner that was not delighted and charmed with the sermons of Bro. Watkins. We had good meetings at both of these places. Bro. Moore, of Columbia circuit, and Bro. Evans, of Williamsburg, came on Monday at Santee, and the meeting grew better every day until it closed on Wednesday. One of the old officials said it was the best meeting he ever attended. Saturday before the fourth Sunday in August found us at Mt. Moriah Church. Bros. Melborne and Brown assisted here, and Rev. E. H. Mounger came on Monday, held his quarterly meeting—looking after all the interests of the church—and no man ever pleased the people here better in the pulpit than Bro. Mounger. On the fifth Sunday in August we held our meeting at Blountville. Bro. Evans was with us here on Sunday. The meeting here was good. Besides the ministerial brethren that assisted in these meetings, quite a number of laymen took an active part, leading prayer and experience meetings in the church and in the grove. The results are: prayer meeting established, family altars erected, and the cause greatly advanced, and twenty-seven accessions to the church. We are building a new church at Blountville, 30x50, walls 17 feet high; and on the fifth Sunday in November we will begin a two days' meeting and dedicate the house, and organize a church."

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

Bluff Creek Camp Meeting closed last Sunday afternoon. This camp meeting is a new enterprise. A meeting was held on the ground last year under a brush arbor. Now they have a most excellent shelter, or tabernacle, capable of seating about a thousand persons. There are no permanent tents yet upon the ground. Three services were held each day, the people returning home after night service. The grounds and surroundings are well adapted to the purposes of a camp meeting. The neighborhood is thickly settled, and there were probably twelve hundred persons on the ground at several times during the meeting. There were nine or ten itinerant preachers on the ground at various times, and three or four local preachers. We name the following: C. McDonald, P. E.; W. L. C. Hunnicutt, P. Howard, W. D. Dominick, J. Whittington, J. T. Leggett; H. Bradford, P. C.; B. Jones, H. B. Trevilion. There was no special evangelist present; none that claim to be star preachers. No specially selected preachers. Nearly every minister preached, and most of them several times each. There was no effort at display in the preaching, but all was evangelical, and the themes were well chosen. At the opening of the services it was stated by the preacher that the objects of the meeting were, "the conversion of sinners, the sanctification of believers, and the salvation of all." The topics of the first discourse were, "Work and Wages in the Vineyard of the Lord;" of the second, "Holiness, Experimental and Practical." Other subjects of discourse were: "The Coming of Christ to Save Sinners," "The Love of God and the Atonement," "The Sinfulness and Evil of Sin," "Repentance," "Faith," "The Judgment of the Great Day," and "The Preparation Needed to Meet God in Judgment," and "Christian Education."

The meeting was quiet and orderly from the beginning to its close. There was no offensive language from the pulpit. Nothing uncharitable; no abuse or complaint of the members of the church; none went away complaining or dissatisfied. On the contrary, everyone seemed pleased, and most, if not all, were edified. There were between thirty and forty conversions, from seventeen to twenty accessions to the church. A gracious influence seemed to pervade the congregation, and a holy atmosphere to surround the people. It was good to be there, and it called up precious memories of the past. Our thoughts went back to the precious days of early manhood to camp meetings in the neighborhood of Shelbyville, Ky.; to Rifle Point, on the banks of the Mississippi, "where I first saw the light," and to old Bethel, of Wilkinson county, where I was permitted to drink freely of the waters of life. Permit me to say, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good-will to men! B. JONES.

Millsaps College Notes.

The college endowment fund is being steadily, but all too slowly, increased as the Summer gives place to Autumn, and the Conference time draws near.

Columbia, last week, sent up an additional subscription amounting to $30.

A visit to Madison gave opportunity to present the cause of Christian education and secure a subscription of one hundred and forty dollars.

A long ride over Kemper county roads was the cost of a visit to New Hope Camp Ground, where abounding hospitality and Christian zeal more than repay for the labors of the journey. Here $207 was the amount of the collection for the college.

Last Sunday was spent at Union Church, in the pastoral charges of that clear-headed and pure-hearted man of God, Bro. D. G. W. Ellis. The cause was presented, and a subscription amounting to $133 was secured.

During the Summer not many notes, past due, were paid, though at no time did the work of taking up the matured notes cease; but now, as the cotton season opens, and money begins to circulate more freely, this all-important work must receive more and more attention.

This is the most vital part of our work. It is good to give a note, but better to pay it. The collection of these notes is the condition of success, for the endowment fund is the backbone of the whole enterprise.

The notes for 1889 and 1890 ought to be paid with the interest that has accrued. Those for 1891 ought to be paid, and no calculation made to pay the interest and prolong the note. Pay the principal now. The notes for 1892 and later ought, in many cases, be paid now, because it is just as easy, or nearly as easy, to pay both notes now as to wait twelve months longer.

At no time in the history of the institution will there be probably as imperative need for the prompt and self-denying payment of obligations as at this time, when the great enterprise is just rising to its feet.

The payment of the second $25,000 of Major Millsaps' subscription depends upon the raising of the balance of the church's part, and that will depend upon the payment of the notes now in the treasurer's hands.

Let every reader of the ADVOCATE who owes a note make up his mind to cancel that note at once, and let everyone who has not subscribed anything to the college, blush, feel ashamed, and send up his contribution without delay. A. F. WATKINS.

OCTOBER.

October comes across the hill
Like some light ghost, she is so still,
Though her sweet cheeks are rosy;
And through the floating thistle-down
Her trailing brier-tangled gown
Gleams like a crimson posy.

The crickets in the stubble chime;
Lantern flash out at milking time;
The daisy's lost her ruffles;
The wasps the honeyed pippins try;
A film is over the blue sky,
A spell the river muffles.

The golden-rod fades in the sun,
The spider's gauzy veil is spun
Athwart the drooping sedges;
The nuts drop softly from their burrs;
No bird-song the dim silence stirs—
A blight is on the hedges.

But filled with fair content is she,
As if no frost could ever be,
To dim her brown eyes' lustre.
And much she knows of fairy folk
That dance beneath the spreading oak
With twinkling mirth and bluster.

She listens when the dusky eves
Step softly on the fallen leaves,
As if for message cheering.
And it must be that she can hear,
Beyond November grim and drear,
The tect of Christmas nearing.

The Lord's Prayer.—No. 1.

BY REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

God never prays. He has no wants, no being to whom he could address prayer. Man is a sinner and needs forgiveness, and God only has power to forgive sins. Man has necessities which God alone can meet and relieve. Prayer is the necessity and the great privilege of man.

This inspired prayer is called the "Lord's Prayer," because the God-man composed it and taught it to his disciples. It is in every way remarkable. It is laconic, comprehensive, sublime, original. It is a model for all prayer and suited to the needs of all men. It calls attention to the sublimest facts, the Being and the Fatherhood of God; that his name is illustrious, glorious and to be reverenced and hallowed above all other names; that God has a kingdom of righteousness and love, that is coming with ever-increasing light and power; that all the sons of God are to pray for its coming; that the will of God is the rule of life, and the law of all beings, and is to be done on earth as in heaven, cheerfully, promptly and universally. The fatherly goodness and providential care of God are to be relied on, and invoked in giving us our "daily bread." Our weakness and proneness to evil and our need of God's help is to be recognized in keeping us out of temptation and evil.

This divinely composed prayer contains six requests or petitions: 1. "Hallowed be thy name." 2. "Thy kingdom come." 3. "Thy will be done on earth as in heaven." (These are all in reference to God, and come first, as it is seemly, reverent and proper they should. The angels sang first, "Glory to God in the highest;" then, "And on earth peace among men.") 4. "Give us this day our daily bread." 5. "And forgive us our debts as we also have forgiven our debtors." 6. "And bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from the evil one."

We notice that in uttering this prayer, we are not to come as the self-righteous and selfish Pharisee did, saying, "God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are," but we are to come recognizing the brotherhood of men, saying, "Our Father," looking kindly on the things of others, and that we are bound together by the sympathy of a common origin, common needs and common source of help. God is our Father as opposed to Atheism, which denies his existence altogether, saying, "There is no God." He is our Father as opposed to Pantheism, which denies there is any personal God. He has, they hold, no individual identity, but nature is God, and God is nature; he is lost in his works. He is "Our Father" as opposed to materialism, which denies there is anything outside, beyond, or above matter—no angel nor spirit, finite or infinite. He is our Father as opposed to selfishness, which proposes to monopolize God as the God of a chosen few who absorb his providential and redeeming love, which regards God as the Jew, a "respecter of persons," and the God of one chosen nationality; whereas he is no respecter of persons, and in every nation they that fear him and work righteousness are accepted.

If God is our Father, then we are the children of the most honorable and illustrious of all parents in the universe. We outrank the "heirs apparent" to the crowns of the mightiest and proudest empires. The Lord God Omnipotent, Creator, Lord and Preserver of all worlds and all beings is our Father. To what an exalted honor does God raise us sinful men, that we are made the sons of God and joint-heirs with God eternal and well-beloved Son!

This distinguished honor should fill our hearts with thankfulness. When Pharoah raised Joseph from the condition of a prisoner and a slave to the rank of a prince and a ruler, only second in rank to himself over the whole land of Egypt, no doubt he was thankful, and felt that a great honor had been conferred; but our exaltation has been far higher. We have been raised from condemned sinners to be the sons of God and privileged to call him "Our Father." We are exhorted by St. Paul to walk worthy of the Lord. We all feel that the children of good and honored parents ought to be good and honorable too; and if they are not, all feel that such children have behaved most unworthily. When the son of a sovereign ruler is guilty of some scandalous and dishonorable conduct, the scandal and the shame is emphasized, because they are the sons of such exalted and honored parents.

Creed-Making.

In a recent article by Dr. Abbey I was glad to see that he does not think the attempt or design of the General Conference which adopted our Articles of Religion and made the Restrictive Rules, to bind them upon future generations, can be successful. Noble old man! How often have I admired the originality, the freshness and the independence of his utterances! What a rebuke to younger men, too indolent to think for themselves, who tie all their faith to some great name one hundred or two hundred years old!

In 1889 I took the pains to go into the Howard Library, in New Orleans, and read up the history of all our church creeds. You were kind enough to publish my observations. The Augsburg Confession in 1532 is the foundation of all that follow. It defined the relations of Protestantism to the Romish Church, and was a good thing at the time. In 1552 the Church of England formed its creed of Thirty-nine Articles on the basis of the former. About 1675 the Westminster divines made the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, and out-Heroded Herod in putting more Calvinism into them than had been found in the others.

In 1789 Mr. Wesley declared the American Colonies free and entitled to their own forms of religion as well as of government. He very wisely cut down the Thirty-nine Articles to twenty-five, and gave them as a foundation for Methodism in America.

Now, seeing that everybody has taken a hand in creed-making who has chosen to do so, from the Protestants in 1532 to the Methodists in 1789, how would any man go about proving that the work was ended, and that hereafter forever no new views on the subject of religion were to be considered? Suppose Bishop Soule and the Conference of 1828 did try (as he once said in my hearing) to put the itinerant general superintendency beyond the possibility of change by embracing it in one of the Restrictive Rules, what power had they more than any succeeding General Conference?

Prof. Tillett has shown in the Quarterly Review the necessity of a new Confession of Faith for all Methodism, and Dr. Abbey has gone through our Twenty-five Articles and left out those no longer appropriate, just as Mr. Wesley did with those of his own church; and now somebody rises up to say the thing can't be done because of the Restrictive Rules. Very well, the Restrictive Rules can be changed by the same power that made them, and we can thus prove that we are what Methodists were in Mr. Wesley's day—a living, growing organism and not a fossil.

Thanks to Drs. Abbey, Tillett, Cottrell, Noland, and others who have written on this subject, not "holding down the truth."

Letter from Mexico.

I have thought of writing of the children's welcome to us the Monday after our arrival in Mexico; but time has passed, and so many things claimed attention that I have not done so. I will say, however, that nothing could have been more gratifying, or gracefully done. After music by a string band, we were led to seats placed under a canopy, with lace curtains around the seats provided for Mr. Weems and myself, while without were placed seats for Miss Norville and our daughter and Prof. Rodrigues, who was in Mexico on a visit. A little girl and boy walked up to Mr. Weems and myself, bearing beautiful hearts made of roses; and in the center of the one the little girl had was my name in gilt letters, and the one borne by the boy had Mr. Weems' name. These they presented to us, saying they had nothing else to give us but their hearts, which they offered in all sincerity. They had some beautiful recitations, interspersed with music; a prayer of thanksgiving, and a nice talk from Prof. Rodrigues.

The fifteenth of September has come, and President Diaz's birthday has been celebrated with great pomp, while today, the anniversary of Mexico's independence, the celebration surpasses anything I have ever seen in Mexico. The Alameda is a bower of beauty; the central glorieta was decorated in cornucopias made of the national colors, of flowers. The fountains were playing all day, and the triumphal walk, where President Diaz and his men passed, was gorgeously decorated. We were standing very near where he passed, and had a splendid view. He was dressed in the uniform of a general. His large plumed hat and gorgeous dress, so richly trimmed with gold lace, attracted universal attention. He carried in his hand a walking cane decorated in the national colors. The troops have been in the streets all day. In addition to the speeches and all the other exercises, there were two Azteo statues unveiled in the Paseo de la Reforma—one a male, and the other a female. The statues were cast here in Mexico, and are very elegant, and add greatly to the appearance of the beautiful drive, lined on either side with statues of the great men of Mexico. The streets are beautiful to-day; the street cars, telegraph poles and everything has the national colors. Our Mexican brethren came round and decorated our Mission House, so that we, too, appear as faithful friends of the republic; and I can say "Viva Mejico," from my heart, for I do love these people, and long to see them take the same pleasure, and march as bravely under the banner of King Emanuel. If we might only see that day, Mexico would be not only a beautiful country, but a great and good one. I wish so much that I had the skill of an artist, that I might send you a picture of some of the wonders and beauties of this day. We are trying to work; but feasts—national and Catholic—are constantly interfering. The exercises this year began the fourteenth by a general review of the army by our chief, President Diaz; the fifteenth was his birthday, and was celebrated throughout the city; then this, the great day of Mexican independence, and to-morrow the feasts will be continued by celebrating the children's feasts by balls, one of which will be in the Alameda. To-night the fireworks will be a grand display. We are trying to rest a little, so as to take the girls out to-night. All is so new and wonderful to them, that their enthusiasm is very pleasing to the Mexicans.

I do trust Mr. Weems is getting well and strong, and I want to ask our friends to pray earnestly that he may be perfectly strong and well, so that he may be enabled to work for the evangelization of these unfortunate people. You do not realize how sad and deplorable is the condition of the people in this sin-cursed land. I do pray the Father that he may open your eyes and your purses to relieve Mexico's need. They want the Bread of Life to satisfy their hungry souls. God grant that our people may send it, and do it gladly. Pray for us and for Mexico.

Letter from China.

The possibility of a large number of foreign gunboats coming to China to call the government to account for the inadequate protection of missionaries, as in the case of the recent riots, is stirring up the officials to considerable activity in settling the bills for indemnity for property destroyed, punishing the ring-leaders in the riots, etc. The Chinese Foreign Office, at Peking, has recently sent orders to all the local officials throughout the empire to take account of all the missionaries in their several districts, where located, the number and size of their buildings, whether native or foreign style, owned or rented, distinguishing between chapels, schools, hospitals, foundling asylums, etc. The document issued by the Foreign Office, a copy of which the district magistrate sent us as his warrant for calling on us for the items named, says that this action is taken solely with a view to our thorough protection, and no attempt is to be made to interfere with the internal affairs of mission work in any way whatever.

Recent news from Peking leads to the belief that the treaty powers have made peremptory demands on the Chinese government for the speedy settlement of the claims for property destroyed, the adequate punishment of the rioters, and for the opening of the province of Hunan to foreign intercourse. This last demand is rendered necessary by the fact that during the past few years great quantities of the vilest and most inflammatory placards and pamphlets, directed against foreigners in general and missionaries in particular, have been issued by the people in that province, and have been the principal cause of the recent riots. Unless such vile publications are stopped, riots against missionaries will continue. No effort seems to have been made by the Chinese officials to put a stop to these vile publications, and the foreign governments appear to be under the necessity of bringing pressure to bear upon the government to secure this end. The people of that province seem to be more bitter against foreigners than those of any other province in the empire, and no one seems to know just why this is so. They accuse the foreigners of the vilest and most monstrous crimes of which it is possible to conceive—crimes that many, if not all, of us never heard of till we came to China. They are so bitter against foreign things that they will not use foreign matches, kerosene, etc., and they have stoutly resisted the introduction of the telegraph into the province, a great crowd having gathered at one point recently, and drove the builders of the line out of the province and destroyed a quantity of material. The most of the members of the Ko Lao Hwui come from that province. The soldiers in the regular army are largely recruited from them, and it is these facts that make it altogether uncertain as to how much reliance can be placed on these soldiers to protect us when a mob comes to attack us. However, our trust is not so much in Chinese soldiers or foreign gunboats, but in the arms of the living God whose work we are here to do. He will keep us here as long as he has use for us here.

The three district magistrates of the city have put out a joint proclamation, offering $100 reward for the capture of the person or persons who wrote the anonymous letter, referred to in my last letter, threatening to burn down all our property here, and warning us to flee at once, if we would escape personal injury. So far as I have heard, no other such letter or placard has been issued, and no attempt has been made to carry out the threat contained in that one. If we are to have any further trouble, we may expect it within the next two months, during and after the triennial examinations at Nanking and other places.

"Ruth Neblett Memorial."

The Ruth Neblett Memorial Missionary Society held its fifth annual meeting, Aug. 7, 1891. The occasion was one of great interest. After some beautiful and touching recitations, we had a most stirring address by Rev. Alonso Monk, pastor of Central Church, Memphis, Tenn., which aroused us to renewed activity. Would that we could reproduce some of the noble thoughts that flowed from the depths of the speaker's soul, that those of our members who could not be with us might catch the spirit of energy which, we trust, was imparted to us. A beautiful tribute was paid our president, who never forgets to lay a "free-will offering" on the altar of missions.

We would make mention of a memorial offering of $5 from a friend in Florida, who chose our little society as the medium through which this gift, in memory of a dear, little departed daughter, would be owned and blessed of God.

We hope that this will suggest to others that the R. N. M. M. S. is an appropriate channel through which such offerings may flow into the treasury of the Lord, which, while blessing others, will prove a blessing to themselves.

Our membership is not of a local nature. We gladly receive members from all parts of the Union. Any who may wish to join us should send their address, together with the annual fee of fifty cents, to Miss Innes Alexander, treasurer, R. N. M. M. S., Iuka, Miss.

A meeting of the officers was held Aug. 6, when the business relating to the society was transacted. The amount of this year's collection to date is $35.

Respectfully subscribed.

A Discouraged Preacher Refreshed.

Some years ago I was preaching in the bounds of what then constituted the Lauderdale circuit in the Meridian district, Mississippi Conference.

I usually had to preach twice, sometimes three times, on Sunday. I had been troubled and annoyed no little by a set of religionists called by some "Come-outers." They professed not to believe in an ordained ministry or organized Christian churches. Many of the ignorant and uneducated, the uninformed, etc., were led by these so-called "teachers of the Word" to sever their connection with the church, and have nothing to do with well organized churches. Many times, after laboring hard, preaching the best I could a pure gospel, and trying, with little or no success, to convince these people, who were disposed to be influenced by "Come-outers," of the error into which they were about to run; many times, I say, had I returned to my humble home in Lauderdale, where, in my judgment, lived one of the purest and best of women, surrounded by a group of nice, good children, with my heart troubled and saddened in view of the fact that so many of my people were running wild, denouncing churches and ordained ministers, etc.

On one occasion, after I had preached in the morning at Brogan's Chapel, in the evening at Mt. Hebron, I was cordially invited by my friend, Dr. William Syllman and his good wife, (Presbyterians) to go and spend the night with them. I cheerfully accepted the invitation. On reaching the Doctor's home I was invited into the house, where the Doctor's good wife soon prepared a place for me, a tired itinerant, to rest, and in a few moments I was sound asleep.

When I waked, Dr. Syllman was sitting near me. As soon as he discovered that I was awake, he began to repeat some verses said to have been written by Miss Caroline A. Mason. As these verses have been a blessing to me more than once, I send them to you for publication, hoping and praying they may be a blessing to others.

"Whichever way the wind doth blow,
Some heart is glad to have it so.
Then blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best.

"My little craft sails not alone;
A thousand fleets from every zone
Are out upon a thousand seas.
What blows for one a favoring breeze
Might dash another, with the shock
Of doom, upon some hidden rock.
And so I do not dare to pray
For winds to waft me on my way.

"But leave it to a higher will
To stay or speed me, trusting still
That all is well, and soon that he
Who launched my bark will sail with me
Through storm and calm, and will not fail,
Whatever breezes may prevail,
To land me, every peril passed,
Within his sheltering heaven at last.

"Then whatsoever wind that blows
My heart is glad to have it so.
Then blow it east, or blow it west,
The wind that blows, that wind is best."

BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

OSBULBAHA, AND OTHER POEMS. By R. D. Winder. Printed for the author by L. Graham & Son, New Orleans.

There are some clever verses in this little book; and, though the rhyme is frequently faulty and the rhythm unequal and lame, there is some pleasant reading to pass away a leisure hour.

JOHN BROWNLOW'S FOLKS. By William Boyd Allen. D. Lothrop Co., Boston. Price, $1.

The Brownlows are honest, practical, home-loving, hard-working folk, who live in a back street, do their own work, and are real and interesting. They are forever getting into funny predicaments by their lack of worldly wisdom; and the book is a breezy, healthy presentation of their honesty and lovingness.

PERIODICALS.

—LADIES' HOME JOURNAL has a large and full October table, and will gratify the tastes of very many. Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. Price, $1.

—ENTERTAINMENT gives a great deal of entertainment in the way of amusement and recreation for $1. Entertainment Bureau, Council Bluffs, Iowa. Price, $1.

—THE MAGAZINE OF ART opens with Landseer's pathetic picture of the "Shepherd's Grave," followed by numerous other pictures, with reading to match, and is altogether an interesting number. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $3.50.

—QUIVER, for October, is full of sharp arrows. We have said before that this is the best monthly for Sunday and general reading that we know, and this October number causes us to emphasize that opinion. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

—THE MISSIONARY REVIEW comes to us as full as possible of good things in its special line. This monthly is, by far, the best missionary periodical of which we have any knowledge. The table of contents each month is varied, able and interesting. Funk & Wagnalls, New York. Price, $2.

—OUR DAY, for September, is one of the best numbers we have seen of this monthly. Ex-President Hamlin, Anthony Comstock, Prof. Stearns, Dr. Joseph Parker, all contribute to this number. The book reviews are valuable, as are also the editorial notes. Our Day, Boston. Price, $2.50.

—The SCHOOL REVIEW is a monthly magazine for boys and girls and has quite a handsome appearance. We are favorably impressed with the "make-up" and contents of this, the first number we have seen. Review Publishing Company, Pittsburgh, Pa. Price, seventy-five cents a year.

—UNIVERSITY EXTENSION. We have received number three of this new monthly. It is devoted to the interests of popular education. Wm. Preston Johnston, president of Tulane University, writes in this number of University Extension in the South. J. Haseltine Shinn, Philadelphia. Price, $3.

—POPULAR SCIENCE has a table in which such subjects as the Census, Industries, Dress, Astronomy, Ostrich Farming, Education, Exercise, Hearing in Animals, etc., are all discussed by experts, and all together make up a most readable number of this monthly. D. Appleton & Co., New York. Price, $5.

—THE CHAUTAUQUAN begins Vol. XIV. with the October number, and its various departments show the usual adaptation to the wants and tastes of its readers. Dr. Flood is doing a grand service for good and wholesome literature in bringing out such a magnificent periodical each month. T. L. Flood, Meadville, Penn. Price, $2.

—GOLDTHWAITE'S GEOGRAPHICAL MAGAZINE is published by the Goldthwaites, 130 Fulton street, New York, for two dollars a year. It is an illustrated monthly and popularizes geography and gives a record of the world's progress and development every month. It has a list of varied and interesting topics in each number. It tells of countries, cities and people, with their habits, customs and religions. It is really an epitome of knowledge of the world in which we live. It is the very thing for the teacher and pupil. It is well worth having.

A Wrong Spirit.

There has been much said about the loss of power in the pulpit. Whether this has been wisely and well said we do not undertake to discuss. This, however, we do say, that the power of the pulpit of to-day is largely impaired by the unfraternal, not to say unchristian spirit which prevails in the hearts of many preachers toward their brethren. We would hasten to guard the remark, that it may not touch and wound the many who are true and loyal in every sense to the spirit of brotherly love and hearty co-operation. But while we hold the shield here, fidelity to the duty before us, though painful to think of, compels us to say that the lack of real fraternity, the spirit of jealousy and unkindness, the cold, dignified distance, the readiness to criticise and seize upon faults, and many other such things are all indications of weakness, and paralyzing to pulpit or any other useful power.

Well do we remember when we first discovered that preachers did not always love each other with a pure, unselfish love. It was a shock to us, a violation of our ideal of sacred relations. The feeling comes to us now that we are doing violence to these relations by intimating that they are not what they should be. But the spirit of which we write is too patent for false delicacy, and we hope in all kindness and love, by calling attention to it, to secure purer and more hearty relations.

The question has already arisen in the minds of some of our readers, "Who is mad, or indulging this wrong spirit?" and we answer as promptly, "No one, ostensively." This spirit is usually kept in the background, while the semblance of fraternity is placed forward. We do not need specifications. There is hardly a preacher, and not many others, who has not heard the uncharitable conversation between preachers about preachers, and many have been pained in no small degree by the severe terms used. The spirit evinced often on Conference floors, in newspaper discussions, and elsewhere, is not that of a brother toward a brother, but that of a polemic, a gladiator, an antagonist, an enemy. The contest appears not for truth, but for victory, for personal triumph, for mastery over an opponent. Every advantage, fair or unfair, is taken, and when a mistake is made, or a weak point discovered, it is seized upon with an avidity which shows at once the absence of the brotherly or Christ-like spirit. We have even seen signs of gratification when a brother failed in work or fell under condemnation. There are men, too, advanced in years, with the dignity of learning and the world's honors upon them, who are fretting their lives away, because, perchance, they are not as high in favor as they feel they should be. They have no kind word, or consideration for a brother in the field, or anyone who could in any sense be regarded as a rival. Alas! alas!

But there is no need to try to define; we all know that this wrong spirit is here, in high places and low, and is working the sweet spirit of the blessed Christ out of the heart, impairing our influence and destroying confidence. A sensible layman said not long ago, speaking of two men high in church relations, "I don't want these men preaching to me, when they think of and act toward each other as they do." The world may not be right in heart and feeling toward each other, but they are jealous of the purity and integrity of their ministers. And when they see signs of jealousy or self-seeking, of over-reaching or petty strife in us, their confidence is gone, and we can not complain.

The thing grows more serious as the years go by. We are taking in more of the spirit of the selfish, grasping world, and becoming more like it. However badly we may act toward each other, if we can justify our course by the cold, hard, political and business methods and principles of the day, we feel that our case is made out. The high standards of conduct set forth by the Master and the Word of God are too often lost to sight. Talk to a politician or the average business man about the new command, "Love one another as I have loved you," that is, better than yourselves—or of that beautiful, unselfish principle, "in honor preferring one another," and you are talking sentimental twaddle only to be laughed at. It is a language for the ethereal life. This is coming to be the case with many of us—ministers of the gospel of love. We should know and appreciate the fact that many pearly gates of paradise here below, gates of happiness and holy communion, could be opened to all of our hearts by the exercise of more real, honest kindness and love. And our Father knows that we need all we can get and give.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A Few Suggestions to Contributors.

In an address on "The Minister and the Press," delivered by the associate editor before the students of Union Biblical Seminary, and published in the Telescope, of March 27, the following important rules for the guidance of correspondents are set forth:

1. Use plenty of good paper.
2. Write with ink, and only on one side of the sheet. Use care in writing, especially all proper names.
3. Carefully number the pages.
4. Reread your article several times before sending it away for publication, and be careful that you have it written as you would like to have it appear in print. Do not put the work of correcting your manuscript on the editor, type-setter, or proof-reader.
5. In your final writing leave room between the lines for any further corrections that may be necessary.
6. Punctuate carefully.
7. Paragraph carefully. Some persons do not make any paragraphs in their longest articles.
8. Never roll your manuscript or fold pages separately. Fold all the pages together, so that when it is opened it will be in proper order to read.

Writers for the press who studiously follow these rules will have less occasion for complaint as to the disposition that is made of their articles than is now often the case.—Religious Telescope.

THE LOTTERY.

Preamble and Resolutions Adopted by Kedron Baptist Church, Aug. 6, 1891.

Whereas, Believing, as all Christian people should, that the Louisiana State Lottery is a vice, a wicked gambling institution, the charter of which we consider a stain on our State Constitution, and as such should be frowned on by all right-thinking people; And whereas, The said lottery company is asking for a continuance of their charter by which to perpetuate their wicked practice on the people to satisfy their own greed of gain, blinding the unwary with a promise of a revenue for the benefit of levees, education, etc., which promise, it is plain, they do not expect to fulfill; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we herewith recommend that all Christians of all denominations unite on the one point and join their strength in putting down this gigantic monopoly, and thus crush out a thing that is a curse to us and will be to our children after us.

Resolved, That the clergy of the different denominations be requested to teach against it from their pulpits.

Resolved, That this Kedron Baptist Church, in conference assembled, do herewith admonish each member of our church to labor to defeat this great evil.

Resolved, That each male member be expected to work and vote on the moral side of this question.

Resolved, That we request the publication of this preamble and resolutions in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, New Delta, Baptist Chronicle, Southern Baptist Record, and Florida Parishes.

Adopted by the church in conference, Aug. 6, 1891.

Anti-Lottery Resolutions.

Whereas, The portentous question affecting our statehood in its social, domestic and civil welfare demands our hearty and prayerful considerations; And whereas, Any institution that would countenance a most specious and dangerous form of gambling, and impair the peace and comfort of our homes, and defeat the church of God in its efforts to lift and elevate humanity from the depths of sin to the highest plane of excellence and happiness, is to be watched with a jealous eye; And whereas, The giving and taking of gifts and bribes when the ends of truth and righteousness are intended to be defeated, and thus offering temptations to the many to do wrong is to be earnestly deprecated; And whereas, The taking of gifts or bribes from such an institution is to be regarded as making concessions that are inimical to the church and the cause of education; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Alexandria District Conference, of the M. E. Church, South, unhesitatingly, unequivocally and unceasingly oppose the rechartering of the Louisiana State Lottery Company.

Resolved, That we will use and employ all legitimate and righteous methods to defeat this monster evil by our prayers, influence and persuasion, as well as by our votes at the polls.

Resolved, That these resolutions be read from every pulpit in the Alexandria District Conference on this living, burning question of the day.

Resolved, That our secretary be requested to furnish each pastor in the district with a copy of the same at an early date for this purpose.

THOS. B. WHITE,
J. J. KELLY,
H. V. MCCAIN.

It is characteristic of this outrage upon human nature, as of others that could be named, that an attempt is made to bribe public sentiment by providing in the proposed amendment that a percentage of income from the lottery shall go toward keeping in repair the levees at New Orleans and elsewhere along the great river. The same argument which secures municipal countenance to the worst forms of the liquor traffic is used here. The people are asked to tolerate a great evil in consequence of some lessening of taxes for the support of government, or for other public uses. It is a species of bribery which a self-respecting people should scorn as utterly as any honest man would scorn and resent a proposal to condone a manifest wrong for money consideration. Veiled under specious names, such as license and percentage, this species of dishonest purchase of a people's suffrage fails to reveal its true character. An honest voter, or other honest man, should utterly refuse to be thus deceived and manipulated, whether in the interest of one gross iniquity or another.

It should be borne in mind that schemes such as this of the lottery company, while they perpetuate what enriches a few at the expense of misery and suffering to thousands, have the effect, so far as they succeed, to debauch the public mind. A government like our own depends for its perpetuity upon the purity and integrity of the popular suffrage. When the people learn to waive great moral issues in the interest of some paltry pecuniary consideration in the form of a reduction of taxes or some other like issue, that is just as bad, in respect to the nation as a whole, as when votes were bought as in the old world they once were, by money paid to voters at the polls. The people of Louisiana should resent, and show their resentment by utterly defeating, this effort to purchase of them immunity for a great evil in a way so insulting to their intelligence and to their manly dignity.—Standard.

Next Spring occurs the election in Louisiana that decides whether or not the Louisiana Lottery Company shall have its charter renewed for a period of twenty-five years in consideration of the payment of $1,250,000 a year into the State treasury. The campaign preceding the election has already begun. The feeling of the opposing parties is intense. Other political issues for the time being are thrust into the background. It will be a contest between vice and greed on the one hand and morality on the other. The organization of the anti-lottery forces is very compact and complete, and it includes the best people of the State. Among them are the clergy of all denominations, Catholic priests and Protestant ministers standing side by side in the contest. The Farmer's Alliance of Louisiana have thrown their forces against the lottery. Mass meetings are being held in all parts of the State, and voters are pledged "to fight to the bitter end the horde of gamblers and bribers of the lottery company." The pro-lottery people are working vigorously, but quietly. They have thousands of agents throughout the State who will do whatever money and the powerful bribe offered by the lottery company to taxpayers of the State can accomplish. They will make a desperate fight. Still there is reason for hope that they may be defeated. We trust it may be so.—Methodist Recorder.

The effort to extend the charter of the Louisiana State Lottery affects not the people of Louisiana alone, but of the entire nation. The gambling mania has a strong hold upon our people. There are many ways in which it seeks gratification, the card table, the race course, the professional base ball game, etc., but perhaps the most pernicious, because of the fact that it reaches the remotest sections of the country, and through its agencies, beguiles the most unsophisticated, is the lottery. The impudence with which it makes a public offer to buy corporate rights by corrupting the people of Louisiana, and bringing the State into partnership with its gains, has not been equalled in modern times. The good people of Louisiana seem to be profoundly stirred on this question. They will have the sympathy of good citizens everywhere. If the evil can be remedied only by Federal legislation, then we hope the Congress of the United States will take it in hand, and that some means may be adopted for suppressing it in every part of the Union.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

The People's State Bank, of Lafayette, has let the contract for the construction of the building. It will cost $3,000. It will be of brick, two stories high, 25x50 feet, slate roof, with front of galvanized iron and plate glass.

The Democrat, of Opelousas, says:

The town tax roll, recently completed, shows that the tax for 1891 will exceed last year's tax by over $275. The tax to be collected this year amounts to $1,939.95, and the special school-house tax is half that amount, or $969.92½.

Washington Allen has recently sold his land on Prien Lake to Messrs. Delhi and Baker, for $30 per acre. He paid $10 per acre for the land four years ago, and has put no improvements on it since. This shows a healthy increase in the price of land in this country.—Lake Charles American.

Alexandria is having two more artesian wells sunk, each of which is to furnish over 100,000 gallons of water in twenty-four hours. Water was struck in one at the depth of 582 feet, and the supply was more than the contract calls for, and is clear and pure at a temperature of 72 degrees. The supply is estimated at 120 gallons per minute.

The following from the Vicksburg Commercial Herald, of Sept. 22, we read with a sincere pleasure. We wish our friends, under the lead of Pastor Lewis, great and speedy success in their noble undertaking.

Although nothing has been said of late concerning the plan of improveing the church of the Crawford street Methodist congregation, it has been by no means lost sight of, and it is understood that a meeting to be held shortly will definitely determine the pending question. This is whether the congregation shall build a new edifice or alter and improve the present building. The congregation has been canvassed and a large majority favors the former proposition. It is believed that the new church, if decided upon, will front on Cherry street and have two entrances, one being on Crawford. The site owned by the congregation is a very large one, and it is quite probable that a parsonage will be erected on a portion of it, the present parsonage being located at an inconvenient distance from the church, and by no means centrally. The handsome site, one of the finest imaginable, merits a fine building, and there is no doubt that the city will have another architectural ornament if the congregation determines to have a new church-house.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." O. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., Editor.

Thursday, October 1, 1891.

Rev. B. F. Alexander.

Rev. B. F. Alexander died at his home in Morgan City, La., Tuesday, Sept. 29. We just have time to make this announcement before going to press. We are greatly distressed and the church sorely bereaved.

Briefs.

Our readers will notice that we have given them no Sunday-school Lesson this week. We have neither time nor ability to prepare it ourselves, and we have no money to hire somebody to do it, and we have not the cheek to ask somebody to do it gratis. We could only clip the lesson from some other paper, and as our Sunday-school periodicals supply the lesson with all needed helps, we have concluded to refer all our Sunday-schools to our Publishing House for the literature needed. We are sure that it is good—perhaps, better—than any we can give.

Nowhere in the Word of God can we find that sin is licensed! As far as sin is concerned, it is prohibited from one end of the Book to the other. From this comes the plain inference that if any body or government licenses sin, that act is contrary to the principles of God's government and itself becomes a sin. If license is given to do a certain thing, and that thing always results in a harvest of sin and sinners, the license itself is a sin. Vice can not be licensed by a Christian State, for the principles of Christianity prohibit it in toto. "License for regulating a thing" is simply a method of expressing a nurturing care of that thing. If "God can not look upon sin with allowance," how does he look upon those who propose to license the thing which he abhors? No Christian man can vote to license liquor saloons or lottery companies or any other vice or sin. If he does, he votes against the principles of his own religion!

Let blind children be educated! New buildings, surrounded by large and beautiful grounds, having been completed and given to Louisiana for the exclusive and permanent use of her blind, school will open on Oct. 1. All young persons in the State, of so defective vision as to be unable to get an education in the ordinary schools, and of good health and sound mind, will be received, well cared for and instructed in all the branches usually taught in schools for youth with sight, besides having careful training in music and calisthenics. Girls may learn sewing, knitting and much of domestic work. Boys are taught several trades. No charges for either board or instruction. Anyone who knows of any blind person less than twenty years of age, is earnestly requested to send the name and address of such person to this school. For further information address Dr. W. H. N. Magruder, Principal, or Mrs. Mary S. Lane, Institute for Blind, Baton Rouge, La.

The Southern Churchman has this, which we think good:

We may have correct views about all social and political and temperance and papal matters; may be as orthodox as all Christendom, yet may talk too much, may be envious and covetous and worldly and careless. By all means let us be orthodox in theology, but let us have orthodox tempers and speech and behavior, which we are not likely to have unless we are humble penitent believers in Christ, the Son of God.

Millsaps College—A Word to Subscribers.

It is important that endowment notes to Millsaps College be paid speedily. We can not afford to longer postpone the completion of the proposed $100,000, which is the basis of the whole enterprise. The election of a faculty and other equipments of the college are involved in the early and full payment of these notes. It is hoped that there will be no delinquents—that every subscriber will make it a point of honor to pay up promptly, and thus speed the triumph of the greatest educational movement ever undertaken in the history of Mississippi Methodism. The crops are now moving, business has become active, money is circulating, and payments can be made. We want the entire sum invested and bearing interest, if possible, before the two Conferences meet in December. And this can be easily accomplished if subscribers will begin at once to send in their promised payments. Let no one say, "The amount I owe is small and will not be missed." Every dollar will be needed and remembered. Some paid the interest on their notes last year and postponed sending in the principal until this Fall. We hope all such will settle in full, even if they have to pay interest to some one else. Send amounts to Maj. R. W. Millsaps, treasurer, Jackson, Miss.

CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 23, 1891.

We feel like exhorting a little after the foregoing appeal from Bishop Galloway. There is no clearer evidence of Christian integrity—no better test of a true manhood—than the prompt fulfillment of promises. The Psalmist makes this very thing one of the essentials in the make-up of the character of a citizen of Zion: "He sweareth to his own hurt and changeth not." That is, he keeps his word at all hazards. He thinks more of that than he does of anything else he has. His word is just as good as his bond.

We understand the Bishop's appeal to be to those who have given notes for the endowment of Millsaps College and who have not yet paid those notes. The college scheme has gone on under various difficulties, and made commendable progress up to this time. The location has been selected, and, we believe, the plans of buildings have been approved, and as soon as they are erected the faculty will be chosen and the college begin its career of usefulness to Mississippi Methodism. But how can it begin successfully without the endowment? And how can the $100,000 be secured unless the people who have given their notes pay them? The failure to do this balks the whole endowment plan, for Major Millsaps' donation of $50,000 is conditioned upon the fact that the other $50,000 shall be paid in! The necessities of the case demand the prompt payment of the notes yet unpaid. The hopes of the case demand the same thing. To falter now just as the whole plan is opening so beautifully and promises so much for the future, is not becoming to Christian men and women. To fall behind just when the leaders are in sight of victory is to imperil the far-reaching results of that victory.

Now, brethren and sisters, is the time to pay up, even if it does hurt. The consciousness of having kept faith with the church in her struggle to inaugurate this noble enterprise will heal that hurt and produce a profound satisfaction in the soul. Let everyone seek such satisfaction by paying what he or she owes.

Dr. J. B. Cottrell, having served his four years' term at Franklin, Ky., has been appointed to Greenville, Ky.

Old Words with New Meanings.

When we went to school with the present city attorney of New Orleans, years ago, we had no idea that his budding genius would flower out into a lexicographical wonder that would eclipse in splendor the fame of all the Sam Johnsons and Noah Websters of past ages! But it is even so. His definition of a "glove contest" consigns all the dictionary makers limbo fatuorum. The great Century Company will now have to revise its magnificent work by the authority of this new lexicographer or else suppress it entirely. It is, by this new authority, evidently wrong in its definition of what constitutes the "manly sport."

According to our city attorney, a "glove contest" is no longer a "friendly bout for the exhibition of skill in the science of boxing," but it is a brutal battle between two bullies, where one batters the other to a jelly for the sum of $1,500, while a gaping crowd look on in savage delight. Such was the "glove contest" in this city last week, permitted by the acting mayor under the decision of the city attorney that such a contest was not prohibited by the statute. If that was a "glove contest," what in the name of savagery is a "prize fight"? Such an exposition of the plain words of a plain law is a disgrace. Such an evasion of plain law is another act to strengthen and deepen the contempt of the outside world for the criminal jurisprudence of Louisiana.

We rejoice to state that the Grand Jury does not agree with the city attorney in his definition of a "glove contest," for that body has very promptly indicted the principals in this disgraceful affair. We hope the indictment will stand, and that the parties will be promptly tried and convicted and sentenced. Let the authorities teach by an example not to be forgotten that the law must be kept. The Grand Jury is to be congratulated on the promptness with which it has met the exigencies of this case, and let all good citizens encourage it to go on in its good work.

Intolerance and Slander Rebuked.

MR. EDITOR: I desire space in your paper for a few words concerning one phase of the temperance question.

Prohibitionists are all agreed on one point, viz.: that the saloon is an evil which ought to be suppressed by the strong arm of the law. As to the best method of reaching this end, however, there is a diversity of opinions. Some think that each local community should decide the matter for itself. Others think that the United States government should take the monster by the throat and throttle him at once. Others, believing strongly in the ancient and venerated doctrine of States rights, hold that this is not a matter for the general government to deal with. They think that each State for itself should outlaw the traffic, either in its Constitution or by statutory enactment. There is also a very radical difference of opinion as to the proper place of this question in the realm of politics, some favoring, others ardently opposing, the organization of a separate political party. Now, each of these classes is respectable in numbers and in character. True, conscientious, God-fearing men are found advocating each of these views. This being the case, it is manifest that these several classes ought to have large toleration for each other. No class ought to assail the character or impugn the motives of another class. Until recently this was the case. The several classes of prohibitionists were at peace among themselves. They differed, but differed in friendship.

Now, however, this era of friendship and toleration seems about to pass away. Prohibitionists of a certain class have no longer any toleration for their brethren who advocate a different method of reaching the desired end. A remarkable exhibition of this spirit of intolerance is given in an editorial in a recent number of The Issue, a third-party sheet published in Nashville. This editorial was called forth by the action of the recent Mississippi State Prohibition Convention. This convention, of which Bishop Galloway was a member, adopted a declaration of principles, containing the following sentence: "The cause of prohibition should not be entangled with party politics." Now, this was a little too much for the aforesaid partisan editor. Hot with wrath, he forthwith pens an editorial more than a column in length, headed in large letters, "Bishop Galloway Fooling Himself and People." In it he uses the following language: "Bishop Galloway surely knows better; but as a recognized chief high priest in the Mississippi Democratic synagogue, who is solicitous not to hurt my party, he is very consistently averse to entangling prohibition with party politics." Now, here are several things that demand rebuke. First, take the statement that Bishop Galloway is "a recognized chief high priest in the Mississippi Democratic synagogue." This means, if it means anything at all, that the Bishop is an active partisan in the ranks of Democracy, a leader of its hosts, participating in its councils and shaping its polity. Such a statement is entirely at variance with the truth. The Bishop has never been an active participant in political partisan warfare.

But being a Democratic high priest is not the worst of the Bishop's offences; he is also "fooling the people," and that, too, intentionally, for it is said that "he knows better." So then, according to the editor of The Issue, Bishop Galloway is a traitor to the cause of truth, a deceiver of the people in the interest of a corrupt partisanism. In other words, he is a villain of the first water. A very grave charge to bring against a man in high place in the church of God! And yet this charge is made without a scintilla of evidence to support it, except the fact that the Bishop differs in opinion with the editor of The Issue. Bishop Galloway is known everywhere as an uncompromising advocate of what he believes to be right. He has in him the stuff of which martyrs are made. Moreover, he was an ardent, active prohibitionist long before The Issue had an existence. His labors in the good cause have been abundant and self-sacrificing, and the fruits of his labors will abide when The Issue is forgotten. To bring such a charge against such a man is simply villainous. Papers that print such vile slanders ought not to be allowed to enter any decent home, especially any Methodist home.

But this is not the end of the chapter. Not content with thus maligning one of the very best of men, the aforesaid partisan editor delivers himself concerning others as follows: "Bishop Galloway and his followers, as loyal Democratic partisans, have no moral or political right to claim to be prohibitionists, no more than a follower of the devil has to claim to be for Christ." Now, the Bishop's followers in this case are the prohibitionists of Mississippi, for the above-quoted declaration of principles was adopted by a unanimous vote. So not only is the Bishop a knave, but the tens of thousands of people in Mississippi who claim to be prohibitionists are not prohibitionists at all. Well, that is decidedly rich. Here are thousands of as good people as the world ever saw. They have been for years stern, uncompromising opponents of the liquor traffic. For the extirpation of the saloon they have poured out their money like water. In this cause they have expended time and labor without stint and without hope of reward. In many cases even life itself has been imperiled. Through their labors more than half the area of this great commonwealth has been redeemed from the curse of the saloon. And yet they have no right to be called prohibitionists. Why? Simply because they do not look through The Issue's spectacles. In other words, because they honestly believe that the evils of intemperance can be more easily and more effectually remedied otherwise than through the method of partisan warfare. Such narrowness, bigotry, intolerance and slander in temperance organs are one of the mightiest hindrances to the progress of the temperance cause.

W. C. BLACK.

Political Meetings on Sunday.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me to thank you for your "strong" and "timely" "leader" on "Political Meetings on Sunday." I heartily endorse every word you say.

Some years since a Methodist of prominence was a candidate for Congress from the district in which I resided. On seeing the announcement in the city dailies that political meetings would be held for three consecutive Sundays, though at different places, and that he would be present and address the assemblies, I addressed him a note asking: 1. If these announcements were made with his consent. 2. If he intended being present and participating in the discussions. I entreated him not to go, nor to speak, and stated that if he did, I could not and would not support him for the position.

To my letter I received no reply however; but the aforesaid Methodist attended the meetings on Sundays and was declared elected. Though I did not vote for him, neither did I vote for his opponent, for he, too, was guilty of the same offence.

A man who professes godliness, and yet knowingly and wilfully sets aside God's commands, can not be trusted with official responsibilities. If he violates his pledge to God and the church, he can't be depended on to redeem his pledges to the people.

Now, Mr. Editor, if the Christian people of every denomination will determine not to vote for any man who is so far gone in sin as to desecrate the day of the Lord thus, and will give public notoriety to this determination, there are very few office seekers who will not heed the warning.

For one, I will not knowingly vote for any man for any office, from President down to ward constable, who attends political meetings and delivers political addresses on Sundays. If others are of the same opinion as myself, I would be glad to have them publicly declare it.

Free Lectures to the Masses.

Rev. Alfred E. Clay takes pleasure in announcing an autumnal series of afternoon free lectures, at Dryades Street Church, every Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, on subjects clustering about home life and duties. They are meant to be helpful to those who have not been accustomed to attend churches, as well as to those who can not well attend church at the regular hours. Everybody is invited and all seats are free.

Notes.

Dr. A. J. Gordon, in an article on Missions in the October number of the Missionary Review, has a sentence which our missionary folks may ponder to profit. It is this: "And Prudence sat over against the treasury watching the expenditures, to see that Faith did not overdraw her account."

The presidents of all the Methodist bodies in Great Britain have united in appointing the week beginning Nov. 15 as a week of special prayer for the outpouring of the Holy Ghost. Suppose all the Methodist churches in this country should do the same thing, would it not bring an invaluable blessing? Would it not be an object lesson to the world whose teaching would be far-reaching?

The Ram's Horn is getting to be rather personal. He has been talking (shall we say scandalously?) about some Methodists who live in Mississippi and Louisiana. Here is what he says about them: "The devil has his way in the homes of a great many religious people by making them believe they can't afford to take a religious paper!" Do you hear that? The devil controlling in a religious family! Is it a slander or not?

The regular monthly meeting of the Sunday-school Superintendents' and Teachers' Union of New Orleans will be held next Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 7:30 P. M., at the Third Presbyterian Church, Royal street, opposite Washington Square. The subject for discussion will be "The Sunday-school Teacher." A cordial invitation is extended to everybody to be present. Persons living above Canal street can reach the church by taking the Rampart and Danphine cars.

It may have never occurred to a contributor to the press, whose articles have sometimes failed to appear, to inquire if this same thing ever happens to an editor. And yet if the truth was known, it might be seen that the editor himself has more articles that have found their way to the waste-basket than any one of his contributors. These articles were crowded out when prepared, and when space for them came they were found not to be so timely as they were, and they are laid aside. Such is the case with our waste-basket. It contains as much from the editor's pen as from any one of our contributors. So let us "comfort one another."

The resolution adopted by the Missouri Conference appointing Sunday of Christmas week, Missionary Day, on which day effort shall be made to raise the money to pay off our mission debt, is worthy of consideration. The Missouri Conference has invited all the other Conferences to pass a like resolution, and thus make it a general Missionary Day for the whole church. We are of opinion that if the pastors will take hold of the matter vigorously and push it pertinaciously, good—great good—will come of it and much will be done. But if it is gone into as such things have been heretofore, it will amount to nothing. The thing to do is to create an earnest enthusiasm on the part of the pastors, and then we will succeed in any good thing. But without that, we will fail. Shall we have such an enthusiasm? Or shall we humdrum along as usual?

In the last number of the Southwestern Presbyterian Dr. Mallard has an excellent article against the lottery. In the opening paragraph he says:

Our esteemed fellow-worker in all that is noble and good, the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, is engaged in a praiseworthy attempt to secure by private subscription the publication and circulation in our State of 10,000 copies of Dr. Carradine's powerful arraignment of the "Lottery Shame." It is to be hoped that either by modification of the text, or explanatory note, or editorial comment, the injustice done the pulpit and church of Louisiana, and more especially of New Orleans, will be neutralized.

We appreciate the compliment in the foregoing paragraph, but have to correct the error. The CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is not engaged in the work referred to. Bro. Van Valkenburgh is the author of that scheme, and the ADVOCATE is simply advertising it for him.

Meditating on Paul's remarkable utterance found in Rom. xv, 20, we were led to wonder if there are in these days many preachers who had such a spirit. And yet by every New Testament token, that is the proper spirit for every ambassador of Christ to have! Where is the modern missionary spirit that breathes and groans in that wonderful sentence of the untiring apostle? Upon whom has that mission mantle fell? There are places all over Louisiana and Mississippi calling for the man of that spirit! Where is the man? Where are the men to say to Bishop Hendrix and Bishop Keener, "Here we are; send us where no man has yet built a foundation"? Have we not ground for praying the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his harvest? Is it not time to put forth more aggressive power? Can we look our Lord in the face as long as these neglected places call and we do not put forth more effort to answer?

The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will be sent to all new subscribers from this date to January 1, 1893, for two dollars. The usual commission will be given to agents.

Personal and Otherwise.

The contract for building Millsaps College has been given to H. M. Taylor, of Jackson, Miss.

The editor will leave for the Ecumenical Conference next Monday evening, if nothing prevents. He will leave the ADVOCATE in safe hands.

We call the special attention of the preachers to the article, on the second page, from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, entitled "A Wrong Spirit."

We sometimes receive two accounts of the same meeting from different parties. In such cases, as a rule, the first that comes is published. We do not see the necessity of publishing both.

We are indebted to Mrs. E. D. Jones, of Carlisle, Miss., for a copy of the Minutes of the Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference. It is full of interesting matter.

The fourth Quarterly Conference of Columbus station unanimously resolved to invite the North Mississippi Conference to hold its session of 1892 in that place. The last Columbus Conference was held in 1880.

Dr. T. S. West, of Wesson, Miss., give us a call Tuesday. He was en route to Seashore Camp Ground on a health-recruiting expedition. He did not say so, but we inferred from his conversation that our church at Wesson is doing grandly.

The London Methodist Temperance Magazine says: "Under prohibition, Atlanta, in Alaska(?), had a splendid run of commercial prosperity. It was known as the model city of the South." Would it not be well for some of our brethren "across the sea" to read up on geography?

A note from Mrs. W. A. Ragan, Clarence, La., informs us that a neat little church has been built on Feusse river, five miles from Natchitoches. There are only four members there, and they need help to secure hymn books for the use of the little congregation. Who will render this assistance?

President Hunnicutt passed through the city last week en route home from the St. Tammany Camp Meeting. He represents the meeting as a good one. He had fine success in securing endowment for the college. He obtained $1,650 in endowment notes. We are glad to chronicle this splendid work of our worthy president. He says the people gave cheerfully.

We are sorry to read in the dispatches from Brookhavon, Miss., the following:

The Methodist parsonage was entered last night by a sneak thief, and a vest and a pair of pents, a fine gold watch and all the pooket change of the pastor, Rev. W. H. Huntley, stolen. The watch was valued at $150 and beare Mr. Huntley's monogram. The tracks left in the dust by the bare feet of the thief shows that he was a negro.

Rev. Robert Havers, Pleasant Grove, Miss., Sept. 5: "We have just closed a glorious meeting here. It lasted six days. Some professed converaion. We had expected Dr. West, but he did not come; but the Lord was with us. Bro. W. Hoover came up and helped me. He pleased the children greatly. We had twelve accessions, ten adults—six men and four women—and two children. Our work is all prospering. The members at other churches on the work are being blessed. I hope to be able to send a good report from all the churches. To God be all the glory."

Rev. W. J. Ferguson, P. C., Silver Creek circuit, Sept. 10: "We have held three very fine meetings. Revs. J. D. Crymes, M. L. Burton and G. H. Thompson were with us, and did very faithful and earnest preaching. Results: several family altars erected, twenty-one added to the church, and eight infants baptized. We have built a neat little church on Sunflower river, which shall be known as Scharbrough's Chapel. This is a very pleasant charge. The people treat their preacher well. The work has a nice little parsonage, but the preacher has no 'wife' to occupy it with him. We will bring up a full report at Conference."

What curious mistakes do occur. Bro. Woodward, in giving the record of the work of the preachers in his district, entirely overlooked a worthy brother. When the mistake was discovered, the apprehensive P. E. sent a card flying to this office to correct the matter; but, alas! the issue of last week was already flying all over Mississippi and Louisiana when the card came. Here is what the said P. E. intended to say in his communication last week: "Bro. Ellison—the strong defender of the faith—who is ever ready for every good work, is thoroughly indoctrinating his people. A Baptist sister says of him, 'He makes the best excuse for baptism of any preacher in the Methodist Conference.'"

Notices.

Mrs. S. S. King, Conference secretary of the Woman's Board of Home Missions and Parsonage Extension, will fill appointments in the interests of the Board, as follows:

Baton Rouge, Sunday, Oct. 4; Delhi, Tuesday, Oct. 6; Girard, Wednesday, Oct. 7; Oak Ridge, Friday, Oct. 9; Bestrop, Sunday, Oct. 11; Calhoun, Tuesday, Oct. 13; Ruston, Wednesday, Oct. 14; Homer, Sunday, Oct. 18; Shreveport, Wednesday, Oct. 21; Grand Cane, Friday, Oct. 23; Boyce, Sunday, Oct. 25; Pineville, Wednesday, Oct. 28; Lake Arthur, Friday, Oct. 30; New Iberia, Monday, Nov. 2.

The sixth session of the Mississippi Holiness Convention will convene at Mt. Vernon Church, Tuesday night, Oct. 20-25, 1891. This church stands in Tate county, Miss., five miles west of Tyro, and twelve miles east of Senatobia. All who come by railroad will come to Senatobia, where they will be met by friends and conveyed to Mt. Vernon and back to the depot free of charge.

Please notify G. D. Garrison, Wm. Carter, of Tyro, or Wm. C. Sturdivant, of Looxahoma, Miss., of the intention and time of attending, so conveyence and homes may be secured for you. Rev. W. A. Dodge of Atlanta, Ga., will be with us. All are cordially invited to come, and hear the doctrine of perfect love expounded from God's Word. J. W. POSTON, Pres.

To the Pastors and Conference Claimants of the Mississippi Conference:

The Joint Board of Finance desires to justly and honestly administer the Conference Fund. To do this we must have a report from each claimant. Brethren, put us in possession of these facts: 1. Who is the claimant? 2. The age. 3. The health. 4. The financial condition. 5. Have you, as a pastor, had a personal interview with the claimant?

Some of the claimants live outside the bounds of our Conference; some of our preachers neglect this duty: hence we make an earnest appeal to each claimant to send us the answers to these questions at once.

Last year we had no report from eighteen widows and their families and no report from three orphans. Of the remaining twenty-four claimants, some reports were so meagre as to be really no reports, and some so indefinite that we were not able to tell whether help was needed or not.

Let all the pastors and all the claimants come to our help.

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Woman's Work.

Auxiliaries should report existence, if nothing more, to their respective district secretaries. Only two have reported to Mrs. J. S. Parker, secretary of Seashore district, who manifests zeal and earnestness. She has organized at Hattiesburg with twelve or thirteen good working members, with prospects for enlargement. Another auxiliary organized recently at Mt. Moriah, on Mt. Carmel circuit. She has planned to visit and hopes to report another soon. "The Master is come, and calleth for thee," needs emphasis to-day, with the prayer that all may respond, for open doors invite.

The leaflet, "Substitute for Service," contains valuable suggestions for us, and "Bring a Loaf" leaves no excuse for any. A minister, calling for leaflets, said: "My members are not informed as to mission work, and hence they give but little for its support."

We should work earnestly for our Woman's Missionary Advocate, which performs its mission well, and reports quarterly a large "balance on hand" that goes to the regular fund; not forgetting Little Worker, also published by the Woman's Board. Besides preserve missionary leaflets and circulate them, and the "Minutes of the Twelfth Annual Meeting," which contains the Constitution and By-laws and other valuable information.

Correction.

Please allow me to correct through the ADVOCATE a statement made by Bro. Green, secretary of our District Conference. I stated I had sold about $400 worth of books, and hoped to sell as many more before Conference—not $800, as he stated. Owing to being ill all this month, my hopes will hardly be realized.

G. A. MANDEVILLE.

The life-sized statue of Jefferson Davis, carved in Italy for the interior of the Confederate monument in Jackson, has been received; but, owing to the fact that no one would take it for him, the committee refused to accept it.

Domestic Missions Again.

I do not reopen this subject to reply to my critic, Bro. Dreke, since he virtually concedes all that I contended for in my former paper. In Mississippi, according to him, where good men have been employed, satisfactory results have been obtained, but not otherwise. Thus his facts are exactly confirmatory of my theory.

I wish, however, to correct one misapprehension of my position. I was criticizing a policy, not men. I was not arraigning the appointing power, nor intended any reflection upon our missionaries. All administrators are expected merely to perform their functions according to law and custom. These make up the policy of an administration, and the policy may be wrong, while the affairs remain unimpeachable. Let us change our policy of putting the weakest men on our missions, and the results will change. Every city mission needs a Price Hughes, and, with stronger men upon our country missions, they would sooner be raised to self-supporting circuits.

As to our domestic missionaries, I was simply stating a rule, not the exceptions. There are men to-day in this field in the Louisiana Conference who are in excellent repute among their brethren, and who deserve double honor for the work they are doing.

J. W. MEDLOCK.

All over the United States legislation is being enacted, and societies are being organized, looking to the better treatment of animals. As a matter of fact those who own valuable animals or breed them for service or profit, find that attending to their diseases or injuries is not only humane, but it pays. Like honesty, kindness in such cases is the best policy.

As is well known, most of the diseases and injuries of the domestic animals are exterior, and for the most frequent, especially such as strains, galls and sores, ring-bone, spavin, swellings, stiffness, inflammation, stings and bites, etc., there is no application known to veterinerians that in any way can be compared to Mansfield's Magic Arnica Liniment.

All the societies and laws in the country together have not done as much to relieve the sufferings of the brute creation, the crippled, the lame and the halt, as has this incomparable preparation.

It is as good for sheep and cattle as for horses or dogs, and in a large class of cases it serves as a disinfectant as well as relieves the pain. It not only relieves, it cures, and none who has animals about them they value should be without it. Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

QUARTERLY REPORT.

In making this first report I wish to state that I was appointed superintendent of this work about the first of July, 1891. Since that time I have endeavored to do something by correspondence; have written to quite a number of ministers and other Christian workers on this subject, but have not succeeded in organizing any societies in that way. I hope, however, to hear from some of them soon, and to make a better report for the next quarter.

Through the kind assistance of Bros. J. W. Anderson, J. L. Bowling and B. C. Gray, pastors, I have been instrumental in organizing "Little Home Builders" at the following churches: Victoria, Red Banks, Mt. Hope and Soule Chapel. These societies have just been organized, and I have received no reports from them.

The Œcumenical Conference in America.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CHAIR.

Messrs. R. Garnett and Son, Warrington, have been entrusted with the making of the presidential chair for the forthcoming Methodist Œcumenical Conference, to be held in Washington, U. S. A. The chair is the gift of a wealthy Methodist layman, and is made of very old oak, taken out of the City-road Chapel, London. It is classic in style, and is to be occupied by the President of the Œcumenical Conference. It will afterwards be removed to the National University of Washington, and remain there. It stands 6 feet high, supported by panelled trestles, with engreved panels all round the seat. The arms are formed by winged lions. The carving on the back includes a medallion of John Wesley, surrounded by festooned leaves, with conventional scrolls, and has the motto, "Unite the pair so long disjoined, knowledge and vital piety." Two shields on one side contain emblazoned the arms of the Lincoln College, where Wesley was educated. The chair is surmounted in the centre by the American eagle, with the American stars and stripes, and the motto, "E Pluribus unum." On each side of the eagle are lions rampant, holding shields with the Royal arms of England. The side and back and arms are stuffed and covered with scarlet morocco. In connection with the chair there is a suitable footstool, made to match, and covered similarly. The chair will probably be on view at 52 Castle street, Liverpool, on Monday, prior to being sent to America.—Methodist Times (London), Sept. 10.

We Beg Your Pardon, Gentlemen.

Mr. Schwartz, of Heath, Schwerlz and Co., Limited, notifies us of a rather amusing error made by our printer in his advertisement in our last issue. It read: "Never in the history of the Wall Paper business has the line of patterns equalled those which will be shown this Fall, and as we carry the makes of every manufacturer, nowhere else in the earth can such an assortment be found." Mr. Schwerlz, in calling attention to the error, says that while his house claims to be the largest dealers in the South in their line of goods, and have been accused of "wanting the earth," they are not yet sufficiently puffed up to call themselves either the largest dealers "in it" or upon it.

A Good Offer.

Bro. W. R. Stuart, of Ocean Springs, Miss., offers to mail to any preacher in charge connected with either of our three Conferences, and who occupies a parsonage belonging to the district or charge, three of his celebrated "Stuart Pecan Nuts," to be planted in the parsonage-yard for the benefit of future generations. He was led to do this by Rev. R. B. Downer's and Rev. Dr. J. B. Walker's articles on "Pecan Culture," published lately in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Send Bro. Stuart your request, accompanied with postage stamps to cover cost of mailing; and as soon as the nuts are ripe, they will be mailed.

HOME LIFE.

"BEST."

BY H. H.

Mother, I see you with your nursery light,
Leading your babies, all in white,
To their sweet rest;
Christ, the Good Shepherd, carries mine to-night,
And that is best!

I can not help tears, when I see them twine
Their fingers in yours, and their bright curls shine
On your warm breast,
But the Savior's is purer than yours or mine—
He can love best!

You tremble each hour because your arms
Are weak; your heart is wrung with alarms,
And sore oppressed;
My darlings are safe, out of reach of harms,
And that is best.

You know over yours may hang even now
Pain and disease, whose fulfilling slow
Nought can arrest;
Mine in God's gardens run to and fro,
And that is best.

You know that of yours the feeblest one
And dearest may live long years alone,
Unloved, unblest?
Mine are cherished of saints around God's throne,
And that is best.

You must dread for yours the crime that sears,
Dark guilt unwashed by repentant tears,
And unconfessed;
Mine entered spotless on eternal years,
Oh, how much the best!

But grief is selfish, and I can not see
Always why I should so stricken be,
More than the rest;
But I know that, as well as for them, for me
God did the best!

Christ-Like.

BY REV. H. ARMSTRONG.

To be a Christian in deed and in truth is to be Christ-like. Paul says: "If any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." This is a high standard. But few measure up to it; yet this is in harmony with the teaching of the Master, who said but few would be saved.

To be Christ-like is to have the meekness and the unselfish and philanthropic character of Christ; not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think; to esteem others better than ourselves. Did professing Christians generally measure up to this scriptural standard, what far greater power would the church wield! For the lack of this our beloved Zion mourns. Her banner oft trails in the dust, and dark and murky clouds obscure her way and impede her progress. There ever has been in Christendom now and then a star of this brilliancy and of this magnitude, standing out as an example and a guide for others. Charles H. Spurgeon, of London, is a star of this character. He is a Baptist, but has such a magnanimous soul and breathes such a fraternal and charitable spirit; he is so Christ-like that he is unselfish, and cordial with all the lovers of our Lord. All Christians are invited by him to the Lord's Supper, and ministers of other churches have a cordial welcome to his pulpit. He is too great a man, and too deeply imbued with the spirit of his Master, to be narrow or bigoted. In speaking of the exclusiveness of others, he says: "When a church has nothing left in which to rejoice, it falls back on its pedigree and cracks itself up as the one and only."

Dr. Phillips Brooks, who was recently elected Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts, is of this noble type. He possesses true greatness, and the truly great are never narrow and self-conceited. He is regarded in his denomination as Low Church; but we think the true cause of his charity for others is that he has a lowly mind—in other words, that he is Christ-like. He says to claim to be the only church of Christ—thus unchurching all others—is "impotent impudence." Christ said: "He that is not against us is on our part."

To be Christ-like is to do the will of Christ. He says: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." O, the need in this day and time of members and churches more deeply imbued with the spirit of Christ!

Do You Sing at Home?

There is perhaps no pleasanter occupation in the family circle than sacred song. Many a home where there is little of beauty, or ease, or luxury, is made pleasant by "thanksgiving and the voice of melody." If there be joy in the heart and music on the tongue, many rough places in life are smoothed and made plain, many dark spots are brightened and made cheerful.

Those families which know nothing of sacred song miss some of the purest pleasure that falls to the lot of mortals. Family prayer is a duty and a privilege, but family praise is none the less so, and there is nothing that binds hearts more closely to the home than those "songs which mother sung;" and old tunes in which the voices of parents and brothers and sisters join form a bond of union which unites hearts when mountains rise and oceans roll between them. Sometimes the wayward son, wandering in a far-off land, hears the song his mother sang, and is charmed by its music to know and serve his mother's God.

Careful and melodious singing in the home fits persons for singing elsewhere, especially if persons are taught to sing correctly, gently and tenderly, and without much instrumental accompaniment. Then the hymns learned by the young linger long in memory, a precious heritage against days of darkness and sorrow.

Let parents set the example of song, and the children will be sure to follow. Take time now and then and enjoy an evening of sacred song. Let the voice of rejoicing be heard in the tabernacle of the righteous, and prayer and praise ascend to the throne of God. Let each child have his hymn book, and he will learn to prize it next to the Bible, and will from it gather many precious truths which will go with him to life's latest hour. Whoso offereth praise glorifieth God. Let us have more praise and less murmuring, more song and fewer complaints. Instead of fretting because of evil-doers, let us pray; instead of repining at our lot, let us leave our burden at the cross, "and bear a song away."

"Have you no words? Ah, think again—
Words flow apace when you complain,
And fill your fellow-creatures' ear
With the sad tale of all your care!

"Were half the breath thus vainly spent
To heaven in supplication sent,
Your cheerful song would oftener be,
'Hear what the Lord has done for me!'"

Knowledge and Wisdom.

BY REV. J. W. HARMON.

The wisest man who ever lived bore testimony to the truth, that sorrow is increased by much learning, and that weariness of the flesh is the result of the accumulation of wisdom; that true perfection of character comes by suffering. If, therefore, we would increase in knowledge and gather wisdom, we must put the cup of knowledge to our lips mixed with sorrows, and come at last to know true wisdom under the damaging revelations to pride and one's real character. And yet none but wise men ever enter this realm of thorough investigation, this secret arena of selfhood, but to whom, by the grasp of faith, is revealed purity of thought, a clean heart and true excellency of spirit. And what labor can be compared to the tension of brain power, when all the lordly attributes of the mind and soul are sent out as messengers in search of true wisdom, and these messengers are found delving in the mines of heavenly knowledge for the pure gold of truth or the polished ingots of solid wisdom.

No pursuit is so difficult as to ladder, from ledge to ledge, the steep mountain-sides of knowledge until the top is gained, and then the glory of an extended vision and expanded intellect is the reward of wearisome toil.

The man who would give a clean-cut reason for seeking after a clear knowledge of self, rejecting the world's brilliant offers of happiness, must, in the very fitness of things, hang himself up between two worlds, and think and dream, and think out and dream out great truths. Only let a man quit the beaten ruts, let him demolish old formulas, behead old theories and old philosophies, hoary with antiquity, that have been babbled over and parroted for ages, and all the world will come buzzing like gad-flies about his ears.

While we submit to be tormented with the impotence of ignorance and the fools of bigotry, we must gain all the knowledge possible from the wise and from that incomparable Book of books that charts the way to the Source of all wisdom.

The Girl with One Talent.

Bishop Vincent, in his "Studies in Young Life," gives the following sketch of a girl deficient in many things, but with one talent of which she made good use:

Let us review her resources. We take an inventory, as merchants say. Self-knowledge: As to arithmetic and algebra—minus; geography and history—moderate; orthography, rhetoric, and elocution—deficient; no voice, no music, no conversational power; artistic skill at the minimum; no commercial ability. A girl with a father and a mother, with brothers and sisters, and one talent. What Laura's one talent is we set ourselves at work to find out.

Laura slept soundly. The pillow was welcome at night; and the parting was hard in the morning. When the first bell rang she wished she could pull the tongue out of it and hide the brazen disturber of her peace beyond all power of finding. She thought it would be so delightful to sleep for two hours more, or one hour, or thirty minutes, or fifteen minutes. But scarcely had the echo of the bell died away before Laura had summoned herself and commanded herself, and in due time—without too much speed to prevent the well doing of all that had to be done, and without too much slowness to break the morning order of the household below stairs—she reported herself for duty, wherever that morning the little of duty had been cast. She always came in with a cheerful smile and a hearty salutation. The girl in the kitchen used to say, "When Miss Laura comes in a mornin' I shield my poor eyes for the brightness." It was Bridget's blarney, but when you know Laura you will excuse Bridget's extravagance. Usually one or two of the children had to be buttoned or hooked, combed or coddled, and who could do it so well as Laura, who greeted a chance of that kind as she would a streak of sunshine, or a whiff of air from fields of new-mown hay? "They love it, and I love it," she said.

A greeting, a kiss, a playful sally, a lively question, was ready for father and mother. The voice that could not sing was music itself in home speech, and if its owner could not talk at breakfast about Gladstone's policy, or the definition of beauty given by the last night's lecturer at Osmond Hall, she could ask questions enough to keep everybody talking, each in the line of his liking; and, without knowing how wise and strong she was, Laura's One-talent used her love and common sense and tact in keeping peace at the table, repressing uncomfortable topics, drawing out people according to their bent and ability, and too "stupid" to say much herself, she was sagacious enough to play the general with the wit and wisdom of all the rest. And if they—the "all the rest" of the household—had a good time, Laura was happy. When breakfast and prayer were over, if there were not problems in algebra to be solved, or selections from Liszt or Bach to be practiced, or an essay for a Shakespearean club to be written (and she was always excused from such service), there was something to do with mother or for mother, with Bridget or in Bridget's stead; something for father or the boys; something for the little girls; something in bedroom, kitchen, parlor, or cellar; sweeping, dusting, bed-making, cooking, stitching, watching, errand going, calling—always something that needed to be done for the good order and good feeling of the household; and Laura, who could not do great things to make the world wonder, did her share, and was glad to do more than her share, of little things, which in the doing and in the spirit of the doing made "society girls" wonder at Laura's goodness and patience, and all which made other mothers envious of Laura's mother, and which, moreover, pleased the King on the throne in the central chamber of Laura's heart.

A SUNNY FACE.—Wear it. It is your privilege. It has the quality of mercy; it is twice blessed. It blesses its possessor, and all who come under its benign influence. It is a daily boon to him who wears it, and a constant, ever-flowing benediction to all his friends.

Men and women, youth and children, seek the friendship of the sunny-faced. All doors are open to those who smile. All social circles welcome cheerfulness. A sunny face is an open sesame to hearts and homes. By it burdens are lightened, cares dispelled, sorrows banished, and hope made to reign triumphant where fear, and doubt, and despondency, held high carnival. Your own life will be sweetened, your own hopes quickened, your own joys heightened, by your perennial, heaven-lighted, sunny face. Get the glow and radiance from such nearness to the throne as God permits to his own. Bring from a holy and divine communion a face luminous with light, and let it glow and shine on all around.

A little child on the street of a great city, wishing to cross at a point where the surging throng and the passing vehicles made the feat dangerous to the strong, and especially so to the weak, paused, hesitated, and then asked a sunny-faced gentleman to carry her across. It was the sunny face that won the child's confidence. Childhood runs into the arms of such.—Exchange.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

THE BOY WHO WOULD NOT GO TO BED.

You may think him a dunce,
But he begged for once
He might sit up all night, or as long as he pleased.
The nurse was in tears,
With her murmured, "My dears!"
But only the louder and faster he teased.

Overhearing the din
His father came in;
"Wish to sit up all night, John?" he wrathfully cried:
"You shall have your request
Till you've learned we know best;
Nurse can go; I will stay at this naughty boy's side."

When two hours had passed
John grew sleepy at last,
And so tired that he feared he would fall from his chair;
But attempting to go,
Heard his father's stern "No!
Keep your seat at the table; your place, sir, is there."

Oh, how slow ticked the clock,
With its dickory dock,
(For his father insists that the boy keep awake),
Till quite humbly he said,
"May I please go to bed?
I've found you were right, and I made a mistake."

His father said, "Yes;"
And now you can guess
If ever that boy did the same thing again;
No sermon could preach,
No punishment teach,
A lesson more clearly than he learned it then.

Now, boys, when you're told
That's it's bedtime, don't scold
And say that you feel just like keeping awake.
Sitting up all the night
Isn't such a delight;
Just try it for once, and you'll own your mistake.

To the Cousins.

Up to the time of this writing the editor has received eight answers to the question about the peculiarity of the two words, "abstemiously" and "facetiously." All of these are correct except one. The peculiarity is that these words contain all the vowels—a, e, i, o, u, y—in regular order. The following are the names of those who answered correctly in the order in which their letters were opened: Mary McLean, Guyden, La.; Sallie E. Windham, Stone, Ala.; Sadie Mauldin, Water Valley, Miss.; Tom West, Wesson, Miss.; Elma Wooster, Centerville, La.; Rachel L. Brenford, New Orleans, La.; Lawson Smith, Tehula, Miss.

Now for another question. A boy had a basket of nuts. When asked how many nuts he had, he said: "When I count 2 by 2, 3 by 3, 4 by 4, 5 by 5, 6 by 6, I have one remaining each time. When I count 7 by 7, I have none remaining." How many nuts had he?

"The Children's Scholarship" in Millsaps College.

MR. EDITOR: I am just in receipt of a letter from Master H. Otis White, of Vancleave, Miss., enclosing $1 toward the endowment of "The Children's Scholarship" in Millsaps College, and suggesting that each Methodist boy and girl in Mississippi be invited to join in this movement by contributing $1 for this purpose.

I like that suggestion, and, if I am not mistaken, the hundreds of Methodist children in the State will gladly unite in this cause. This will be "The Children's Crusade" against ignorance; and on the roll that will be kept each boy or girl that joins will have his or her name inscribed, and in the years that are to come it will be a source of pride to have been one of the "crusaders."

Who will join Master Otis in unfurling the banner of the new crusade? Yours truly,

A. F. WATKINS.

Jackson, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: I am in the country spending a few weeks with my uncle and aunt, and I think this pleasant morning a good time to write a letter to the ADVOCATE. I went to school until the first of August, and you may be sure that I was glad when papa and mamma told me that I could go to Uncle Gowers' for a month. My little brother, John Wesley, is here with me, and he makes us laugh a great deal, because he says so many funny things. The other day he told Aunt Mamie to come and see the turtle pecking the cow. She went, and it was a turkey gobbler. One day he told us to come see the crow that Lennie killed, and it was a turtle. We have a very good Sunday-school here. My uncle is the superintendent. We have church once a month. Bro. Meador is the pastor. We are all going to a barbecue next Friday. It is given by the Anti-Lottery League at Clio. Can any of the little cousins tell me how old Isaac was when he was offered as a sacrifice on Mt. Moriah?

Your little friend, GRACE THOMSON.

Bayou Barbary, La.

NEATNESS IN GIRLS.—Neatness is a good thing for a girl, and if she does not learn it when she is young, she never will. It takes a great deal more neatness to make a girl look well than it does to make a boy look passable. Not because a boy, to start with, is better looking than a girl, but his clothes are of a different sort, not so many colors in them; and people don't expect a boy to look so pretty as a girl. A girl that is not neatly dressed is called a sloven, and no one likes to look at her. Her face may be pretty, and her eyes bright, but if there is a spot of dirt on her cheek, and her finger's ends are black with ink, and her shoes are not laced or buttoned up, and her apron is dirty, and her collar is not buttoned, and her skirt is torn, she can not be liked. Learn to be neat, and when you have learned it, it will almost take care of itself.—Christian at Work.

HABITS OF COURTESY.—A boy who is polite to his father and mother is likely to be polite to every one else. A boy lacking politeness to his parents may have the semblance of courtesy in society, but is never truly polite in spirit, and is in danger, as he becomes familiar, of betraying his real want of courtesy. We are all in danger of living too much for the outside world, the impression which we make in society, coveting the good opinion of those who are in a sense part of ourselves, and who continue to sustain and be interested in us notwithstanding these defects of deportment and character. We say to every boy and to every girl, cultivate habits of courtesy and propriety at home—in the sitting-room and kitchen as well as in the parlor—and you will be sure in other places to deport yourself in a becoming and attractive manner.—Exchange.

New Trials of the Sims-Edison Torpedo.

An interesting trial of this torpedo, in which some improvements have been effected, was made at Willets Point, near New York City, on August 12, in the presence of many engineers and officers of the navy. The construction of the torpedo is substantially the same as the one tried last year, which was illustrated and described in the Scientific American, of July 26, 1890; but on the present occasion a longer cable was used, so that the torpedo was adapted to a range of over two miles. It will be remembered that the torpedo is a cigar-shaped copper cylinder about thirty feet long, adapted to carry four or five hundred pounds of a high explosive in its forward end, while about amidships it contains an electric motor and steering device, with a coil of cable to be paid out as the torpedo moves, and keeping it in constant connection with the shore. The torpedo is propelled by a thirty inch two-bladed propeller, and is suspended about six feet below a yawl-like float, the deck of the latter being only about six inches out of water.

In the recent trial the compartment for the explosive was filled with gravel, and the whole outfit weighed about three thousand pounds. The machine was lowered into the water and towed to the end of a pier, when it was started toward a yawl a mile off, by the turn of a crank on a switchboard, Mr. W. Scott Sims directing its course, and making it turn to either side at will. The torpedo was seat around the yawl and close to poles set up near it, being evidently under perfect control, and came back at high speed to the starting-point, the cable being laid in a loop on the bottom. Mr. Sims stated that she had developed 32 horse power, instead of 52, for which she was designed, and that her propeller had made 700 revolutions per minute instead of 850. Her speed was given us at the rate of twenty miles per hour, though it is thought she can readily run at a twenty-two mile rate, this being only the second trial of this boat. The amount of wire cable carried by this torpedo was 13,000 feet, the cable carrying two insulated conductors, one affording the power and the other connected with the tiller by which the device is steered.

When the torpedo was started by the turning on of the current, there was at first a slight strain on the cable and her nose plunged under the water several inches, while the froth came tumbling over the stern in a torrent. Then the shock ran out more easily, the bow came up and the stern dropped as does the stern of such a fast boat as the Cushing, while the water was thrown up in shining sheets more than two feet on each side of the knife-edged bow. On her return, after rounding the boat a mile off, full power was turned on, and the sight of the shining sheet of water and spray as she came driving in was thrilling. Arrived near the wharf, the bow was seen to be about a foot out of water, while about three-fourths of the hull was submerged in the form of the wake.

It is evident from trials like this that the Sims-Edison torpedo is a highly valuable adjunct for harbor defense and also for naval operations in general.—Scientific American.

THE NATURE OF A FLASH OF LIGHTNING.—Describing the electric discharge of a flash of lightning, Prof. Oliver J. Lodge compares the cloud and the earth as forming the two coats of a Leyden jar in the dielectrics of which houses and people exist. The occurrence of the discharge is determined at the moment when the maximum electric tension which the air can stand is reached. "At whatever point the electric tension rises to this value, smash goes the air. The breakage need not amount to a flash; it must give way along a great length to cause a flash; if the break is only local, nothing more than a brush or fizz may be seen. But when a flash does occur, it must be the weakest spot that gives way first—the place of maximum tension—and this is commonly on the smallest knob or surface which rears itself into the space between the dielectrics. If there be a number of small knobs or points, the glows and brushes become so numerous that the tension is greatly relieved, and the whole of a moderate thundercloud might be discharged in this way without the least violence. This is by far the best way of producing anything from lightning; do not let the lightning-flash occur if you can possibly avoid it. But one can not always prevent it, even by a myriad points. A good deal more might be done in this direction than is done; but still sometimes a cloud will descend so quickly, or it will have such a tremendous store of energy to get rid of, that no points are sufficiently rapid for the work, and crash it all comes at once." Where a flash occurs, a considerable area is relieved of strain, and the rush of electricity along the cloud and along the ground toward the line of flash sets up a state of things very encouraging to another or secondary flash or flashes, practically simultaneous with the first.—Popular Science Monthly.

GOVERNMENT NOTE PAPER.—Anybody who wishes can go into the big Crane & Co.'s factory at Dalton, Mass., and see the workmen place the blue silk on the machine that makes the paper for all the United States notes. The silk comes in spools, and is made by Belding, of Northampton. It is sold here in Bangor. There is no more secret about it than there is about the water flowing over the dam above the toll bridge. The real secret is in the composition of the paper. The silk thread idea is secured by patent, to be sure, but the making of the paper, the compound of the ingredients, is safe in the head of J. Murray Crane, who received the art from his father, who made bonds for Salmon P. Chase, Lincoln's Secretary of the Treasury, away back in war times. The pure linen pulp is in a big room, looking for all the world like any linen pulp. Then comes J. Murray Crane with a grip-sack. He and the "grip" enter the room together, and it is presumed that he locks the door, for the door is locked on the inside, and the "grip" does not look able to do it. They are closeted a half an hour. When they come out the pulp goes to the paper machine, and Mr. Crane and the grip go home. But the pulp is changed by that visit, and nobody has been able to penetrate the Crane secret. The company gets about fifty times as much for that paper as for other linen paper made in the same mill.—Bangor News.

Clouds consist of water divided into minute globules or drops. They differ in no essential respect from the steam emitted by a tea-kettle, or the mists and fogs that fill river valleys at sunrise. These forms of water are all produced in the same way.—Portland (Me.) Express.

OBITUARIES.

HARPER—Miss LUCY HARPER, the eldest daughter of George B. Harper, fell on sleep at her father's home in Hickory, Miss., Sept. 8, 1891, aged eighteen years eleven months and fifteen days. She was converted in 1885 during a revival in Meridian, Miss., conducted by Rev. Mr. Pearson. She would have graduated in the F. M. F. College, but failing health compelled her to return home a few weeks before commencement. We hoped and prayed that she might recover, but God called her away.

Hers was a pious home, and she early learned to love God and keep his commandments. Beautiful in person and attractive in manners, she was admired by all who knew her. When faithful physicians had done all they could, and found that she must die, they communicated this fact to her (through her aunt), with some fear lest she might sink beneath the excitement; but it only prepared her for a special work. She sent for all her friends in town to come, and pleaded with them to live better, and would have them promise her that they would before they left.

I administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to her on Sunday night before she died. She said Jesus was present, and requested us to sing, "Jesus, lover of my soul." She joined her feeble voice with us, and then commenced to shout and praise the Lord. Her father asked her if she was afraid to die. She said: "No, papa; why do you ask? If I am called at any time, I feel that I am ready and willing to go." With composure most marvelous, she dictated her affairs, requesting that the writer and Bro. Peebles, of Brandon, should conduct her funeral service, selecting the songs to be used in the church and those to be used at the grave. To be with her in her last moments did not seem to be in the presence of death. The whole atmosphere of the chamber was that of a joyous and festive hour; only the tears of kindred and friends suggested death. When asked by a friend why she did not weep, she said, "Jesus has taken all tears away and given me joy." Her character, conduct and experience of the divine favor increased in brightness as the setting sun of her mortal life approached its horizon. During her sickness she was not heard to murmur or complain. So calmly did she trust in Jesus, that her aunt (who was ever after able) was converted under her influence. She said, "I am so happy; I will have one star in my crown." She seemed wrapped in ecstacy of joy as she neared the portals of light. The hour of her departure come. In full possession of her senses this sweet spirit was ready to go, she was laughing, and her face shone with superhuman power. She said, "This is the holy laugh." She called her little brother just before she died, and said, "Come see the angels they have come for me, and here is Jesus, blessed Jesus!"

She gradually sank away till about twilight, when her chastened and purified spirit, all mantled with the glory of Christian triumph, in life and death, ascended to share the everlasting glory of her Redeemer before the eternal throne. J. M. MORSE.

ALLISON—Died of consumption, on Tuesday, Aug. 25, at 1:45 A. M., at his home near Liberty Hill, La., Mr. JOHN T. ALLISON, aged twenty-four years seven months and eighteen days.

Bro. Allison was born in Choctaw county, Miss., in the year 1867. His parents came to this State when he was quite young, and located in this parish, where he has resided until his death. He had been a member of the M. E. Church seven years, and died, as he had lived, a good man. We do not sorrow even as others which have no hope, for we believe that Jesus died and rose again. Even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

Bro. Allison said to his parents several times that he was ready and not afraid to die, but was resigned to the will of God, who doeth all things well.

May Israel's God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, comfort and protect the bereaved parents, brothers and sisters left behind. May they so live in this present world as to be able to meet within the pearly gates, where their tears will be wiped away, and their hearts that are now bleeding be healed, while the sighs of bitter grief be exchanged for a song of joy! G. L. T.

BAILEY—RUSH BAILEY was born Sept. 6, 1856, at Butler, Choctaw county, Ala.; came to Texas in December, 1884, and died of consumption at Yellow Prairie, Texas, Aug. 2, 1891.

Before daylight, Sunday morning, Aug. 2, Dr. D. H. Bailey was at my door desiring me to go with him to the bedside of his brother, who was at the point of death and unprepared to meet his God. We drove as rapidly as possible through the darkness, and in a short time I was at the side of the dying man. He was perfectly conscious and knew well his danger. Among other things he told me that in his folly he had suffered himself to be influenced by an infidel who had blighted his life. Putting his arm around my neck, he said, "Oh! I have led the life of a sinner, and this is what it has brought me to." Earnestly I prayed with him, and told him of the love of God. But still he felt no peace. Finally the light broke upon him, and, calling for his mother and brother, he embraced them and declared that he was ready to go. I received him into the church. That afternoon he quietly passed away, trusting implicitly in the love of Christ who died for him.

CATCHINGS—JOSEPH H. CATCHINGS was born in Georgetown, Miss., March 6, 1831, and died at his home, Sept. 11, 1891.

In every relation of life Bro. Catchings acted well his part. Obedient to his parents as a child; as a husband, gentle, loving and kind; as a citizen, he was above reproach by the suffrage of his fellow-citizens. He was elected to a seat in the lower house of the Legislature of his native State, where he won distinction by his loyalty to the important trust committed to him. As a member of the church, he was at all times loyal to God and his church; as trustee of church property, and as steward, he filled the requirements as well as anyone I ever knew. He loved the church, its doctrines, discipline and institutions. He loved and honored its preachers for their "work's sake." His heart and his home were always open to them, and as much as was in his power, he ministered to their comfort. He has left a bereaved wife, a sorrowing church and a saddened community to mourn his death. His death was the close of a beautiful life, adorned by love to God and love to his neighbor. He rests in peace and the hope of eternal life.

H. R. CALDWELL.

WOODS—Near Phœnix, Miss., July 30, 1891, at seven o'clock, aged one year ten months and twenty days, LUCY BELL, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. D. Woods, winged her flight to the sweet realm beyond the stars, to the blessed mansion where Christ says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Though brightly the sun is shining and the sound of carreling birds falls sweetly on the ear, yet is that household darkened. Dreary to them the brightest day, for their darling is taken from them. Like a broken lily, she now lies cold in the silent church-yard. But we know that in the bright beyond she is freed from all sorrows and cares, and is a bright and shining angel.

Dear friends, take your sorrows to him who promised to comfort the mourning heart, and you will surely find peace and consolation; for he is a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief. L. JESSIE ABEL.

BALLARD—Near Keller Station, Morehouse parish, La., Sept. 10, 1891, Mrs. M. J. BALLARD, aged fifty years.

The deceased was a native of Mississippi and a niece of General Heard, a citizen, we believe, at one time of this parish. Her disease was bronchitis, and after much suffering, and with perfect resignation, she passed away.

She became a member of the M. E. Church, South, about twenty years ago under the ministry of Rev. J. L. Wright.

She was true to her profession and to her Savior during the twenty years of her religious life, and died a most triumphant and peaceful death. She did not wish to live longer, but was anxious to be released from suffering and to be at rest. She died like one starting on a journey, bidding her children adieu, and begging them to rejoin her in her future happy home. She died talking, and sent back words of cheer from the brink of the last river.

H. ARMSTRONG.

LAZARUS—KENDALL WRIGHT, son of W. C. and Adaline Wright Lazarus, died Sept. 5, 1891, of swamp fever, aged fourteen years six months and twenty-seven days.

Though so young, he had "remembered his Creator in the days of his youth," and had joined the Methodist Church at a recent protracted meeting, held at Locust Grove, by Rev. C. W. Crisler.

His final sickness lasted only a few days, during which he received every attention from loving relatives and kind friends. He expressed the belief that he was going to die, and when surrounded by his sorrowing family he put an arm around the neck of mother and sister, and said, "Ma, sister, let us go look for Jesus;" and we, who feel a godly sorrow and grieve not as those without hope, believe that he died the death of the righteous, and that his last end was peace.

Our farewell is not forever!

SMITH—HENRY HOOTER, infant son of Bro. G. W. and Sister Carrie Smith, died in the arms of Jesus, Aug. 17, 1891, aged eleven months and two days.

Yes, little Henry is gone from the arms of his parents to the arms of one who has said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me;" and, resting our faith upon these words, we can launch them out upon the dark and turbid waters of the river of death with faith in the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob to bring again from the dead those so dear to our hearts.

Sorrow! yes, dear parents, you will, you must, sorrow, but not as those who have no hope. Your darling is not lost, but gone on before. May you follow after!

G. W. ALEXANDER.

Phœnix, Miss.

HENDERSON—Died of paralysis, in hope of eternal life, near Slaughter, La., Aug. 31, 1891, Mrs. MARTHA E. HENDERSON, widow of Daniel Henderson, deceased.

Our sister was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at a camp meeting near Greensburg, La., about 1860, where she held her membership until her death, ever maintaining a pure Christian character, and bearing her part in the support of the church, though she spent much of her time of late years with loved ones in Texas.

Though she was not permitted to leave us a dying testimony of her future hopes, she left us a still better one—the testimony of her life—devoted to the cause of Christ, and implicit trust in his promises. "So we mourn not as those who have no hope." P. HOWARD.

POWELL—Mrs. ALMIRA POWELL was born April 3, 1812; died July 24, 1891. She married early in life Thomas Powell, and soon after consecrated herself to God by giving herself to the church. The sister of four brothers and three sisters, the mother of seven children, she outlived them all save one daughter and one brother.

She loved the church of her choice with an earnest devotion, supported its institutions to the best of her ability, and was consistent to her vows.

Though a great sufferer, it was only of the body, for she expressed herself as having the assurance that God was her father. As a Christian she lived; as a Christian she died. Her frail body is in its last long home, but her spirit is with her God. PASTOR.

GRAY—Whereas, It has pleased God to call from labor to reward Sister EMMA GRAY, who died Aug. 31, 1891; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the members of New Salem Church and Sunday-school realize with deep sorrow the irreparable loss of a faithful and devoted member, true Christian and friend; one whose place in her class was never vacant unless kept away by illness or some other unavoidable cause.

Resolved, That we tender our heartfelt sympathy and condolence to her bereaved family, believing that we sorrow not as those who have no hope, but that our loss is her eternal gain.

Resolved, That these resolutions be recorded on the Minutes of this Sunday-school; a copy of same be furnished the family of the deceased.

Mrs. Million's Ride.

When Mrs. Million goes to ride she travels forth in state,
Her horses, full of fire and pride, go prancing from the gate;
But all the beauties of the day she views with languid eye,
For flesh in weakness wastes away, her voice is but a sigh.

For Mrs. Million is in an advanced stage of catarrh, and all the luxuries that wealth can buy fail to give her comfort. She envies her rosy waiting-maid, and would give all her riches for that young woman's pure breath and blooming health. Now, if some true and disinterested friend would advise Mrs. Million of the wonderful merits of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, she would learn that her case is not past help. $500 reward is offered by the manufacturers for a case of catarrh in the head which they can not cure.

There is nothing which succeeds like success; and the success of any publication which admits advertising is also the success of the advertisers.

The Armless Wonder.

He uses the harmless wonder, Pearline, for bathing. A teaspoonful on the sponge or wash rag is enough. You'll find the directions on every package. Try it. It's as clean and refreshing as a Turkish bath—almost nothing to pay—no danger, no more than with good soap—but there's no soap as good. It does more, it's more effective—in the bath as in everything else. And it washes everything—in hot or cold, hard or soft, salt or fresh water. It makes no difference if you use Pearline. In the laundry and for house cleaning Pearline makes a saving of dollars for every penny of its cost—every grocer sells it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back.

Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company, on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 243 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

A New and Useful Invention,

in which every citizen of New Orleans is vitally interested, is now being introduced by the Coe Man'f'g Co., Limited, 101 Camp street—Coe's Automatic Rain Water Cut-off, patented April 21, 1891. This machine is very moderate in cost ($5.50 to $10 according to size and material). It is very simple and perfectly automatic and reliable. Requires no attention after it is once put on a cistern pipe, and will effectually prevent all Dust, Dirt, Refuse, Roaches, Rats, etc., from getting into the cistern at all times, thereby insuring pure, wholesome water. It will save, perhaps, ten times its cost in doctor's and drug bills in one year.

Fashion's Edict.

"The time was," remarked the old physician, "when frail health was fashionable with ladies."

All that is changed now—Creole Female Tonic has been the means of restoring robust health to thousands of ladies that formerly were victims of that popular fad.

In many cases it is very hard to fix the bounds of good and evil, because these part, as day and night, which are separated by twilight.—Whichcot.

Hall's Hair Renewer is pronounced the best preparation made for thickening the growth of the hair, and restoring that which is gray to its original color.

To be always intending to live a new life, but never to find time to set about it, is as if a man should put off eating and drinking from one day to another, till he is starved and destroyed.—Tillotson.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

There is such fullness in that Book that oftentimes it says much by saying nothing; and not only its expressions, but its silences are teaching, like the dial in which the shadow as well as the light informs us.—Boyle.

CAMP MEETING.

The Spring Creek Camp Meeting, Rapides parish, La., will begin on Friday, Oct. 9. A boarding tent and accommodations ample. All are invited to attend.

S. H. COOPER, P. C.

The sugar beet roots throughout Europe are progressing fairly. The weight per acre in Germany, it is believed, will be only from 10 to 12 per cent. short, but this may be offset by the increase in the area sown and the slightly better quality of the roots. The roots in Austria are not large. The prospects for a material increase in the roots in France are rather small, but the yield will be of a decidedly superior quality and there will be a large increase in the production.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

St. Louis was the scene of two fires on Sept. 27, which caused great loss.

The supreme treasurer of the Catholic Knights of America, who can not be located, has a shortage in his accounts of $76,000.

Dallas, Texas, was the scene of another fire last week, which destroyed fifteen buildings. The fire department was powerless to check the flames.

The Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by a vote of 124 to 27, have voted to admit women to General Conferences as lay delegates.

Striking cotton pickers on a plantation in Lee county, Ark., attacked men who had been given their places, and a general riot ensued, in which several were killed and many wounded.

A fire occurred in a wheat elevator in Minneapolis, Minn., on Sept. 24. Twenty-three firemen were caught by falling walls and buried beneath the bricks. Many of them died from their injuries.

On last Saturday night many cities in the Mississippi Valley experienced shocks of an earthquake. The rattling of windows and rocking of houses caused much terror. No serious damage is reported.

Forest fires were raging in Minnesota and Wisconsin and North Dakota last week, and several villages were burned. Many lumber camps were destroyed. In Minnesota one hundred million feet of pine were burned.

At a meeting of the Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, in Cincinnati, the necessary three-fourths vote not having been obtained, the lodge decided to postpone for a year the consideration of the liquor question. The effect of this will be to leave saloon keepers eligible to membership for a year to come.

During a revival in a Jacksonville (Fla.) colored church, the gaslight, owing to some defect in the pipes, began to flicker. The action of the light appealed to the superstition of the congregation, and a panic ensued. In a rush made for the doors many were crushed, several of whom died from injuries.

An interview with a large number of citizens in regard to the origin, etc., of so many fires in Dallas, resulted in the consensus of opinion being obtained that a large number of the fires were of incendiary origin, the result of over-stocking and hard times. The New Orleans insurance companies have suffered heavy losses in all the Dallas fires.

The Census Office has issued a bulletin on the coal product of the United States. It shows the production amounted to 141,229,153 short tons in the census year, and was valued at the mines, before any expenses for shipment, at $160,224,323. The product increased 97.57 per cent. during the decade, and the total value 67.53 per cent. The total number of persons engaged in the industry was 299,559, who received in the aggregate $130,130,928 as wages.

The annual report of Commissioner Raum, of the Pension Bureau, submitted to the Secretary of the Interior, shows that on June 30, 1891, there were 767,160 pensioners borne on the rolls of the bureau, being 138,216 more than were carried on the rolls of the bureau at the close of the last fiscal year. The total amount disbursed on account of pensions, expenses, etc., during the fiscal year was $118,548,959.71, as compared with $106,493,890.19 disbursed during the preceding fiscal year.

FOREIGN.

It is said that the Chinese government has granted to the Jesuits an immense tract of land as compensation for losses which the order suffered during the recent riots.

The Pope has issued a circular letter to the German and Austrian clergy condemning dueling in the strongest terms, and urging them to use all their influence for the suppression of this sort of fighting.

The Queen of Spain has received an autograph letter from the Emperor of Germany, in which the Emperor deplores the losses and suffering caused by the floods in Spain, and offers a large contribution to the relief fund.

The Berlin section of the Salvation Army began a week of self-dental on Sept. 26. The money will be sent to General Booth. Within a year the German Salvationists have sent 19,754 marks to the general fund of the organization.

An English gunboat has been dispatched to Cape Juby, on the west coast of Sahara, opposite Fuertaventura (one of the Canary Islands), where the Moors have rebelled and threaten to destroy a factory owned and operated by British subjects.

The trial of the men charged with the responsibility of the railway disaster at St. Mande, in France, has been concluded. The engineer has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment, and the station-master to four months' imprisonment, for negligence.

The winter crops of Russia will be scanty, and a renewal of famine is apprehended in 1892. Six provinces report a probable failure of the crop. A destructive worm has made its appearance in Moscow province. The failure is due to bad weather, late sowing and unwillingness to use grain for sowing during the famine.

Details of riots at Ichang, brought by the steamship Empress of China, state that the Catholic and Protestant missions and houses of several foreigners were plundered and burned. The English customhouse and consulate were left uninjured. The Franciscan Sisters were with difficulty saved by the Chinese authorities. The damage to property is estimated at $300,000.

That tired feeling is entirely overcome by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which creates an appetite, rouses the liver, cures headache, and gives renewed strength and vigor to the whole body. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar to itself. Sold by all druggists.

ROBT. J. HARP, P. E.

For wounds and inflammations, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is healing and soothing.

"Continual dropping wears away the stone."

The continual breaking of lamp-chimneys costs a good deal in the course of a year.

You can stop it. Get Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass." You will have no more trouble with breaking, from heat. You will have clear glass instead of misty; fine instead of rough; right shape instead of wrong; and uniform, one the same as another.

You will pay a nickel a chimney more; and your dealer will gain in good-will what he loses in trade; he will widen his trade by better service.

Dear Sir: I took your Medical Discovery for one year for Scrofula on my knee. When I began I was told by the Doctors my limb would have to be amputated, but it cured me. Well, that was 13 years ago and no signs of it since. I thought you and the world ought to know it.

Yours very truly,
MRS. M. D. DALTON.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

Second Ecumenical Methodist Conference.

BY REV. J. W. CORNELIUS.

About the greatest "Methodist meeting" ever held, of officially delegated representatives from all parts of the world, is now in session at the Metropolitan Church, Washington City. It is the Second Ecumenical Conference of Methodism, having begun on Wednesday morning, Oct. 7, and probably continuing until about the twentieth.

Abel Stevens, LL.D., the great historian of our common Methodism, has recently said that it will take some "reading up" for the Methodist people to appreciate intelligently the real magnitude and importance of the present Conference. We propose to assist in this preparatory investigation, lest the Ecumenical Conference should come and go ere we realize its immense significance.

The First Ecumenical Methodist Conference was held in City Road Chapel—Wesley's own church—London, September, 1881. The suggestion of it came from the General Conference of the M. E. Church held in Baltimore, May, 1876. Committees were appointed by that body to enter into preliminary correspondence with all known branches of English-speaking Methodists throughout the world. That Chrysostom of the American Church, Bishop Matthew Simpson, who was at the head of the committee, was very enthusiastic in promoting the enterprise, stimulating it with the diamond of his brilliant pen and with the wand of his fascinating eloquence. In every direction, and on both sides of the sea, assent was given to the proposition, and it was soon seen that the thought of a really Ecumenical—world-embracing—Conference of Methodism would materialize into a historical fact. The British Wesleyan Conference made important practical suggestions as to the limits of discussion on topics both of "doctrinal basis" and of polity, so that there should be avoided any possible unpleasant contention on points so conscientiously and earnestly maintained as to have caused the separate organization of the Methodist family. With such precautions, and in the true spirit of a general Methodist brotherhood, the First Ecumenical Conference, composing 400 official delegates from nearly thirty distinct bodies, met at City Road Chapel—so precious in reminiscences of the origin and organization of the greatest revival church of the centuries.

The present Ecumenical Conference is composed of 500 delegates, representing officially nearly every known division of Methodism in the world. Those from British and Continental Methodist Societies (and their missions and affiliated bodies) are designated on the program as being included in what is called the Eastern Section. All American churches and their affiliated bodies are included in the Western Section. There are 200 delegates from the Eastern Section and 300 from the Western Section. The following statement shows the latest census statistics of actual church membership in the churches of the Western Section, to which we also append, for convenience, the number of delegates each church is entitled to:

Methodist Episcopal Church	2,283,154	126
Meth. Episcopal Church, South	1,172,288	64
African Methodist Episcopal	427,476	18
African Meth. Episcopal Zion	425,000	15
Colored Methodist Episcopal	119,982	9
American Wesleyan	18,000	6
Methodist Protestant	148,416	9
Wesleyan Meth. Connection	20,000	3
Free Methodist	22,861	3
Congregational Methodist	8,500	3
Primitive Methodist	5,637	3
Canada Methodist	233,868	24
United Brethren in Christ	60,000	8
Union Apostolic	1,700	1
Union American Meth. Epis'l	3,000	3
Independent Methodist	5,000	2
African Union Meth. Protest't	2,500	3

Total communicants of the Western Section, 4,958,384; total delegates of the Western Section, 300.

The 300 delegates of the Western Section, according to the above exhibit, represent an actual church membership of about 5,000,000. Allowing the same ratio of communicants for the foreign delegates, there will be three and one-third million more. Thus the present Ecumenical Conference represents an actual church membership, of the English-speaking Methodists of the world, of over 8,000,000. A very moderate estimate, therefore, would give the Methodist constituency represented in the Ecumenical Conference as, at least, 25,000,000.

A distinct idea of the purposes in view in such a vast convocation will aid in properly appreciating the Ecumenical Conference. There is no legislative function assumed, such as to some extent might be exercised by a Pan-Anglican or Pan-Presbyterian Assembly. There is no design at any consolidation of forces for political or ecclesiastical effect. The Conference is neither a dress-parade nor a "trust." It is rather a spiritual reunion. We agree to disagree, but to vie with one another in brotherly love. The London Times sneered at the First Ecumenical Conference as "a great big class meeting." So be it! If true Christian unity and fraternity be promoted, the cause of our Lord will be greatly advanced wherever the Wesleyan banner waves. For the first time since the separation of the two greatest bodies of Methodism their delegations officially met in the First Ecumenical Conference. Perhaps that might have been so of other sub-divisions; but meeting as brethren, and to discuss supreme topics on which all are in accord, there was new light thrown on many practical religious subjects. How to economize Methodist forces where two or more branches of Methodism occupy the same territory in home work or in mission work, is one of the practical difficulties which will be solved by the ecumenics of love quicker than in any other way. And when these 500 representative men of talent and of Christian life return to their homes and their churches, there will be a new inspiration everywhere felt in the desire for holiness and to "spread scriptural holiness in these and in all lands."

The program shows the class of topics which will be mainly discussed, and some reflection upon them will show how widely they interpenetrate not only Methodist thought and all practical Christianity, but also the very framework of our civilization. As might be expected in an ecumenical brotherhood of Methodists, the present status of our churches in every part of the earth is to be well defined in the earliest addresses after the organization. Then come the wider themes—wide as earth and heaven—the essential unity of the Christian Church. The relation of the church to scientific thought; to education, general and special (higher education, particularly); to social problems; to great reforms like temperance, etc., will be profoundly considered. The facilities and agencies of Christianity, the great field of the work, the outlook, etc., will awaken the best brain power and deepest emotions of this greatest representative religious assembly ever held on the American continent.

It is natural to inquire for some of the celebrities of this Ecumenical Conference. Our home churches can furnish many, but we pass now to a few of the more noted men from abroad. There is first that venerable author and minister to whom we are indebted for the opening sermon, Rev. William Arthur, A. M. He is now seventy-two years old, but is looking well. Christian people throughout the world cherish his name for having given them "The Tongue of Fire," "The Successful Merchant," "Mission of Mysore," "The Observance of the Sabbath," etc. Mr. Arthur, a native Irishman, was first personally known in this country in 1855 as an authorized lecturer for Irish Methodism, and afterward as the representative of the British Conference to our General Conference.

Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, M. A., editor of the Methodist Times, is another prominent figure. Dr. John Hall, the famous Presbyterian divine of New York, after a recent visit to London, said that Mr. Hughes was next to Spurgeon in the London pulpit. He is also at the head of what is known in London as the The Forward or Reform Movement in England, whose headquarters are in the West End of London. He has already addressed large audiences in this country in the interest of this work.

Rev. Wm. J. Dawson, M. A., another delegate from the British Wesleyan Conference, is a Scotchman, and is frequently compared with Punshon for eloquence, possibly outranking that distinguished orator in literary qualifications. He has also made a specialty in literature of poetry, having written disquisitions on the versifications of Woodworth, Browning and Tennyson. He is the popular author of "The Makers of Modern English," "The Threshold of Manhood," "The Socialism of Jesus," "Quest and Vision," etc. He is editor of The Young Man.

Rev. T. B. Stephenson, LL.D., president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, is one of the truly eminent men from abroad now at the Conference. He is known at home as a man of large intellectual and executive ability, and as a preacher of decided force. His specialty has been in the field of gospel charities.

Percy Bunting, M. A., son of one of the most eminent men English Methodism ever produced, Jabez Bunting, is one of the leaders of thought in England. He is editor of the Contemporary Review, a literary magazine that takes rank among the best of its class in Europe or America. Mr. Bunting was also a prominent figure in the First Ecumenical Conference.

Hon. S. J. Way, LL.D., Chief Justice of Australia, is said to be one of the greatest of living men.

Rev. David J. Walker, D. D., secretary of the British Educational Society, who visited America about one year ago, and charmed many of our ministers and churches by his genial, social life and splendid pulpit talent, is another one of the prominent figures in this Conference.

Rev. M. Leliever, president of the French Wesleyan Conference, is quite an author as well as a preacher. One of the well-known volumes from his pen is the "Life of Wesley."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. W. Ellison: "We have just closed a good meeting at Whitetown, in which five joined the church, and many others greatly blessed. The meeting continued two weeks."

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Pleasant Hill, La., Sept. 25: "I began my meeting at Marthaville, Saturday night, Sept. 12; continued through the week till Sunday night, Bro. Boltz helping in 'power and demonstration of the Spirit.' Result: nine accessions, several conversions, and church very greatly revived. Frequent feasts of love were had as we communed with each other and the Lord. To him be all the praise."

Rev. J. E. Buck, Rural Hill, Miss., Sept. 26: "Having closed my round of protracted meetings, I send reports. Glorious revival at every church. Thirty-seven additions to the church; twenty-eight infants baptized. Many new family altars, and old ones reestablished. We are indebted to the following brethren for valuable help: Revs. J. T. Moody, C. W. Perkins, S. M. Thames, and W. C. Lester, of the traveling connection; T. W. Marble, L. L. Brewer, local; and Kelly, Taylor and Watts, of other denominations."

E. E. H., Edwards, Miss., Sept. 28: "The congregation of the Methodist Church in this town was yesterday favored by two of the grandest sermons we ever heard, by Rev. Dr. Featherstun, of Woodville, Miss., who came to fill our absent pastor's place. The fact that Dr. Featherstun preached here twenty-three years ago, when but a youth, added great interest to the occasions. Long may all the churches of the living God be reinvigorated by the addition of such intellectual and spiritual worth to their ministry, thus hastening the coming of Christ's kingdom on earth."

Rev. Wm. Schuble, Bayou Scie, La., Oct. 1: "Had a meeting of nine days at this place. Preached nineteen times. A number of conversions and reclamations. Eight accessions; some family altars established. A Conference collection ($33 15) on last Sunday morning; a victorious closing service at night. Large congregations attentive. The Lord was my help in this meeting. Praise the Lord! Had intended to continue this week; but a falling tree put a stop to that. It cut a bad gash upon my head and wrecked my gig. It is a mystery to me how I made such a narrow escape."

Rev. R. A. Davis, Downsville, La., Sept. 21: "On the second instant I closed another interesting service on this circuit, which had been carried on from Saturday, Aug. 29, to Wednesday night, at Wilhites Chapel (where we are trying to finish a new church). Bro. Chas. Staples was with me from Saturday till Tuesday night, and preached with power in the Spirit of the Lord. The result of the meeting was twenty-one accessions to the church, and many expressed themselves as having been blessed. Thus the Lord is wonderfully blessing and owning our labors on the Downsville circuit."

Rev. J. H. Smith, Weir, Miss., Sept. 25: "I have just closed our meeting at Salem, Weir circuit, North Mississippi Conference. The Lord was with us in power. Bro. L. M. Lipscomb, in passing, stopped and preached us a good sermon. Bro. Boone preached us a good sermon. The church was ready for the revival. Results: nineteen accessions and thirty-three conversions. One peculiarity of the meeting was, that everyone that came forward for prayers was converted, and but one had to come forward but once. This makes about 70 accessions to the church, and 108 conversions. One meeting to hold yet. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

Rev. M. E. Tumlin, Nettleton, Miss., Sept. 25: "We have just closed another excellent meeting in the country at Palestine. There were 14 or 15 professions, and 10 accessions on profession of faith. The church was greatly revived, and the whole community stirred. The Lord has been with us in power. Rev. W. A. Bowlin, a recent graduate of Houston College, rendered efficient service in two of my meetings. His little sister came to the altar the other night, and he did not know her till she was converted. When he recognized her as his sister in the flesh, and as a new creature in Christ, he said, 'Praise the Lord; it's Bessie.' Thank God."

Rev. W. L. Hamil, Harrisonburg, La., Sept. 29: "Two new churches in course of construction (hope to have them complete by Conference); then Harrisonburg will boast of four appointments, four Sunday-schools, with as many houses for worship. Since we returned from District Conference we have held three revival meetings on the work—Sicily Island, Beach Grove and Magnolia, resulting in much good to the membership. Many conversions and thirty accessions. We have done 'our own work,' with the exception of three sermons. Finances have been hard all the year; but we believe everything will end up right. God has been a very present help all the year, and to him be all the glory."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Williamsburg, Miss., Sept. 24: "I have just finished my fourth protracted meeting at Good Hope Church, and the Lord was with us in great power. Sinners were convicted, mourners were converted, and nearly every member of the church was blessed. Many in the experience meeting rose up and expressed their love for God and his cause—both old and young. The result of this meeting was seven accessions to the church, four adults baptized, and two children, and the church graciously revived. We had Rev. N. B. Young with us, and he did the most of the preaching, to the edification of all present. We feel under many obligations to Bro. Young, but we give God the glory for his goodness. Pray for us."

Rev. G. Bancroft, Portorvillo, Miss., Sept. 25: "Bro. T. L. Mellen, P. E., held our third Quarterly Conference yesterday. The gospel, as he preached it, gave no uncertain sound. He looks after the interest of the district. I reported to date sixteen accessions, and some children baptized. Have two new churches nearly completed. Deed to land to one secured; expect soon to get the other made. Had some gracious revivals on the work. Indebted to Bros. Langford and Pugh, of our Conference; also Bros. Kirkland, of Livingston, Ala., and Burton, of Sumterville, Ala., local preachers, for valuable services rendered. I preached in this country forty-two years ago (then almost a 'wilderness'), but note some harvest yield of gospel seed sown in years gone by. Many of the friends of the years agone have crossed over. Cotton crop cut off considerably, but hope to bring up the Conference claims."

Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, Caseyville circuit, Mississippi Conference: "We have been sadly bereaved at Bethel, the most important church of this charge, in the death of three valuable members. First, Bro. Pink Buoham, in February; then in June, Dr. E. R. Applewhite, and in August, Dr. J. W. Magee. These were good and true men, and their places can not at present be filled. Besides, we have dismissed by letter from this church five, and from the entire charge thirty. We have added to the church on profession of faith eight. We have held three good meetings, resulting in some happy conversions and reclamations, and in blessings to the entire membership of the church. In explanation of the small number of accessions, it is sufficient to say that our material is pretty well exhausted. Three denominations occupy the same territory, and everyone that can be reached has already been brought into one or the other of these denominations. We think we will report at Conference all assessments paid."

Rev. I. L. Peebles, Brandon, Miss.: "Our fourth Quarterly Conference for this year has been held. Joshua Williams, Willis Wilson, J. R. Enochs, Dr. W. H. White, Dr. J. T. B. Berry, Ed. Jack and C. A. Dewees were elected stewards for the ensuing Conference year. J. R. Enochs was elected district steward. Our collections were not all up; but we dream of nothing short of having them up in full by the time of our Annual Conference, the Lord permitting. Our presiding elder, Bro. P. A. Johnston, has held his last Quarterly Conference here as presiding elder for a season of one Conference year, at least, this being his fourth year on this district. We part with him reluctantly. My family and myself love him much as an elder, friend and brother. He has been to us as a father. We shall miss his quarterly visits. If anyone wishes to know something of what has been accomplished on this district since he took charge of it, let him consult its statistics before and since he took charge."

Rev. J. M. Massey, Banner circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "I closed last night (Sept. 24) my eighth protracted meeting. I began at Paris, and the good Lord blessed us with an outpouring of his Spirit. Several conversions, five accessions to the church. Next at Hunter's Chapel, where we had another gracious outpouring of God's Spirit, and 15 or 20 conversions, and 10 accessions. Next at Banner, and the good Lord blessed us here. Some conversions, four accessions, and the church revived. Next at Pleasant Hill, where we had some trouble in the way. However, we had a revival in the church. Many came up to be prayed for; three accessions. Next at Liberty, where we had a good, interesting meeting among the members of the church. One accession. Next at Sarepta, with some interest manifest, and two accessions to the church. Next at New Prospect. Began with the third Quarterly Conference on Saturday, and was good from beginning to end, with great rejoicing among the Christians, and six accessions to the church. Next at Salem, where we had an outpouring of God's Spirit on the church. Several conversions, backsliders reclaimed, and fifteen accessions to the church. I have received this year to date fifty-seven to membership in the church, and we expect several more before Conference. We have baptized thirteen infants. Have built one new church, and have another on the way. We are trying to move up to a better state or condition of things on Banner circuit. We hope to have a good report at Conference."

Rev. R. S. Gale, Shiloh circuit, Mississippi Conference, Sept. 25: "We have held six protracted meetings on this work. Have had twenty-two accessions; baptized thirteen children. Our meeting at Salem deserves special mention. I consider it one of the best I ever attended. The Spirit came in power, convicting and converting. Many shouted aloud the praises of God. Both women and men prayed at the altar for penitents. There were eleven accessions. Bros. Lane and Foreman, L. P.'s, did fine work, acceptable and profitable. Bro. Johnson gave us one sermon at Bethany, pronounced by all to be a fine sermon. The more I am with him the more I love him, both as a man and preacher. Rev. E. L. Rawls, from Westville, gave us three good sermons. This work is now in a good spiritual condition. Behind financially, but coming up slowly. We hope to have a full report at Conference. ADVOCATE taking well, and subscribers increasing. We have lumber on the ground to build a new church at Gum Springs. Hope to complete it by Conference. Our camp meeting at Shiloh is yet in the future. Begins Oct. 9. Our church at that place is in a fine condition, and we expect great things. We have a good Sunday-school and prayer meeting, and many live Christians at work for the advancement of the Master's kingdom. A kind and appreciative people. We were well pounded this week by those people. A wagon loaded down with good things—corn, meat, molasses, flour, meal, lard, potatoes, apples, etc.—came as a present to the pastor and his loved ones. May the Lord reward and bless them! Such acts of kindness cheer the life of an itinerant, and soften the hard places. If you, Mr. Editor, will come to our camp meeting, we promise you a good time. Be sure to come. My health has greatly improved this year, and I feel stronger in the Lord."

Rev. R. O. Brown, Shaw, Miss., Sept. 30: "The Conference year is drawing to a close, and I send you a few dots from Shaw and New Salem charge. We have had a prosperous year, and served the kindest, best people in the Greenville district. Our meetings have been held, and the result of the year's work, thirty-eight additions to the church, most of them on profession of faith. The work has progressed steadily from the beginning of the year. Conversions all through the year, and genuine conversions at that. The secret of our success we believe to be a spiritual church at work for the salvation of souls, and reliance upon God for the blessing. Our meeting at New Salem was a grand 'feast of fat things to all.' Christians shouted the praises of God, sinners were convicted and converted. We were assisted by Bro. Young, of Inla—a grand, good man, who preaches a sound gospel, emphasizing the necessity of repentance, faith and regeneration. Our presiding elder, Bro. Standefer, was with us one day, and preached twice to the comfort and edification of all. We will have three young men from our charge to preach. They will need preparation, however, and will, perhaps, be ready to enter Millsaps College when it opens. We have had valuable assistance this year from Bro. Wyatt, of Como, and our co-worker at Cleveland, Bro. Shipman. Cleveland is building up, spiritually, by his wise, pious ministration. Oh, that we had more like him! Greenville district offers grander opportunities for consecrated Christian effort than any section of our Conference. The people are liberal and kind. With a membership of less than two thousand, the district paid more for the support of the ministry than any other, and raised more money from all sources than any other with a membership far less than any district in our Conference. We hope to have a parsonage soon for the next preacher on this work."

MOODS OF THE AIR.

BY S. W. HITCHCOCK.

O soft and balmy Air, how in your moods I trace
A semblance to emotions in the human race.
At times how soft and tender in thy thought,
As with a velvet hand our cheek is sought,
O wandering Air!

Thou bringest perfumes on thy unseen wings,
As if thou lovest felt, yet unseen things;
A type of feelings hidden in the heart,
And yet of life the larger part,
O Air invisible!

How in caresses oft bestowed, soft Air,
There seems entreaty that suggests a prayer;
A sentiment so tender, holy, true,
As breathes sometimes—alas! they are so few—
O soft, caressing Air!

And then how cold, how piercing, is thy breath
When leaves and flowers are frozen e'en to death;
So haughty spirits fell with gleaming knife
The tender things which beautify and fill their life,
O cold and cutting Air!

And when fierce passion bursts her bounds,
How devastation follows in thy rounds;
Fortune and life with thee are naught;
To vent thy fury all thou sought,
O cruel, murderous Air!

And oft on lonely, cloudy nights,
When dimly burn the upper lights,
How do thy moans and sighs express
The gloom and sorrow of a heart's distress,
O sighing, sobbing Air!

The Lord's Prayer.—No. 2.

BY REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

"After this manner pray ye." Let it be a model, a sample of the substance and manner of our prayers. As we remarked in our first number, God never prays, nor needs to pray; but the man, Christ Jesus, prayed. He had need to, though holy, harmless and undefiled, for he was tempted in all points like as we are, and he felt the force of these temptations, or else they would have been no temptations at all. We know from the profoundly touching words of Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, the awful agony he endured when he said, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death," and prayed three several times, saying the same words: "Oh, my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." As then "the man that is called Jesus" prayed—the holiest that ever lived on earth—then there can be none who are exalted above the need of prayer. All should pray, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting. But Jesus prayed as well as an example to us in this, as in all things, to follow him who is the light of the world and the "way."

"After this manner"—the spiritual and the divine before the material and temporal. In prayer always to seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, looking not first at the things which are seen—the material and temporal—but at the spiritual and eternal; for what shall it profit us if we gain the world and lose our souls?

"After this manner"—laconically, not "much speaking as the heathen do," crying from the morning until noon, "Hear us, O Baal, hear us," and from midday until the ninth hour, "Hear us, O Baal, hear." The Mohammedans repeat a single exclamation twice a score of times, "O God, O God, O God." And Romanists, as an act of penance, repeat their prayers very many times, thinking to merit pardon by this "much speaking." Most of the effectual prayers recorded in the Bible are remarkable for their brevity. "If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean;" "Lord, that I may receive my sight;" "Thou Son of David, have mercy upon us;" "Lord, save me, or I perish." But this command to let our words be few does by no means condemn persistence in prayer. There are notable and comfortable examples of acceptable and profitable persevering prayer. Jacob, in a critical emergency in his history, spent most of a night in penitential and supplicating prayer for an imperatively needed blessing. So Elijah prays for the rain which God already promised, and continues repeating the prayer until the seventh time, when the answer came in a "cloud as of a man's hand;" but soon it spread its sable wings from horizon to horizon, and poured down a wide and abundant rain. So we are taught to continue in prayer by the example of the importunate widow, until her importunity and "continual coming" extorted an act of justice from an unjust judge. Not that God has to be importuned and worried out of something—he is reluctant to give—but he gives what is best to bestow, and always at the best time; and where there is no moral disciplinary end to be achieved by delay, there is no delay, but the answer comes immediate, as to the leper, the blind man, and the dying thief. But it is necessary to teach dependence, and to develop and display faith. The answer to prayer is for a season withheld, as in the example of the Syro-Phenician woman. Then the answer came, and the commendation with it, "O woman, great is thy faith." This example has, no doubt, been recorded for our instruction and comfort. How many gracious revivals have blest the church and honored God in answer to persistent, individual and social prayer, as witness the Pentecost revival, which added three thousand in a single day to the church?

John Livingston, in Scotland, spent the whole of Saturday night with the prayerful of his congregation, and the day following five hundred souls under his ministry were turned from darkness to light. While, then, there should be not "much speaking," with the notion that it carries merit, there should be no needless verbosity. We may continue in prayer, long continue in supplicating communion with God; but if we are so conditioned, we can utter but a brief sentence we have seen from scriptural examples. It is enough to arrest the ear of him who always answers prayer.

The Recording Angel's Decimal Point.

The following extracts are from a letter received this morning. The writer, an occasional contributor to the columns of the ADVOCATE, and a friend to all that is good, will pardon the publication of a private letter.

Dear Bro. Watkins: I send you enclosed a bank check for $2.50, balance of note of Mrs. ——— for the endowment of Millsaps College. It is only two hundred and fifty cents, as we count money here; but it is, doubtless, far more than as many dollars in the currency of the skies. It represents a self-denial that cut down a meagre bill of fare for many days; that made the old dress, faded and patched, do duty for a long time in place of a new one. An economy of comforts—a stinting of necessities even—on the part of a poor widow past the allotted threescore and ten. Don't you wish you could see the entry in the bank book of heaven? How the recording angel will move that decimal point to the right! . . . .

I imagine Major Millsaps sometimes as he receives sums like this, and thinks of the security which such contributions give to his own investment in education, and of the joy and honor in reserve for him as the years pass, and the Lord puts it into his heart and purse to give yet more and more. If he only knew it, he has touched the millennium.

The recording angel's decimal point! Where will it be put in the record of your gift and mine? The entry in the bank book of heaven! How will it look in your case and mine?

What changes from popular estimates; how different from the appearance of things! We put the decimal here, and call it dollars; he moves it to the left, and calls it dimes. We call it hundreds; he moves the point to the right, and it is thousands. Why should we put the point where we do? What constitutes value, and what is the scale by which it increases or decreases? What scale will the celestial bookkeeper use, and by what rule will he determine the proper place for the decimal?

Our Savior throws some light upon this subject, and gives an answer to these questions. "And he said, Of a truth I say unto you, that this poor widow hath cast in more than they all; for they of their abundance have cast in unto the offerings of God; but she of her penury hath cast in all the living that she had." (Luke xxi, 3, 4.) "She hath cast in more than they all." Because of its smallness? No. Because of its greatness in amount? No. Because He who sat over against the treasury saw stamped upon those "two mites that make a farthing" the image of that woman's soul—an image that gave them greater value than any image or superscription that Cæsar's mints could have stamped upon them.

A. F. WATKINS.

Jackson, Miss., Sept. 27, 1891.

Rev. James M. Gann.

BY REV. D. G. W. ELLIS.

One of the noblest and best of men that I have known and admired and loved "fell on sleep" at his home in Poplarville, Miss., Aug. 22, 1891, at a little past his threescore years and ten.

My long acquaintance with Rev. James M. Gann, extending through a quarter of a century, controlled the surviving members of his family in their choice of one to write his obituary. If sincere affection for, and close and intimate association with, my now glorified brother qualifies for the task, their choice may be justified. But I can not but feel that other qualifications are requisite to pay fitting tribute to the memory of one so gifted and noble.

Our deceased brother kept no diary, and left no written memoranda to furnish facts and incidents of his active and useful life to aid in the preparation of this paper. This unfortunate neglect may be pardoned on the ground of his great and ceaseless activity in the work he felt himself called to do. I must, therefore, rely mainly upon my knowledge of the man, gained in intimate association with him for several years succeeding our first acquaintance. He was born Feb. 16, 1821. I am not informed as to the place of his nativity; but, going upon my recollection of what he told me of his early life, I would say that he was born in Marion county, Ala. At any rate he grew up in this portion of Alabama. From 1820 to 1840, the latter date about the time he attained his majority, in that somewhat wild and sparsely settled country educational facilities were very poor. The old field common school, as it was known forty years ago, afforded him the only school advantages in his reach. The curriculum of these schools embraced the three R's, with here and there, in rare cases, a smattering of English grammar and geography. It is manifest that young Gann, with an ambition to excel in everything he undertook, made the best possible use of the meager advantages that such schools afforded. I own to a feeling of regret that one so richly endowed by nature should have been barred by his environments from access to the sources of knowledge to which his genius entitled him. He might have shone as a star of the first magnitude if he had been thoroughly educated. In spite of these disadvantages, he read and studied until he attained to a degree of excellence as a preacher and pastor that few surpass. Our brother, when at his best, could reach and impress the masses in his pulpit ministrations as I have seldom known any other man to do. He had been soundly converted and knew from his own experience the truth, power and value of the religion that he urged his hearers to seek. This was the secret of his earnest and almost irresistible expostulations that so mightily drew the people in penitence to the feet of his Master.

He was by nature impulsive, though warm-hearted and generous to a fault. His high sense of honor and noble independence made him quick to resent an insult, and sometimes, it may be, he was betrayed into mistakes through the suddenness and ardency of passion. But no one was more ready to make reparation when convinced of his mistake. Strong in his convictions, he did not hesitate to express them upon all suitable occasions, and yet such was his manifest sincerity and honorable fairness toward those who differed with him, that not a few of these were among his most ardent friends and admirers. I do not think that our brother became religious until after his marriage to her who now sadly deplores his departure. He was licensed to preach not long after his conversion and exercised his gifts for a year or two as a local preacher before he applied for admission in the Alabama Conference. He was received into this Conference in 1854 on trial, and continued to fill acceptably and usefully various works in reach of his home until he transferred to Mississippi Conference in 1866. His first charge in this Conference was DeKalb circuit, which he served for four years acceptably and profitably to the people of that charge. These were perilous times, through which he conducted himself as becomes the faithful ambassador of Christ. Kemper county, that has attained notoriety all over the United States for bloodshed and violence, was for four years the scene of his first labors in our Conference. No one who knew James M. Gann need to be told how he stood on the questions that divided the people of that time. It was impossible for a man of his make-up to be neutral on the questions that agitated the public mind. He had an opinion of his own which he did not hesitate to avow. And yet I do not think he ever did anything to lower the dignity of the ministerial office. December, 1869, he transferred to the North Alabama Conference for the purpose of disposing of some property that he still owned in that State. Having accomplished that object, he again transferred to Mississippi Conference, and was put in charge of what was then called Spring Hill circuit, including in its bounds the Cooper Institute, at which place was located the parsonage. Here three of his daughters, and, I believe, one of his sons were educated. He filled several works of importance, and always to the delight and profit of the people, after leaving Spring Hill. In 1880 he was appointed presiding elder of the Brandon district. In the middle of the third year on this district his strength failed and he was compelled to retire. At the Conference following he was placed on the superannuated list, from which death has erased his name. When asked by Bro. Howell as to his spiritual condition a short while before he died, his answer was, "I am ready." Too feeble to talk except in a faint whisper, yet he was permitted to send back to his brethren of the Mississippi Conference this note of triumph. Farewell, my dear brother, but not forever. God bless the widow and his dear children.

One Day of Practice Is Worth a Month of Profession.

I believe in sanctification. I believe in Christian perfection. I know I love God. I know that I feel a day with God's people is worth a lifetime in Satan's service. I don't know whether the second blessing brethren would call me sanctified or not; I am very painfully conscious of the fact that I am not perfect. I know that God's Word teaches that it is possible to live without sin. How could I believe otherwise, when we have such assurance from Christ and the Holy Word that the Holy Ghost will "lead us into all truth;" when he says—"Because I live, ye shall live also;" Go do as I command; and, Lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world; My grace is sufficient unto thee for every time of need; and, I will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear, but will with every temptation make a way of escape—and other passages that could be added.

I have been an interested reader of all the works on the second blessing theory or experience, whichever the advocates are pleased to call it. I have also read Mr. Wesley's journals, letters and sermon on Christian perfection. The difference between Mr. Wesley and the majority of the writers to-day is this: Mr. Wesley starts out with the broad proposition that Christian perfection is a Bible doctrine, and from this reasons logically to a conclusion, using his experience simply as an illustration of the truth: when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he was persecuted, he bore it for Christ's sake, and when under the deepest affliction his journal always records some sweet expression in regard to his worst enemy. When the doctrine was attacked he would always appeal to the law and to the testimony. He lived as an ambassador for Christ without spot, and with a conscience void of offense toward God and man.

A number of the writers of to-day seem to be on the war-path, with their pens in hand, ready to cut right and left, and if a man charges them with a profession unscriptural, instead of ignoring it or appealing to the law and testimony, they rise in their might, state their experience, and call their opposer something akin to a heretic, showing in many instances that the devil has gained a victory, getting them to show a little gall in the matter. I fear the glorious doctrine of perfect love suffers more from the inconsistency of its professors than any other source.

An eminent infidel once said he could explain the miracles of Christ, and answer the prophecies, but he had never been able to answer a consistent Christian life. Let us turn to the second Epistle of Peter and read: "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, . . . having your conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good work (consistent living) which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation . . . For so is the will of God that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men."

Let us not allow our profession to be evilly spoken of. It is necessary for us to profess, but it is more necessary to practice. Professing to be a farmer does not make corn and cotton. A practical knowledge does not always follow profession. A man can profess sanctifying grace, and if he does not live it, he dishonors God and pleases the devil.

Brethren, let us not profess a thing unless we know we have it, and when we have it, let us live it, and, with the banner of King Immanuel floating over us, the combined forces of earth and hell can not harm us, or make us afraid; and then, and not till then, will the grand old Bible doctrine of Christian perfection spread on and on to the salvation of thousands of souls in this and the life to come. M.

A Thought and a Suggestion.

The doctrine of inbred sin as expounded by the advocates of the "second blessing" theory, as it appears to me, is open to very serious objections. While I heartily concur in the doctrine that the Adamic transgression has polluted the human race, or, in other words, has entailed upon all men a proneness to sin, which can only be eradicated by the grace of God, yet I can not accept the theory so enthusiastically expressed by many earnest and sincere brethren, that it requires a second act of divine grace to remove all sin from the heart.

Our Savior, in his exposition of the new birth to the inquiring Nicodemus, stated with great clearness the fact that "unless a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God." Again, he states, after referring to the incomprehensibility attending all efforts of the human mind to explain the mysteries of the new birth: "So is every one that is born of the Spirit."

Now, according to the express language of our Savior, there is one prerequisite to seeing the kingdom of God, and that is, one must be "born again," or "from above," as the marginal reading has it, or "born of the Spirit," as our Lord finally expresses it. So far as I know, this is the only and absolutely essential condition which our Lord has prescribed.

The next feature, then, that presents itself is as to the nature and entailments of this new birth. It is very clear that a person born of consumptive parents may, by the laws of heredity, come into the world predisposed to pulmonary complaints. So a son born of an inebriate may also, by the operation of the same law, inherit his father's consuming thirst for strong drink. Just so a son of Adam also inherits, by the operations of the identical law above referred to, the natural or moral frailties of Father Adam. But a son of God—one "born of the Spirit"—does he inherit any "frailties" or "taint" as a result of his second birth? Henceforth "all things become new"—a new birth, the issue of a sinless Father—a new creature! Henceforth, according to the same eternal law of heredity, the new creature inherits the moral traits of his Divine Progenitor, and as he only is pure, he transmits no evil "taint" to his spiritual progeny.

Whence then any necessity for a "second blessing?" It seems clearly to be a work of supererogation inasmuch as it would be the doing again of a work already and completely and unmistakably accomplished. Why so? Because our characteristics, spiritual and material, are inherited from our parents; God is the parent of those who are "born of the Spirit," and God is not subject to sin; ergo, the children of God have no hereditary taint of sin.

Now, brethren, permit a suggestion: Inasmuch as it is an undisputed fact that many sincere children of God entertain the same views as the writer hereof, and inasmuch as the persistent advocacy of the "second blessing" theory has already caused no little dissension in the church of God would it not be advisable for ministers advocating this theory, instead of bringing it in every sermon preached, to hold special "holiness meetings" for the benefit of those who believe in such doctrines, and at the regular services to preach "Christ and him crucified"? I make this suggestion because some sincere and well-meaning preachers seem to be so carried away by this theory as to make it the prominent feature of all their services. The writer recently worshipped with a congregation whose pastor preached almost exclusively both morning and night upon this experience. Sinners were in the congregation—those who had never experienced the first blessing, if I may so call it—and yet during the entire Sabbath services no word of consolation or hope was offered to any except those who had been born again, and were consequently entitled to a "second blessing."

Now, brethren, are we not in danger of overdoing things along this line? Is there not serious danger that while we are striving to raise men into ethereal heights, we may neglect the souls of those for whom Christ died, and who have never yet experienced the power and sweetness of pardoned sin?

This article is written, not in a captious or censorious spirit, but with a sincere desire that it may accomplish good. LAYMAN.

"Paste This in Your Scrap-Book."

The other day a letter was handed me, and, upon opening it, I found, instead of a letter, a clipping from the New Orleans Picayune, with the above request penciled on the margin. The clipping, of nearly two columns' length, was all about "The Holy Coat of Treves." There was no clue to the name of the one who sent it, and the post-mark was unintelligible; but all that is of no consequence, though I would like to know the motive of the sender. And here let me put it upon record that my venerable "scrap-book" is already so well filled that I do not think I can find any room for the "holy coat." Much of late had I read of the holy coat. It is all of a piece with the other holy relics that go to enrich the Catholic Church and dupe the ignorant worshipers. If the garment in question was really the one the soldiers cast lots for, what virtue could there be in it at this day? The virtue that went out from Jesus when the woman touched the hem of his garment went straight from his living, loving, throbbing, sympathetic human heart, and not one word have we to prove that he ever imparted that virtue to the vestments he wore. Had it been hanging on anything, would the woman have gone to it and touched it with that burning zeal and faith she displayed? No; it was faith in the living Christ, not in the hem of the garment. If he had intended that those "parted garments" should have been preserved and handed down through the ages, would he not have said something about it to his disciples? The prelates of Rome can make the faithful believe anything they choose to put forth. One of the rules they prescribed prohibited the 40,000 pilgrims "all discussion as to the authenticity of the relics." They must pay for looking at the holy coat at Treves; and if they have any doubts about that being the real holy coat, or the one at Argenteuil, they must keep their thoughts to themselves, or they will have to pay for their doubts.

These two holy coats are not all the faithful have to feast their eyes upon, for the church at Styria, Austria, has "a pair of trousers" worn by Joseph. The garment is "made of the hair of some animal." They were holy trousers once, but not now, because the tell us that they were considerably worse for wear, and some good woman had "darned and patched them places." Another woman stole buttons. She went in for a private relic quary minus the two p's—the pay at the pilgrimage; but, alas! for the balance of womankind for this the They are forever debarred the sight those whole trousers; yet if they have enough money, they can go all the way to Treves, or to Argenteuil, and see both of the holy coats.

BOOKS.

STAMMERING: ITS NATURE AND TREATMENT. By Emil Behnke. T. Fisher Unwin, London.

LIVING HYMNS. For use in Sabbath schools, Christian Endeavor meetings, the church and home. Compiled by John Wanamaker, assisted by J. R. Sweeney and J. Hood, publisher, Philadelphia. Price fifty cents.

THOUGHTS FOR WEARY HOURS. Thos. Whitaker, Bible House, New York. Price twenty-five cents.

It contains short articles in prose and verse which are good to the use of consolation and edification.

DIVINE HEALING—A CRITICISM. By T. E. McDonald. McDonald, Gill & Co., Boston. Price, ten cents.

This is a good little pamphlet, and we think, if scattered abroad, it will do immense good. If you are troubled with the "divine healers," send for this pamphlet and put an end to the trouble.

WISDOM OF THE WISE. Compiled by Caroline L. Hunt. 16 mo, 75 cents; gilt edges, $1. Boston: D. Lothrop Company.

There are many compilations of sayings of the world's wise and witty ones; but this collection by Miss Caroline L. Hunt will stand comparison with any. It is a small volume of carefully selected and classified extracts comprising pithy and pointed sayings of the best authors. The collection will be found of equal value to parents in the home and to teachers in the school, for all the extracts breathe the spirit of helpfulness and hopefulness that is of so much worth in the development of the young mind and heart and soul.

THE NEW THEOLOGY. By John Bascom. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. For sale by Eyrich, 139 Canal street, New Orleans. Price, $1.50.

Dr. Bascom is the author of a dozen volumes on various subjects. This is his latest, in which he gives his view of what is now called The New Theology. He treats the subject under the following heads: Naturalism, The Supernatural, Dogmatism, Pietism, Spiritualism. The general trend of the book is stated in the first sentence of the preface: "This work is equally removed in its conclusions from the opinion of those who think that, in the deeper questions of being, we can know nothing, and waste our time by inquiry; and the opinions of those who suppose that we are already sufficiently instructed in these directions by revelation, and have only to hold fast its truths." He maintains this position throughout the discussion of the five themes mentioned. His style is clear and forcible, and his interpretation of some passages of Scripture is lucid and fair. He does not hold to the common view of inspiration. He says: "Inspiration is the mind's mastery of truth, and this mastery is in no person, at no period, and in no important particular, complete." Again: "If we accept the Bible for what it so plainly is—a growing revelation, a slow finding by men of their way among spiritual things—the dangers and difficulties of interpretation disappear." With this view of inspiration the author harmonizes prayer and miracles and a holy living. At the close he sums up as follows:

"Naturalism becomes to us, as it does to all true science, the continuity, the omnipresence, of the divine method; supernaturalism becomes to us, as it does to all reverent loving faith, the inner force of the natural, unfolding in visible forms the invisible things of the spirit. We are patient with dogma, because many men are standing upon it, and we, too, in our own way. We are thankful for pietism, because even in its sporadic moode it is still an experience and an expression of life. But we wait on the efforts and aspirations of all good men, as they accumulate the conditions of that sound and pervasive spirituality which is to unite the earth under us and the heavens over us, according to the mind of God, into the kingdom of heaven. Thus is nothing destroyed, but all things are fulfilled."

THE LOTTERY.

Two-Edged Arguments.

There is ono "relic of barbarism" in this country with which tbe highest judicial authorities appear disposed to deal in a spirit of fidelity to the absolute right, and to those interests which is the province of law to protect. This is that great iniquity, the Louisiana Lottery. Doubtless, courage and fidelity in this regard are much re-enforced by tbe fact that the general consensus of the civilized world is now on the side of right in this matter; yet the attitude of interpreters of the law in the case of the lottery justifies the belief that when public opinion shall fully express itself in regerd to some other things, where interests of morality are at stake, a like courage will be shown both in tbe creation of needed laws, and in their enforcement.

Attorney-Generel Miller bas given out for publication tbe carefully prepared brief which he is to submit to the United States Supreme Court in the case of Rapier and Dupre, two persons connected with the Louisiana lottery, who bave been indicted, and convicted, for violation of the new law upon that subject in sending lottery matter through tbe mails. An appeal has been made to tbe Supreme Court, and arguments upon that appeal will bo heard at the October term. Mr. Miller shows small respect for tbe arguments of the lottery lawyers, tbe evident purpose of which, as he says, seems, "as was, of course, to bo expected in such a cause, to becloud 'the issue.'" This issue is the constitutionality of the Act of Congress by which the sending of lottery matter through the mails is forbidden, while the parties concerned are to bo dealt with as criminals. The Attorney-General shows small respect for the bulldogging plea put forward in behalf of the defendants, and in doing so, with the other keen edge of his argument shears into shreds other sophistries of a like sort.

One part of the plea for the defendants is, that denial of the privilego of sending any kind of printed matter through the mails is violation of the well-established principle of freedom of the press! To prohibit transmission through the mails is to prohibit the circulation of literature, and this interferes with that freedom of the press which is, in this country especially, deemed a right so sacred. The Attorney-General makes no effort to conceal his scorn for the miserable robbery in behalf of a great iniquity to which the lawyers for the defendants lend themselves in such sophistry. The effect of such a decision, he says, would be to make "every official of the Postoffice Department the servant, and every carrier the errand-boy of the Louisiana Lottery Company." Tho fact, he says, is totally ignored "that the sole effect of the Act of Congress is that the general government, its officers, employees and agencies, shall in no way aid or abet this business; that its mail-bags and the hands of its agents shall not be used in spreading the manipulating snares for its unwary victims." The argument of the Attorney-General, in this, while evidently just, is an argument cutting on both edges by reason of its recognition of limitations in the application of abstract principles of human rights, whether in the enactment or the enforcement of laws. The law forbidding the use of tbo mails for the purpose in question recognizes tbe fact that "the press" may give out what ought not to be circulated. So far as constitutionally can, Congress in this case, and tho courts in their enforcement of it, say that "the freedom of the press" does not mean tbat the people of this country are left at tbo mercy of those who prey upon human credulity and human weakness, but that a point may be reached where the law steps in with its limitations and prohibits.

Another argument, or rather assumption, on the part of counsel, treated in a like summary way by the Attorney-General, is "that the right to operate a lottery is one of the fundamental rights of man, like the right to exercise a profession, as a physician, a trade, as a laundryman." In other words, that "business is always business." This Mr. Miller pointedly denies. "If," he says, "it can be demonstrated tbat to prey upon one's fellow-men by meane of a lottery is a fundamental human right, the Decalogue, and the Sermon on tbe Mount, not to mention the Declaration of Independence, ought to be re-written once." It does one good to hear such words spoken in such a quarter. The emphasis of their application to current issues, and in support of threatened interests of tbe individual and of society, is simply immense. The relations of men in what is called business, as in other things, is not that of beasts of prey and their hapless victims. A depraved element has entered into these relations which tends powerfully in that direction. In all the agee of human history, indeed, there has been in that respect a strange likeness between the human and the brute carnivora. It is the aim of civilization, and specially of Christian civilization, to change all that. There are other things besides lotteries which can not be brought within the sections of either the Decalogne, the Sermon on the Mount, or the Declaration of Independence, and for that reason must be treated as sine final principles of fundamental morality so grose, as that the doere of them must, in any right condition of the law and its execution, be regarded as criminals, and treated as such.—Standard.

The Real Figures

Another peculiarity of the lottery "sell-binders" is that they love to talk of the amount for which it is proposed to buy Louisiana in tbe aggregate. They do not like to talk about "$250,000 a year" nearly as well as they like to talk about "$31,250,000 in twenty-five years." They much prefer to talk about tbe larger amount. That suits us exactly. We like to talk about the larger amount also. We are willing to meet them on that ground. Let us see what will be the result of the twenty-five years of tbe lottery, expressed in dollars and cents. As we have said before, there are 103 shops, about, in this city where the written tickets for the daily drawing are sold, and their receipts average about $50 a day. They are open and sell 313 days in the year. This makes a grand total in a year for written tickets in the daily drawing of $1,591,950. In twenty-five years this would amount to the sum of $39,798,750, or $8,548,750 more than Morris proposes to pay for the whole franchise. He proposes to collect from the people of this city alone (for even the lotteryites will have to admit that every dollar for the daily drawing is paid by the people of this city) the entire amount which he proposes to pay to the State, together with eight and a half million dollars to pay him for the trouble of collecting it.

We can safely assume that the amount received in a year for the printed tickets for the daily drawing is at least $500,000. The lottery itself admits that seven per cent. of the amount received for the monthly drawing tickets comes from the people of Louisiana. The total price of the monthly drawing tickets for the twelve drawings in the year is $28,000,000. Seven per cent. of this is $1,960,000. Now add together the $1,591,950 for a year's sale of written daily drawing tickets, and $500,000 for a year's sale of the printed daily drawing tickets, and the $1,960,000 which the lottery itself admits it gets from Louisiana's people for monthly tickets, and we get the sum of $4,051,900 each year, which in twenty-five years amounts to the sum of $101,297,500, which the lottery itself is bound to admit that it will get from the people of this State alone in the twenty-five years for which it asks a charter.

When we compare this sum which the lottery papers and the lottery orators are so fond of talking about, $31,250,000, the latter does not seem so enormous as it did before we figured out what the lottery would get out of the people to whom it proposed to pay its thirty millions. By the lottery's own figures, at the end of twenty-five years, Louisiana would be on the wrong side of the balance sheet to the amount of $71,047,500.—New Delta.

LOTTERY FALLACIES.—Attempts are being made by the lottery people in Louisiana to create the impression that the law prohibiting the carrying of lottery matter in the mails is unconstitutional and a violation of personal liberty. Articles presenting this view are published in some papers in the country, and these articles are supposed to have been printed at the instance of the Louisiana Lottery Company. The view advanced is untenable. The refusal of the government to carry lottery matter in the mails is no infringement upon personal liberty. The government does not undertake to punish those who print lottery advertisements, or who conduct lotteries. It only refuses to be an accomplice in their work. It declares that it will not be a party to the nefarious business by prohibiting the agencies of the government to its service. Circulars may be printed and distributed for the advertisement of the lottery, and the government takes no exception until the attempt is made to use the mails in the service of the lottery. This is an entirely different matter from prohibiting the business. We are not sure but that the general government ought to be able to move against lotteries even where State governments have failed to do so. But this is not the question. The general government has not presumed to forestall the governments of States in this matter. It only says that the business agencies conducted and maintained by the government shall not be employed in an immoral business, which is prohibited by a large majority of the States, and is productive of demoralizing influences among the people.—Methodist Recorder.

The fight over this infamous institution, which was fastened on the people of Louisiana during the dark days of reconstruction, grows more intense day by day. The expedients resorted to by the lottery agents to buy votes are corrupt and corrupting in the extreme. Such disgraceful and wholesale corruption and debauchery have never been paralleled in human history, save in the fight against whisky. There is only more of it in the case of the lottery fight, because Louisiana is the headquarters for this diabolical fraud, whose poisoning influence, upas-like, is fatal, and which shadows and debauches its victims all over the Union. The good people of that State are goaded to desperation, and have felt forced by the extremities of the situation to make threats of violence. Even Dr. Palmer, the leading Presbyterian divine of the South, a man of great age and celebrated for his conservatism, in a recent speech before a large mass meeting, openly advocated violent means, should such become necessary, to 'throttle the monster curse of Louisiana. We hope such means may not become necessary; but we want that infamy stamped out of existence by whatever means become necessary for reaching this end. We stand on the same platform with reference to the liquor traffic.—Tennessee Methodist.

The farmers of Caddo parish have formed an association for the sale of their products, and will carry on a general marketing business in the city of Shreveport.

The National Bankers' Association will meet in New Orleans, Nov. 15. The date previously announced was Oct. 15.

The corner-stone of Harper Institute, an institution for the education of colored youths, being erected under the patronage of the A. M. E. Church, was laid at Baton Rouge, Sept. 28.

The report of the treasurer of Lafourche parish shows a cash balance to the credit of the general fund, all approved claims paid, of $3,426, and a total balance to the credit of the drainage fund of $3,954.

The Hammond Sun says:

We publish with pride what one lady realized from a small patch of strawberries, this season, tended by her own hands. She set out a little over three-quarters of an acre of berries, last fall, from which she shipped 338 crates that brought her cash to the amount of $422.47. Her expenses were $122.48, leaving her $300.

As there was not a full quorum, little was done at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors of the State University and Mechanical College on Sept. 29. The report of the president showed $24,000 received from the government under the Morrill bill. After appointing Lieut. Benton commandant of cadets, and appropriating $500 for college furniture, an adjournment was taken until Oct. 26.

The Kansas City, Arkansas and New Orleans Railroad Company has been chartered by the State of Arkansas. Capital stock, $6,000,000. The proposed line to be constructed begins at the northern boundary line of the State of Arkansas, running south through eight parishes in Louisiana. The survey will begin immediately, and the construction will be pushed through to completion.

There is talk of consolidating the counties of Sharkey and Issequena, and it is probable the question will come up for consideration at the January term of the Legislature. The Deer Creek Pilot says it favors the scheme, and is willing for Sharkey to lose her name, provided the courthouse is located at Rolling Fork, that county.

Chief Voelnkle, of the fire department, who is not only one of the best firemen, but also an accomplished machinist, has invented and now has in use in the department a combined spanner and hydrant wrench, which is said by experienced firemen to be a model of convenience, strength and utility, excelling in all these respects any wrench on the market. He has been importuned to patent his invention, but up to this time has refused to take any steps in this direction, not believing that the profit would justify the expense. In this no one agrees with him, being rather of the opinion that after seeing the instrument no fire company would willingly do without it.—Vicksburg Commercial Herald.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

CROUPY SOUNDS

At night, from baby's crib, are distracting to parents who are at a loss for a medicine equal to the emergency. Not so with those who have Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. A dose of this medicine affords certain and speedy relief. To cure colds, coughs, sore throat, asthma, bronchitis, hoarseness, and the various disorders of the breathing apparatus, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has no equal. It soothes the inflamed tissue, expectoration, and promotes repose. Capt. Call For U. Carley, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my family for thirty years and have always found it the best remedy for croup, to which complaint my children were subject."

"I use Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice, and pronounce it to be unequaled as a remedy for colds and coughs."—J. G. Gordon, M. D., Carroll Co., Virginia.

Briefs.

In the case of the "glove contest," which was tried before a jury last week in this city, the said jury decided, without leaving the court-room, that a fight, which resulted in one man being knocked senseless and battered and bruised almost beyond recognition, was not such a fight as the law prohibits. So we suppose that hereafter any form or degree of savagery under the auspices of an athletic club will not be disturbed. Of course, these things will go on from bad to worse now until the people wake up to the fact that self-protection demands that men be put in office who have some regard for morals. Meanwhile Louisiana will be going down lower and lower in the estimation of all decent people abroad.

Every reader of this paper loves to read of the progress of Christ's cause in other sections of the vineyard. Each one likes to read of success and how it is secured. If, therefore, brother, you have been successful in any line of church work, we desire to inform you that there are ten thousand readers of the ADVOCATE waiting to hear you to tell how you achieved that success. You do wrong not to put that ten thousand in the way of accomplishing like success. If you have a successful Sunday-school or prayer meeting or Epworth League, or anything else, let the ADVOCATE readers know how you made it a success, and thus be the means of multiplying that success a thousandfold. And, then, how near together does this co-operative sympathy in work draw the children of God! Workers in the vineyard, no matter how widely separated by space, ought to be co-workers.

Bro. Mitchel, our business manager, has shown us two beautiful books which he offers as premiums for subscribers to the ADVOCATE. One is the "Addresses of Henry Drummond," brought out in most exquisite style and workmanship by Henry Altemus, of Philadelphia. This little book is a real beauty, shining in silver, and the print is a joy to the eye. As to the contents, it is well known that Prof. Drummond's words have the ear of all English-speaking people, and are being translated into many other languages. This volume contains five addresses.

The other book offered as a premium for new subscribers is Canon Farrar's celebrated "Life of Christ," illustrated with a large number of magnificent full-page engravings and several reproductions of some of the famous paintings of Raphael, Rubens and West. This is a large book, bound in good style, with clear, large print and easy to read. The "Old Story," as told by Archdeacon Farrar, is as fascinating as ever, and becomes newer as it grows older.

We regard these books as well worth effort on the part of the preachers or others to obtain by soliciting subscribers.

Before affliction is digested, consolation ever comes too soon; and after it is digested, it comes too late; there is but a mark between these two, as fine almost as a hair, for a comforter to take aim at.—Sterne.

Rev. B. F. Alexander.

B. F. Alexander, the son of Amzi C. Alexander and Elizabeth Watkins Holliday, daughter of the Rev. Charles Holliday, was born near Scottsville, in Allen county, Ky., April 12, 1829. His education was received in the seminary of his native town. He was converted at home, March, 1849, and received into full church membership in December of the same year—but served as superintendent of Sabbath-school and class leader from previous June. He was licensed to exhort in 1850, and to preach on Scottsville circuit, by the Rev. N. H. Lee, P. E. He was admitted on trial in the Louisville Conference, September, 1852, at Louisville, Ky., and sent as junior preacher to Hopkinsville circuit and South Christian mission; but in Febuary, 1853, was placed in charge of the mission for the remainder of the year. In 1853 he was sent to Rumsey circuit, but returned home after the first quarter on account of failing health. He was admitted into full connection in 1854; ordained deacon by Bishop Paine, and transferred to Louisiana Conference, and appointed by Rev. Dr. Keener to take charge of Thibodeaux station. In 1855 he served New Iberia circuit; in 1856 the Opelousas circuit; and at the close of the year was ordained elder by Bishop Kavanaugh, at Waterproof, La. In 1857 he served the New Orleans circuit, and during the year the Algiers Church was built and paid for, and the Cadiz Street Church, of which St. Charles Avenue Church is the successor, was begun. From 1858 to 1860 he was agent for Pierce and Paine College, and in 1860 in charge of Pleasant Hill circuit. In 1861 he served the Lake Providence circuit, in 1862 the Gross Tete circuit, in 1863 the Washington circuit; but in April he entered the Confederate States Army as chaplain of the Twenty-eighth Regiment of Louisiana Volunteers, where he remained in 1864 and 1865. In June, 1865, he was appointed presiding elder of Shreveport district, and continued there through 1869—the last year increasing his labors by becoming agent for the S. W. Bible Society. On Nov. 10, 1867, he was married to Miss Frances L. Bowman, at Mansfield, La., by the Rev, John Pipes. In 1870 and 1871 he was presiding elder of Lake Providence district and agent of the S. W. Bible Society. He was in charge of Waterproof circuit in 1872 and 1873, of Tensas Chapol station in 1874, of Delhi and Madison circuit in 1875 and 1876, of Floyd circuit in 1877, of Winnsboro circuit in 1878, of Sicily Island in 1879; but in May he was made presiding elder of Delhi district by Bishop McTyeire, and continued there from year to year through 1882, and from January, 1883, to 1886 was sent to Shreveport district. In 1882 his wife departed this life. In 1887-1890 he was presiding elder of the Alexandria district. In May, 1889, he was married to Mrs. M. E. Landrum. In December, 1890, he was appointed to the Morgan City and Patterson circuit, where, Sept. 29, ultimo, he closed a useful life.

We feel our utter incompetence to write about such a man as Bro. Alexander. He was the most complete itinerant we have ever known. He has labored in every part of Louisiana, either as preacher in charge or as presiding elder, and no man ever did more earnest or more faithful work. He has served the church in every capacity that usually falls to the lot of a preacher. He was a painstaking pastor, keeping every department of the work in good shape. He was a model presiding elder, and with a thorough knowledge of church law and usage he combined a most efficient administration. As a college agent, he was successful as far as he went in that work. As an army chaplain, no one of that class had a stronger hold upon the affections of his soldiers. As a representative in the General Conference, he did good work in the committees and upon the Conference floor. As a preacher, he was earnest and forcible, and some of his sermons were really eloquent. He was the best Conference man we had, watching all the proceedings with sympathetic interest and oftentimes carrying the day over much opposition. No man among us could be so missed on the Conference floor as he will be. He loved the church with a sincere love and worked for her interests with an untiring devotion. Being well known all over the Conference, he will be missed everywhere and mourned by everyone. He suffered much during his last illness, but that suffering was the last process through which the Holy Spirit led his trusting spirit, and we do not doubt that when he awoke on the other side of death, he awoke to the consciousness of a perfect likeness to the Savior he loved so well and served so faithfully on earth.

Complaint against an Editor—His Reply.

We came across an issue of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the other day, dated Jan. 18, 1868. It was really an object of interest and curiosity. We lingered over its pages for some time. Prominent among the contributors we found the names of two men who still are prominent and valuable contributors. What held our attention most was the "Report on Periodicals" adopted by the Montgomery Conference, and the editor's comment on the same. In the report occurs this paragraph:

> We regret to say that frequent typographical errors mar the paper and present communications in a mutilated form, and we greatly desire that the present editor, or one who wields a pen equal to his, could devote his whole time to its columns and mechanical department, as these are very apt to suffer when other responsible duties claim the services of the editor.

The editor's comment on that mutilation of communications is such as only that editor could make. He said:

> The fear of being "mutilated" is a very natural and common uneasiness with contributors. We fully appreciate it. Articles are sent to us often which are not in a condition to be served up as they are. Genius despises the laborious and painstaking methods of preparation necessary to good writing. The direction to "serve it up whole" does not mend the matter. The most skillful cook in the world could not do so and make it palatable. The tail-feathers, head, neck, top-knot, insides, and other "superfluities" must be gotten rid of; sometimes its very gizard has to be taken out—in fact, an entire "reconstruction" has to be attempted. We do not wonder when it appears that the author barely recognizes his own—for the chief ornaments of the bird have been stripped off. It has been not only "mutilated," but fricasseed, and then flavored with French sage. He should reflect that a large company sits down to partake of the contribution who do not care where it came from, so that it be good, and who have no special interest in the ornamental appurtenances which at first accompanied it.

This shows that editors and contributors years ago had their trials very much as they have them now, and the editor in those days thought he knew better what was suited to his columns than some of his contributors, and the contributors "took it in high dudgeon" when he "reconstructed" their articles.

The faith of immortality depends on a sense of it begotten, not on an argument for it concluded.—Bushnell.

Christian Experience.

BY "Z."

1. Much of what purports to be Christian experience is not experience; and if experience, it is not Christian.

2. Experience is knowledge derived from testing matters and men. It is the sum of conscious contemplation. It is life's lesson. Thus it appears that Christian experience is the knowledge derived from living Christian lives.

3. Christian experience is not equally valuable. It may well be compared to our coin. Tho one-cent copper is money. So is the twenty-dollar gold piece. Both are received in payment; but only according to their pecuniary value. The experience of a moment, day, week, is experience, but of far less intrinsic value than the experience of twenty years and more. We receive the former for what it is worth. If it is true what parties profess, that they have been suddenly born of God, the Holy Spirit witnessing thereto, it will soon appear. Children of light will certainly walk in the light.

4. Christian experience commences with regeneration. Connected therewith, the convert experiences the existence of an inward impellent to walk in newness of life. He is conscious of growth in grace. Answers to prayer multiply. The means of grace are precious. Thus our experience grows richer day by day. The copper cent, as it were, develops into a twenty-dollar gold piece.

5. Between common sense and the insane asylum there is a vast territory, densely populated. Those who live nearest said asylum call all manner of halucinations, dreams, visions, strange noises, etc., Christian experience. Phantasmagorial nonentities appear as verities. A person of morbid imagination can see, hear, feel, experience anything he pleases. If possessed of a full share of conceit, the individual elation in his conglomerate cogitations knows no bounds. This sad state of things becomes saddest, when such "clouds without water, carried about of winds" insist that their experience is the true standard for all Christians.

6. His experience is the true Christian's best safeguard. He knows in whom he has believed. Narrating our experience is of benefit to others. Benighted Bishop Latimer was led to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus by a young convert giving to him the circumstances of his regeneration while in the confessional. But, nevertheless, I hold that, being witnesses for Christ, confessing him before men, Christian conduct was chiefly designed. We should be living epistles, known and read of all men.

7. Very poetically Coleridge has said, that to most men experience is only like the sternlights of a ship which illumine only the track it has passed. But the thoughtful Christian employs his experience as headlights, enabling him to evade threatening danger and make sure progress on his way to port. Incipient faith begot experience. Experience developed, developed our faith. The two react upon each other, until we attain to the full stature in Christ.

A Text and Application.

The text is found in II. Peter ii, 3, and reads: "And through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you."

The "they" stands for the John A. Morris Gambling Company, and the "you" for the State of Louisiana and her citizens. The motive is declared to be "through covetousness"—words wholly inadequate to describe the merciless greed and insatiate thirst for spoils and the remorseless spirit of Louisiana's would be-assassins. The means employed are correctly stated to be "with feigned words." Ah! ha! how accurate is the description given here of the lottery press of Louisiana who, like a well-trained pack of hounds, having a common owner, all yelp in unison. At their master's bidding, do they not turn and twist the truth and suit the figures to help their cause, and in the name of "sweet charity," and with the soft, buttery words of accomplished deceivers, "make the worse appear the better cause," while they seek to snare the people for another twenty-five years? The text tells us plainly what these State Rights (?) Democrats in lottery coats, these millionaire gamblers, these princes of the turf and money lords, are seeking to accomplish—and what is it? To "make merchandise of you." Their highly philanthropic business is to make merchandise of Louisiana men and to traffic in Louisiana souls. They are in the market, bartering in humanity and dealing in human hearts and homes and hopes. Have they not done much business already in that line, and are their "feigned words" and financial considerations ever lacking, where they can be made to help their cause and turn an honest (save the mark!) penny into their coffers? The people of this State are fast realizing that the rule-or-ruin lotteryites and their press will stop at nothing in order to win—and why should they? There are countless "millions in it," and they have, with the active help of Satan, undertaken to make their very own a sovereign State, the glory of whose record is second to none, and thereafter exercise undisputed rule from the governor down to a petty constable.

It is believed that thousands of men will be bribed, and quite likely other thousands may be deceived, into supporting the lottery amendment; still it can scarcely be that a majority of Louisianians, as proud and heroic a people as ever walked the earth, will deliberately brand themselves with infamy, and by their votes turn over this surpassingly fair and easily prosperous State to the foul and deadly embrace of the lottery monster for another quarter of a century.

My countrymen, you who never feared a foe, and you, my countrywomen, whose peerless beauty, matchless worth and queenly bearing have compelled universal homage, we beg you to study the text and ask yourself the question: "Shall we sell our beloved Louisiana and ourselves, soul, body and estate, to the Louisiana State Lottery?" Let the answer be heard going up from all over the State, from east to west, and from Shreveport to Port Eads, "No! no! not for ten thousand times the amount proposed in the amendment bribe!" IDENBURG.

We present our readers with the first of our Ecumenical letters this week. These letters will be continued through the sessions of the Conference, and will be most interesting to all. The writer, Rev. J. W. Cornelius, is thoroughly equipped for this service, and will present all the salient features of the Conference in a way easily comprehended by all. Be sure to read the first, and, we have no doubt, all the rest will be eagerly looked for and read with avidity.

We note with pleasure that Miss Isoline Rodd, of New Orleans, the daughter of Mr. John E. Rodd, and niece of Mr. Breedlove Smith, has by merit received the prize of the "Cora Slocomb scholarship" in the Sophie Newcomb College, of this city. Miss Rodd's close contestant was Miss Colcook, Rev. Dr. B. M. Palmer's granddaughter, who came very near the high mark of excellence awarded Miss Rodd by the president, Col. Johnston.

Notes.

"There is no pardon for the crime of the man who wastes his own time. It is a law of economics that decline and degradation follow the loss of self-activity."

There are many would-be rulers in Louisiana to-day very much like Rehoboam. They are "unfit to pilot the State through the dangers that threaten it. Incapable of realizing that any dangers exist, they would drive on the rocks and wreck it forever."

A young student, speaking of the difficulty of a certain study, says: "The very difficulty of the study makes it attractive, and I shall work all the harder in that line." When a young man is attracted to a work by the difficulties which that work presents, the battle is more than half won and victory in sight.

We are clearly of the opinion that every farmer in our broad land could and would read the article in the October Forum, by David Starr Jordon on Agricultural Depression and Waste of Time, it would open his eyes to the fact that he has a "sub-treasury" within his own inclosure that, if properly managed, will yield him immense profits.

Don't forget the superannuates, nor the widows and orphans. The claim which these have upon the church is the most sacred claim. The old men have toiled until worn out, and the widow and orphan have suffered to extend the cause of Christ, and now is the opportunity for the church to show appreciation of their toils and sufferings. Let every cent, and more, be collected and turned over to these worthy claimants.

From the Mid-Continent:

The people are tired of literary lectures or abstract discussions, and even of history and exegesis. They want results in the form of the saving truth in Christ Jesus. It is their soul and not merely their minds that are hungry. Though they may not relish the stirring of the conscience, yet they know that is what the truth will do. And they lose respect for the pulpit that is not brave and true in its recognized mission to preach the cross of Christ, and to know nothing but that.

The papers are still discussing, "How to Reach the Masses," though Christ told the world long ago how to do it. He said: "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." Let the church "lift up" Christ, and he is pledged to do the drawing of all men. Make Christ conspicuous always and everywhere, and he says the masses will come. Christ is what the hungry heart of the world needs. Oh! ye messengers of God, "lift up" Christ and the masses will be drawn and saved.

If the morals of the State are supposed increased wealth, better education facilities, stronger levees, larger competence for superannuated soldiers more financial aid to charities, all these will be neutralized in their best results, and will only add to the direful ruin. "Righteousness exalteth a nation," is not only the Word of God but is the fact of history and the truth of philosophy. To vote for the lottery amendment and carry it, will add Louisiana to the long roll of States that have been ruined by a deliberate overthrow of God's law.

Mid-Continent:

Our churches should cease to be the theatres for the display of pure extravagance and the height of fashion in dress, for man or woman. No argument is needed to show how wrong this custom is and how dangerous and deadly to true spiritual religion and to sincere worship. Women, who compose three-fourths of our audience in the cities, might well combine to put an end to this abounding evil. Thousands who can not afford the competition and who do not feel willing to submit to a sense of degradation by the disparity, turn their backs upon the sanctuary and its dress parade of silks, ribbons and flashing jewels.

Our Lord in his conversation with Nicodemus evidently refers to the law of heredity, and says plainly that it applies in the spiritual realm. "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." From this application it is clear that our Lord regards regeneration as an application in the spiritual realm of the same law that operates in the physical realm in generation. The principle that governs in the one case governs in the other, if our Lord's words have the ordinary meaning that attaches to such words. If such be the case, then a regenerated man is a holy man, because he is the offspring of the Holy Spirit. The Holy Spirit by his very nature, is precluded from producing that which is not holy. The theory that sin remains in a regenerated man flatly contradicts the law of heredity as applied by Jesus Christ to this very case. Either this theory must be given up or the words of our Lord must be so twisted as to convey a meaning they do not ordinarily have. For our part, we prefer always to cling to the ordinary meaning of words, rather than to "wrest the Scriptures to our own destruction." That which is born of the Holy Spirit is a holy spirit. "Layman" touches on this point in his article on the second page of this issue.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. M. Johnston, Big Cane, La., Oct. 1: "Our meeting at Melville was quite a success. Ten joined the church, and the membership much encouraged. Bro. Faunt LeRoy did nearly all the preaching."

Rev. J. F. Wynn, Pineville, La., Sept. 30: "Our meeting here closed last Sunday night, including three Sabbaths. The Lord was with us in convicting, converting, reclaiming and sanctifying power. Old difficulties between church members were adjusted, several new family altars erected and twelve persons presented themselves for church membership. Bro. Manly did faithful work for the glory of the Master."

Rev. Geo. W. Huff, North Wilkinson circuit, Oct. 1: "I have just closed a good meeting at Perrytown, resulting in several conversions and some accessions. The good Lord blessed the people from the first service. The meeting continued four days, with two services each day. The last day was wonderfully blessed. We wound up with a regular old-time Methodist handshaking. I was assisted by Rev. Charley Hasting and Bro. Cecil Bass, who did faithful work. Praise the Lord!"

Rev. S. H. Whatley, P. C., Keatchie, La., Sept. 29: "Last Sunday our new church at Greenwood, Caddo parish, La., was dedicated by R. J. Harp, P. E. He was pastor in 1847, and again in 1887 to 1890. All the people dearly love him as a father and friend. Reference was made to a grand revival forty-four years ago, when such men as Dr. Young (the man who first projected the Shreveport and Marshal railway) was converted. Fathers W. E. Doty, Burress, La.; C. K. Marshall, of Mississippi, assisted Bro. Harp in this great revival. Greenwood has had the gospel from some of our best and grandest men, such as E. M. Marvin, Linus Parker (Bishops), H. C. Thweat, Joel Sanders, W. H. Turnley, and many others among the living. The most honored name is that of John Pipes."

Rev J. W. Poston, Mt. Vernon circuit, Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference: "The meetings have all been held on the Mt. Vernon circuit for the year 1891. Forty-five have joined the church, 35 have been converted, and many backsliders have been restored. The spiritual condition of the charge has been much improved. Collections are looking up toward completion; hopeful of having all full at Conference except the pastor's salary. We would be glad if that would all come to hand also. It is very much needed now. These good people are fully able to meet all their church obligations if their liberality was sufficient. We have had the help of the Rev. Wm. J. O'Bryant, of the Cockrum circuit, to preach three good sermons for us at Looxahoma. No other help, ministerial. The good Lord has been with us all the way to help, and all the glory be unto him now and forever."

Rev. W. W. Cammsok, Amite circuit and mission, Oct. 1: "I have just closed my last protracted meeting in this charge. The circuit has a mission attached to it served by Bro. W. T. Woodward, a young man of promise. Together we have had sixty-three accessions to the church, and perhaps as many conversions. This charge is on the up-grade and bids fair to become a first-class circuit. Our people are improving on all lines of church work. They have built one new church; have lumber on the ground to build another, and have repaired one. They have raised in cash and subscription nearly all of the Conference claims, and are coming up very well with the pastor's salary. I think we will be able to make a full report at Conference. We are under many obligations to the following brethren for ministerial aid: N. J. Roberts, W. W. Simmons, J. N. Tucker, G. F. Huff, J. B. Anders, Wiley Roberts and Hiram Day."

Rev. G. A. Guice, Rocky Springs: "On Sept. 11 we held at this place a grand rally of the Loyal Temperance Legion for this charge, and it was a sight to gladden one's heart to see the number and enthusiasm of the young people here for the temperance cause. The meeting was presided over by Miss May Russell, to whose talent, energy and pluck very much of the temperance sentiment of this part of Claiborne county is due; and if the balance of the county was like this work, it would be very dry very soon, we think. The meeting was addressed by Mrs. Harper, of Fayette, Jefferson county, and for clearness of thought and excellency of design it would, indeed, be difficult to equal the effort she made here. She will long be remembered by her many friends at this place. We closed our last protracted meeting on the ninth. There have been ninety additions to the church, about seventy-five of whom were grown persons. More than a hundred and twenty have professed conversion. Praise God, from whom all blessings flow!"

Rev. A. D. McVoy, Jr., Natchitoches, La.: "Natchitoches has just experienced a wholesome meeting. No clap-trap means were used to raise a sensation, thus drawing a promiscuous, disinterested rabble to the services. After much fasting and prayer the Holy Ghost descended on preachers and people, making the church of God n centre of irresistible influences to all grades of people. Every feature of sin—from the progressive-euchre party among the elite of society to the bacchanalian's crimes in the lowest stratum of humanity—was most clearly and faithfully rebuked. The preaching (by Bros. S. J. Davies and F. N. Parker) was practical, able, spiritual; accompanied by the Holy Ghost, it touched the consciences of the hearers with marked effect. While we had only five accessions, our people were greatly strengthened in the faith; and many telling impressions were made upon the ungodly which, we trust, will result in their conversion. The obstacles in our way were formidable, but God came to our assistance, and all the glory we give to him."

Rev. V. V. Boone, Beauregard, Miss. Sept. 30: "I am glad to write you that we are making some advancement on Beauregard circuit. In some respects this has been a very hard year. Coming here in bad health, without conveyance or a dollar in my pocket, a house to rent and furnish at my own expense, and that on the face of $340 paid to the pastor last year, was a little more than disheartening to undertake. Notwithstanding all this, it has been a very pleasant and profitable year so far. A kinder and more appreciative people it has never been my pleasure to know. I held my fourth and last meeting at this place, which closed last Wednesday night with very gratifying results. We have received into the church 49 members on profession of faith, and 16 by letter. Have baptized 23 adults; expect more to follow. At each church there was a deep work of grace wrought in the hearts of the people—old differences settled; lukewarm and backslidden members came to the front with confession and promise to do better. And I think I can promise that the financial report will be twenty-five per cent. in advance of last year. Many thanks to the brethren who assisted me so faithfully and efficiently in these meetings."

Rev. C. C. Grisham, Oxford circuit, Sept. 24: "We have held two protracted meetings on the Oxford circuit, resulting in twenty additions and several conversions; the church greatly revived, Sunday-school and prayer meeting interest on the increase. We have baptized ten children. The Oxford work is a work given me after Conference. Four churches from Abbeville and Toccopola circuits. I have done the best I could in my feeble health. At our last meeting, Mt. Zion, Bros. J. W. Jones and E. Sparks did me good work. Bro. Jones did most of the preaching, and endeared himself to the people of Mt. Zion. The last church named we hope to ceil in the near future. We have added thirty-one this year by transfer and on profession. We think this work will support a preacher next year. Our people are in high spirits, and are growing rapidly. I hope to be able to do more in the vineyard of my Lord. Pray for us. I assisted Bro. R. M. Davis in a glorious meeting at Lafayette Springs, last week. Closed Friday night, with twenty-nine penitents at the altar. We are glad to state that Bro. Davis is still on the work, though very feeble. O, may the great Head of the church restore him to wonted health again!"

Rev. R. W. Tucker, P. C., Sharon, Miss.: "Please allow me space in your column to report the Sharon circuit. This is my second year as preacher in charge. A kinder and more intelligent people I never expect to serve. Prevented by poor health last year, I held no protracted meetings save one; however, seventeen were added to the church and all claims met in full. This year I protracted in each church with fine results, as will be seen. At Mt. Pleasant I began on the second Sunday in July, and continued until the following Thursday night. Rev. V. D. Skipper, of Walnut Grove, did all the preaching, very much to the delight of Christians and the conversion of sinners. Visible results: four accessions to the church, Sunday-school organized, and quite a number of family altars erected. The following Sunday (third Sunday in July) I commenced at Sharon, doing the preaching myself until Monday night, when Rev. G. D. Anders, of Amite City, La., came to my assistance, who by his earnest and eloquent preaching drove conviction to the hearts of both saint and sinner. The church came to the altar in a reconsecration service, and then went forth to win souls for Christ. Seven adults were added to the church and all the community blessed. Nor is the interest dead. We have in cash and good subscription nearly enough money to erect a new church-building at Sharon, which is and has long been very much needed. The plan is agreed upon, and the contract let out. We will thankfully acknowledge any amount from the friends of old Sharon to aid in this enterprise. The first Saturday in August we began at Forest Grove, and closed the following Saturday night. The first sermon was by Dr. Ward (local), very much to the delight of all present. On Sunday, at eleven, our beloved presiding elder, D. A. Little, gave us a feast of good things; at night, preaching by the pastor. On Monday morning V. D. Skipper arrived and did the preaching with great acceptability. His sermons were full of holy zeal and earnestness, out of which grew a glorious revival. Fourteen additions to the church, prayer meeting organized, and several family altars established. On the second Sunday in August, assisted by Bro. McDonald, from the Walnut Grove charge (local), I commenced at Lone Pine School-house. The services were good from the first, and resulted in a goodly number of conversions, five accessions, and family altars erected. On my return to fill my appointment in September, I was delighted to find a beautiful Methodist Church up and covered; will be ready to preach in at my next appointment. I will have to look around for some D. D. to preach the dedicatory sermon. On the fourth Sunday in September, accompanied by Rev. Dr. Whittington, of Meadville circuit, I arrived at the beautiful little church at Madisonville, where a large congregation was in waiting, and everything seemed ready. The meeting continued until Thursday night, and was a grand victory. The Doctor did all the preaching, and just here I will say we have no better protracted meeting preacher than he. The altar was crowded every night with penitents. In the day he preached to the church. Many were happily converted and seventeen received into full connection. The whole community turned out, and everybody made happy. I have never seen a better meeting than was the one at Madisonville. In conclusion, I want to say, God has been good to me, indeed, and to him be all the glory, for I feel that I am an 'unprofitable servant.'"

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

As we have finished the third round, it may be well to send you a few notes in regard to it. With me the time is to be dreaded, as the weather is warm and the presiding elder is in demand at protracted and camp meetings in addition to his regular work; yet it has been a time of joy and triumph. I think we have had the most good meetings I ever saw in the same length of time. The ingathering has been good indeed. I think the preachers more consecrated and the people more spiritual than ever in our bounds. There is a prospect for us to bring in preachers enough to, at least, keep our ranks full. We have held three camp meetings, viz: Sam Jones, Bluff Creek and St. Tammany. All were good meetings, and besides are steadily growing in favor with the people. There is a good prospect of rebuilding at Bethel, in Wilkinson county, Miss. This place is known in the history of earlier days. May the second tabernacle be more glorious than the first!

C. McDONALD.

There are many silent martyrs among the women of the country to-day—victims of neglect, or carelessness, or sensitiveness, or sometimes a mistaken sense of delicacy. They suffer and suffer and are still. Reluctant often to consult strange physicians, and not knowing what relief to resort to themselves, they acquire a reputation for peevishness and fretfulness that is undeserved.

In few things are women so reluctant to consult others as in matters relating to personal appearance. Even a maiden in her teens, it is said, will talk to a doctor about anything else sooner than of her complexion or her hair. These, as a rule, she does not care to discuss. Yet how important they are, not only as features of physical beauty, but as guides to the general health. There is nothing for instance that responds more quickly to impaired health than the hair.

Whatever the cause, if the hair is deficient, the scalp dry and itchy or the hair falling out or turning gray prematurely, there is nothing so effective as the Louisiana Creole Hair Restorer which exercises a magical influence in all such cases. It can be depended upon to strengthen the hair and make it grow and put the scalp in a healthy condition no matter what the difficulty.

It is an important accessory to every dressing table and no lady should be without it. The Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Personal and Otherwise.

Bishop Keenor spent last Sunday in Birmingham, en route to the Ecumenical Conference.

His trip to the Ecumenical Conference will be the editor's first week of rest since he was at Sour Lake, Texas, three years ago!

In the arrangement of the appointments of the St. Louis Conference, Dr. Carradine goes to First Church, and S. H. Worlein to Centenary Church, in St. Louis.

We entreat our contributors to "deal gently with the young man," our protem editor. Don't overwhelm him under an avalanche of papers. The church will need his services for many days to come. Treat him kindly, and he will respond with hearty service.

Neuralgia is obstinate. Johnson's Anodyne Liniment has cured many very severe cases.

Notices.

To the Members of the Louisiana Ministerial Brotherhood:

Dear Brethren: Rev. B. F. Alexander having been called to his reward on Sept. 29, you are hereby notified to pay in Assessment No. 2, according to Article 8 of our Constitution. Remit the amount—five dollars—to the financial secretary at Plaquemine, La.

S. S. KEENER,
Financial Secretary.

Brethren: If any more blank applications to the Church Extension Board are desired, between this time and the date of our Annual Conference, send direct to the Publishing House for application blanks to the Conference Board, and to Dr. Morton at Louisville for applications to General Board. This will expedite matters. My supply is exhausted. The church-building mania is abroad in the land, for the appeals for help come thick and fast.

Fraternally, S. J. DAVIES,
Sec'y Ch. Ex. Board.

Mrs. S. S. King, Conference secretary of the Woman's Board of Home Missions and Parsonage Extension, will fill appointments in the interests of the Board, as follows:

HOME LIFE.

HOME.

BY N. W. C.

"Home!" the word has magic sweetness
To the heart that yearns for love;
See, on wings of arrowy fleetness
Homeward flies the mated dove!
So would souls, by fate left lonely
Through life's wilderness to roam,
Gladly fly, if they could only
In some fond heart find a home.

Home, the dearest of all places,
Whither toil the little feet;
Fairy rings of happy faces
Round its plenteous table meet:
Where is softly lisped "Our Father,"
Where, around the sacred Tome,
Husband, wife, and children gether,
In the harmony of home.

Home, the habitation holy
Where an angel mother stood!
In our eyes, though poor and lowly,
Noblest of all womanhood:
Ah, how many hearts have panted,
Far across the ocean foam,
Just to die in the enchanted
Haven of their long-lost home.

Home should be a type of heaven,
Sacred temple of sweet peace;
Where no strife can enter, even
Care within its walls should cease:
But if death, or wholesome sorrow
From the Father's hand should come;
Out of anguish, let us borrow
Greater love for heaven, our Home.

The Manners of Parents.

BY ELEANOR A. HONTER.

We hear a good deal said about the behavior of children in these days, and these remarks are often the reverse of complimentary; but no one as yet has seemed to seriously consider the manners of grown people in relation to children, though nowhere is the law of cause and effect more clearly manifested. If parents are habitually courteous to their children, the children always have pleasant manners. If they are rude, so are the children. They reflect the manners of their elders as a mirror does the objects by which it is surrounded. Many parents who are well bred in their manners to their equals never trouble themselves to be considerate in their behavior to their own children. Indeed there are parents who actually seem to think that it is not well to be courteous to a child.

"Say 'Thank you,'" I heard a mother command a little daughter when she had tied a sash for her.

"You never say 'Thank you' to me," returned the child instantly.

"It is not my place to say 'Thank you' to you. You are my child, and it is your duty to do whatever I order," responded the mother.

The child quietly walked from the room with firm-shut lips and flashing eyes, and the mother never noticed that her command had not been obeyed.

How often do we command when we should request.

"Pass the bread."

"Shut that door."

"Go upstairs and get me a clean handkerchief—quick."

The hateful sentences throng upon my memory faster than my pen can write them. How can we expect children to have serene and gentle manners when they are treated like this?

Then again, in some families children are ignored. They come down to the breakfast-room and take their places at the table without any morning greeting whatever. When school-time comes, they are put in order by their mother and dismissed with a "There, you are ready at last. Go along." No wonder such children act shy and awkward when some stranger chances to give them a cheerful greeting.

When company comes, how many children are told to "keep out of the way," to "keep still and not say anything" in the presence of guests. It is not strange that the little things act like scared kittens under such circumstances. It is remarkable to me that they appear as well as they do.

I once knew a lady whose son, a little lad of ten, was the admiration of everyone for his beautiful manners. While he was perfectly simple, frank, and boyish, his manners were as assured and correct as those of a grown man. His mother could send him in the carriage alone to the station to bring a lady guest from the train, certain that he would give her every needful attention. He would take the checks, care for the baggage, and bring her to the house with every courtesy. And always when visitors were at his home he did his little share of entertaining. He was quick to wait upon them, and to show them every respect, and though he was not forward, he was quite ready to converse with them if they seemed so inclined.

"How did you manage it? What course of training did you pursue?" people used to inquire.

"Well," I heard his mother answer, laughingly, at one time, "for one thing I never snubbed him. He has no idea that there are people in the world who do not like boys. He supposes that everybody is as friendly as he himself. Then I have always brought him up to take care of me, and he polite to me: and I am as careful to be considerate and courteous to him as I am to his father. So he never has to put on his good manners; they are the habit of his life. I think that is about all there is of it."

That was all; but it was a good deal, and if all parents would pursue the same course, they would have less occasion to lament their children's rudeness and awkwardness.—Christian at Work.

Sour People.

Some people not only have a hard time in getting through the world themselves, but they make it hard for other people.

The more sour people profess to have religion, the harder they make it for the Lord to reach those who have much to do with them.

Sour people who claim to be Christians make sinners think that the Lord is opposed to anybody having a good time in this world.

Sometimes people are sour because they have just enough religion to make them miserable, and not enough to make them happy, and sometimes they are born that way.

Sour people are very often made more so by brooding over their troubles, and thinking only of themselves and their disappointments, instead of meditating upon the goodness of God and his unfailing kindness.

Sour people ought to remember that a "merry heart doeth good like a medicine," but a broken spirit drieth the bones."

Nothing can so quickly take the bitterness out of the heart and put a smile on the face that will keep sweet in any climate, as to become well acquainted with the Lord Jesus Christ.

An insane man turned loose with a shot-gun would not do as much harm as some people do with bitter hearts and long faces.—Exchange.

Whose Fault Was It?

One Sunday morning, as a young minister was leaving the church where he had conducted the services, he was accosted by an elderly man who had been one of his hearers, and who said to him, bluntly: "You gave us nothing this morning."

It was not very kind or considerate on the part of the old man to say that, and especially to say it so abruptly. Even if it had been true—and of course it might have been—it might have been better left unsaid. To say the least, if said at all, it should have been said very differently. But it might not be true, and somebody might have found a word of comfort and life although the old man did not.

"I think I know what you mean," replied the young minister. "You mean that you did not enjoy the service. But will you allow me to ask you a question or two?"

The old man gave a look of assent, and the preacher said to him:

"May I ask it, before coming to church this morning, you asked God's blessing on behalf of all ministers of his Word this morning, and, among them, on behalf of the one whom you might hear?"

The man hesitated, but at length replied that he could not say that he had.

"I should like to ask you again," said the preacher, "if, as you came to church this morning, you asked anybody to come with you?"

"No," he said, "I did not. I came straight from home to church without saying a word to anybody."

"May I ask you," said the young man, "just another question? Are you engaged in any useful Christian work—teaching in the Sabbath-school, for instance, or anything else by which men may be brought to Christ?"

The man did not reply very promptly or willingly; but he had to confess that he was doing nothing.

"Then excuse me," said the preacher, "if I tell you I am not surprised to hear you say that you found nothing to interest you in the service."

The writer of this is a minister, and he confesses most frankly and humbly that sermons—and, indeed, the whole of the services of which they form a part—often vary greatly. The minister is not always himself. He may be in feeble health, or there may be sickness in his home, or he may be worried and in trouble, or he may have been interrupted in his preparations, or his subject may not have opened out before him as he hoped and expected it would do. So it might well happen that there was not a great deal in the services for anybody.

But is it always the minister's fault when his hearers find that he has "given them nothing"?—Presbyterian Banner.

THE DEMON OF RESTLESSNESS.—A very considerable amount of what is regarded by some people as intellectual and religious activity is pure nervous excitability; there is neither intellect nor soul in it. There are a great many people who belong to countless clubs of every sort and fashion—for the study of Browning, and Ibsen, and art, and ethics, and esoteric Buddhism—who put the least possible amount of brains into their activity; whose activity has, in fact, no intellectual quality whatever, but is purely nervous restlessness. These people have become chronically inebriated with doing. They must be doing, although that which they do amounts to nothing. Repose, meditation, thought and growth are things which do not enter into their lives. They are always running, always out of breath; but they never reach any definite point, and they never see anything by the way. They are pursued by a demon of restlessness, and condemned to wander forever without repose or refreshment.

It is to be feared that there is a great deal of so-called religious activity which is of the same sort. It is mere nervous restlessness; the incessant activity of people who have no other resource; to whom thorough Bible study, quiet meditation, serious thought, strenuous moral struggle, are as if they were not; people who rush about from one religious activity to another, from organization to organization, from committee to committee, from meeting to meeting, but whose spiritual life has as little volume and force as a mountain brook in August, which is simply a noisy thread of water through a course which it fills only with sound. To really live, one must put both thought and emotion before action; to really achieve anything, action must be the flowering of deep things in the nature, not a mere putting forth of the hands for the sake of occupation. It is wise for all those who find themselves intensely occupied to stop and ask themselves whether their occupation is a matter of nerves or a matter of mind and soul. If it is a matter of nerves, it indicates physical disorder, and medical advice ought to be sought at once. If it is a matter of mind and soul, it indicates the highest degree of healthfulness.—Christian Union.

OUR CHILDREN.—The highest and holiest mission on earth is that given to parents; hence solemn responsibilities attach thereto. What manner of child shall this be, depends greatly on its education. How early does that commence? Some one has answered with the great-grandmother. There is much, very much, in heredity; much in blood, birth; much cause for gratitude when we can say truthfully, "I was well born."

Next to the grace of God in the soul, with its regenerating, sanctifying power, there is nothing for which we are such debtors as for good parentage. I use that word "good" in its broadest sense. Good physically, mentally, spiritually.

To be children of parents who transmitted to us a sound mind in a sound body, the body under complete subjection to the mind, the soul of these parents having been regenerated and sanctified by divine grace—this is an inheritance outvaluing heirship to millions of sordid wealth.

Pre-natal education has its potential influence on the expected child. Would that all parents would bear this solemn thought in mind, with its weight of responsibility, and so educate, discipline, and culture themselves, that their children may reflect the image of their parents to their joy! In other words, parents should be what they desire their children to be, and to this end all else should be subordinate.—Western Christian Advocate.

CONSECRATION.—A personal friend asked Wendell Phillips not long before his death: "Mr. Phillips, did you ever consecrate yourself to God?" "Yes," he answered; "when I was a boy fourteen years of age, in the old church at the north end I heard Lyman Beecher preach on the theme, 'You belong to God,' and I went home after that service, threw myself on the floor in my room, with locked doors, and prayed: 'O God, I belong to thee; take what is thine own. I ask this—that whenever anything be wrong, it may have no power of temptation over me; whenever a thing be right, it may take no courage to do it.' From that day to this it has been so. Whenever I have known a thing to be wrong, it has held no temptation. Whenever I have known a thing to be right, it has taken no courage to do it."—Selected.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

JUST LIKE GOD.

BY VIROE.

I told a little artless child
Creation's wondrous story;
Of mortal man by sin beguiled,
Of God, and all his glory.

Of Eve's temptation, Adam's fall,
And of the flood I told her;
That we were God's dear children all,
But only some were older.

To all I said with glad surprise
All quietly she listened;
The while her earnest, asking eyes
With pearly tear-drops glistened.

Then how the Magi came from far
To see the little stranger—
Led by the light of Bethl'hem's star;
Of Jesus of the manger.

I told her then of Calvary's cross;
The grave within the garden;
The risen Lord, whose earthly loss
Has gained for men their pardon.

"Is it not wonderful," said I,
"That God, so far above us,
Should come to earth to live and die—
So greatly, dearly love us?"

With happy glance, serene and mild,
The love-light shining through it,
"Oh, no, indeed!" replied the child,
"'Twas just like God to do it!"

—Advance.

START EARLY.—One man attributed his success in life to his habit of being fifteen minutes ahead of time. Time enough is usually little enough. We make it a rule when we have finished the work we have to do, to take an early train, the first one if practicable; and never, unless in a case of absolute necessity, to depend on the last train. That train may not run. It may be hindered, it may be wrecked; and then it is too late to remedy the misfortune. Says one sensible writer:

"Never take the last train when you can help it. Much of the trouble in life is caused by the fact that people, in their engagements, wait till the last minute. The seven-o'clock train will take them to the right place if everything goes straight, but in this world things are very apt to go crooked. So you had better take the train that starts an hour earlier. In everything we undertake let us leave a little margin. Do not calculate too closely on possibilities. Better have room and time to spare. Do not take the last train. Not heeding this counsel makes bad work for this world and the next. There are many lines of communication between earth and heaven. Men say they can start any time. After awhile, in great excitement, they rush into the depot of mercy, and find that the final opportunity has left, and behold! it is the last train!"

"Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Do not wait for the last train.—H. L. H., in the Little Christian.

CULTIVATE SELF-RELIANCE.—A little incident at a Summer resort brought into strong contrast two different ways of training children. The mother of a young girl, apparently about eighteen, was suddenly summoned home, and the daughter was left to pack the trunk and follow on a later train. It was a pitiful sight to see the girl stand helplessly before the closets and bureau drawers. Evidently it was her first experience in self-reliance. As the boarders were all on a picnic, save a girl of twelve who proffered assistance. She deftly folded and packed the various garments, not like an expert, but with excellent judgment and a fair degree of success. "Where did you learn to do all this?" asked the other in astonishment. "I never packed a trunk before," was the reply, "but mama always makes me fold away my own clothes and says I must think for myself." The difference in this case was wholly in the bringing up and not in the natural capacity of the two girls. One mother had cultivated dependence by doing everything for her child. The other had given just enough help to develop self-help. Which method prevails in your home?—Congregationalist.

CLEAR-HEADED LITTLE GIRLS.—A gentleman who has a Summer cottage near Boston had occasion last week to come with his wife to the city for a few hours. While they were away a tramp approached their cottage, which is more retired than are many of the others at the same resort, and going up to their two little daughters, aged respectively about six and ten years, asked the elder one if her mother would give him ten cents. Many a less sagacious child would have replied that both her father and mother were away, but this one instantly said she would go and see, and thereupon ran into the house, where she consulted with her nurse, who told her to tell the man no. While she was away the tramp asked her little sister if the dog, which was lying chained upon the piazza, would bite. The presence of mind, keenness and quick-wittedness of the child, who thought scarcely a moment before she answered, "Yes, in hot weather," were much greater than would have been possessed by many older persons under similar circumstances.—Boston Courier.

AN AUTHORITATIVE DECISION.—Tommy came running to his father one day with a weight on his mind: "Sadie says that the moon is made of green cheese, pa, and I don't believe it."

"Don't you believe it? Why not?"

"I know it isn't."

"But how do you know?"

"Is it, papa?"

"Don't ask me that question; you must find out for yourself."

"How can I find it out?"

"You must study into it."

He went to the parlor, took the family Bible from the table, and was missed for some time, when he came running into the study.

"I have found it out. The moon is not made of green cheese, for the moon was made before the cows were."

SACRED MONEY.—Some years ago a gentleman heard two children talking earnestly about their "sacred money." The expression interested him, and he learned, upon inquiry, that these children were in the habit of faithfully setting apart at least one-tenth of all the money which came into their hands, and using it for Christian work. They each kept a purse for this fund, and an account of all that was put into it and paid out of it. Their father said that they themselves had developed the expression, "sacred money." They would often give much more than a tenth to this fund, but never less.—Exchange.

One day in January Edna stood at the window watching a little boy playing in the snow, across the way. "What is he doing?" she asked mama. "I should say he was turning somersets," mama laughed. "Why," said the little girl quickly, "I should say 'twas winter-sets, mama!"

Wind and the Sensation of Cold.

It has been shown that the sensation of cold, as experienced by the human body, bears no constant relation to the rise and fall of the thermometer in its work of recording the varying warmth of the atmosphere, but depends entirely on the temperature of the skin or integumentary surface itself. Thus when the temperature of the skin is raised above the normal by a conservation of its heat more than usually rigid, the delicate nerve-endings in the inner parts of the integuments become peculiarly affected, and the mysterious currents which they then convey to the brain are resolved by the workings of the complexities there into a sensation of warmth in the region that was the source of the nervous disturbance, and in like manner when the temperature of the skin is lowered below the average, the opposite nervous feeling of cold is generated. Air in itself is a poor conductor of heat, and when it remains perfectly still it, therefore, acts somewhat like a blanket in maintaining the natural warmth of the skin, but when in motion as wind, it carries away little by little the heat that is constantly being communicated to its fresh portions as they beat against and pass over its surface. Travelers in high Polar latitudes tell us that as long as the air is quite still, the greatest cold in those regions is bearable, and that it is only when the wind rises that it becomes insufferable, and meteorological records show that what is popularly regarded as a warm Summer, may be in reality colder than a previous Summer season which was declared to be chilly, the reason being that in the former the air is relatively unquiet, while during the latter it was more constantly in motion.—Exchange.

THE SENSES GO TO SLEEP IN DEFINITE ORDER.—According to the best writers on the subject, it has been ascertained that in beginning to sleep the senses do not uniformly fall into a state of slumber, but drop off one after the other. The sight ceases in consequence of the protection of the eyelids to receive impressions first, while all the other senses preserve their sensibility entire. The sense of taste is the next to lose its susceptibility to impressions, and then the sense of smelling. The hearing is next in order, and last of all comes the sense of touch. Furthermore, the senses are thought to sleep with different degrees of profoundness. The sense of touch sleeps the most lightly, and is the most easily awakened; the next is the hearing, the next is sight, and the taste and smelling awake the last. Another remarkable circumstance deserves notice—certain muscles and parts of the body begin to sleep before others. Sleep commences at the extremities, beginning with the feet and legs and creeping toward the centre of nervous action. The necessity for keeping the feet warm and perfectly still as a preliminary of sleep is well known. From these explanations it will not appear surprising that, with one or more of the senses and; perhaps, also one or more parts of the body imperfectly asleep, there should be at the same time an imperfect kind of mental action which produces the phenomenon of dreaming.

EFFECTS OF DIET ON CHARACTER.—Very few persons have the least idea that what they eat has anything to do with their moral status (writes a physician); but it is now generally admitted that the use of alcoholic drinks not only does steal away a man's brain, but enervates and dissipates his moral force; and there are a few who believe that tobacco benumbs the moral sense; others even think that any article having the peculiar principles which set to depress or stimulate, and thus render morbid the nervous system, also tend to impair the physiological harmony of the body, and thus to so derange the mutual reaction of the body and mind on each other as to hinder the development of the higher faculties. I firmly believe that the desire for alcoholic liquors, tobacco and drugs is incited and fostered by pernicious methods of eating, and that purity of life and the development of high moral character depend very largely upon what one eats and drinks.

TAKE ENOUGH SLEEP.—There is a story told of a certain tradesman who was in difficulties, and went to his rich brother for assistance. On his arrival he found him in bed, and had to wait some time for his appearance. "I am surprised at your staying in bed so long," said the poor relation; "I have been up three hours at least." "Yes," replied the more fortunate brother; "but you see when I do get up I am thoroughly awake." The hint was more forcible than thoughtful; yet it contains a lesson which is especially applicable to those who are trying to gain for themselves a livelihood and a fortune. He who has enough sleep has secured one of the safeguards against the encroachments of disease and mental prostration. His nerves are steadier, his intellect is clearer and keener, and the business and responsibility of life are attended to with a degree of comfort and efficiency that are not otherwise attainable.

THE INFLUENCE OF ELECTRIC LIGHT ON HEALTH.—A correspondent of the Lancet draws attention to a statement which has been publicly made that the adoption of the electric lighting in place of gas at the office of the Savings Bank Department of the General Postoffice has been followed by a marked reduction in the amount of sick leave. We have good authority (says the Lancet) for believing that the statement in question is substantially correct; and although the time which has as yet elapsed—two years—since the introduction of the new illuminant has manifestly been insufficient for the collection of reliable statistics, there is, we think, every reason to believe that electric lighting will prove to be more wholesome than ordinary gas flames.

The flora of Europe embraces about 10,000 species. India has about 15,000. The British possessions in North America, though with an area nearly as large as Europe, have only 5,000. One of the richest floras is that of Cape of Good Hope and Natal, which figure up about 10,000 species. Australia is also rich in species, about 10,000 being now known.

The great Lick telescope reveals about one hundred million stars, and every one of them is a sun, theoretically, and by analogy giving light and heat to its planets. This telescope reveals stars so small that it would require thirty thousand of them to be visible to the naked eye.

An electrical thermometer for low temperatures has been devised by a Russian physicist, who utilizes the variation in the resistance of a platinum wire at different temperatures. The instrument is very sensitive, but is slightly inaccurate when used for widely different temperatures.

SARBETT—JOHNSON.—At the residence of the bride's brother-in-law, Mr. James Rogers, Sept. 20, 1891, by Rev. J. F. Robinson, Mr. J. E. Sarbett, of Crystal Springs, and Miss Fannie L. Johnson, of Rankin county, Miss.

OBITUARIES.

HAWSEY—LAMAR RUCKER HAWSEY, only son of T. L. Hewsey and Mary E. Bowman, was born in Lamar county, Texas, Jan. 7, 1882, and died of congestion near Oak Ridge, Morehouse parish, La., Aug. 22, 1891.

None but God knows the hopes which clustered round that only son. He gave no trouble to either parents or teachers. He was intelligent, energetic, considerate and conscientious far beyond his years. Parents and friends heard no ugly or profane word pass his lips. Ever prompt in attendence at school and Sabbath-school, where his report was always "perfect," his many endearing qualities and gentle ways won for him a place in the hearts of his teachers.

"He was a child of quick wit and extreme modesty and refinement. One of his charms was his truthfulness and perfect honesty." His picture will long hang in memory's hall as a reminder of the graces and virtues of one of my purest and best pupils." Such is the tribute from the teacher to whose fold he belonged most of his school-life.

He died in the faith. Only a few days before he died he praised God for salvation, walking the floor, and shouting, "Hallelujah." He was really sick but one day. As death approached his father sat holding his hand. When the summons came, he exclaimed, "Free my hand and let me go." And so he went into the presence of his heavenly Father—a flower plucked from our earth transplanted to the Savior's beautiful garden to bloom forever. Thus he is "saved from the evil to come."

JORDAN—Sister KATE JORDAN was born Jan. 30, 1853, in Harrison county, Miss.; married to Rev. J. L. Jordan, April 28, 1872; departed this life Sept. 15, 1891, aged thirty-eight years. The mother of nine children, two of them preceded her to the glory-land. Sister Jordan united with the M. E. Church, South, when quite young, was converted at Seashore Camp Meeting in 1872, and up to the day of her death lived a consistent life.

She was a devoted wife and mother, a kind friend and neighbor, a co-worker with her husband in the vineyard of the Lord, always ready to work for the Lord. Alternating with her husband in family devotion, and in his absence she gathered the little lambs around the altar, consecrating herself and them to the Lord. The writer has often heard the fervent prayers of Sister Jordan in prayer meetings and stormed the altar in behalf of the struggling penitent.

Her illness was protracted, and on the forty-fifth day of her illness the silver thread of life was broken and her happy soul took leave of the body to join the heavenly choir above in singing the song of Moses and the Lamb. She leaves a kind husband and seven children, father, mother, brothers and sisters, as well as a large circle of friends, to mourn her death; but we mourn not as those who have no hope, for we know that she shall live again!

W. G. EVANS, L. E.

Whittington circuit, Miss.

MOBLEY—JOHN WESLEY MOBLEY, youngest son of P. M. and Colista Mobley, was born Dec. 13, 1869, and died June 27, 1891, aged twenty-two years. He professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Wall Hill, under the ministry of the Rev. J. H. Brooks, in the year 1881. In Dec. 25, 1891, he was married to Miss Mary Hledsoe, by the same minister, and in six months thereafter God called him home.

Johnnie was a good boy, faithful to his devoted parents under all circumstances. He was a moral man, and was always found in good company; and after his conversion he lived his religion in his every-day life. Two months of his short married life he was confined to his bed. His faithful wife and parents stood by his bedside watching and waiting anxiously for his recovery; but they were submissive to the divine will of God. With these loved ones he leaves brothers and sisters, who feel the loss of a kind brother. May the Lord bring them all safely over the last river, where they will meet brother Johnnie again!

W. T. BARNETT, P. C.

MAY—SAMUEL MAY, youngest child and son of John and Lizzie May. Little Sammie was born Aug. 20, 1887; died Sept. 14, 1891, aged four years and twenty-five days.

Little Sam, as we all called him, was an intelligent and affectionate child. Why this flower was plucked from the family garden we should not question, as God's way is not our way, nor his thoughts like unto ours; as I told the family it might have been done to have made their attraction for heaven dearer and sweeter for them. He had been very healthy all of his life. His illness only lasted about ten days. He bore it patiently until the end, when God bade one of his angels to come down in that home and bring to him little Sammie's spirit. Parents, it is all well with your sweet, precious child; only be faithful. Little Sam is waiting for you all in that "glory-world." May the blessings of heaven rest upon you, and may you so live as to one day meet the bright little angel, who will be watching and waiting for you!

W. T. WOODWARD, Pastor.

HOYT—On the morning of April 2, 1891, death came to the home of Bro. S. D. and Sister Olivia Hoyt, of Livingston parish, La., and claimed their second son, our young brother, JASON DECATUR HOYT, for his victim. He was born June 12, 1876, and the length of his pilgrimage with us was but fourteen years ten months and twenty days.

In his early childhood he manifested a deep piety; was subject to his parents, benignant to those of his own family, and genial with friends. As a youth, he was of manly integrity, devotional in character, and holy in life. He united with the M. E. Church, South, Aug. 13, 1890, and was a worthy member of the same to the day of his death. He was a regular attendant of the Sunday-school, and very seldom, if ever, absented himself from the worship of the sanctuary. It was his delight to be with God's people. The house of God seemed to be his home, and he said, as it were, his young life upon the altar there. In his last moments there was an outburst of song, accompanied with acclamations of ecstatic joy, evincing a glorious triumph, assuring a supernal bliss, and an everlasting salvation. Many loved ones and friends bewail his departure. The Lord comfort as thou only canst.

HERVIE MELLARD.

MURRY—At his home, on May 12, 1891, Bro. MARSHALL HOWELL MURRY passed to the great beyond in the triumphs of a living faith; gave back his spirit to his Maker. He was born May 27, 1825; married Cassie Jenkins, Aug. 15, 1850; united with the church at the age of twenty-one.

He adopted as his motto, "Right is might," and, with a firm mind and pure heart, battled bravely every obstacle that barred the way in his noble advance. As a husband, he was affectionate and kind; as a father, he was all the word implies—made a happy home for his children that loved him with a devotion seldom equaled; as a citizen, he will be missed as few men would; as a friend, he was kind, sympathetic and genial. As I write his kind face looks at me through the vistas of the future, pointing me to an eternal friendship beyond. As a benefactor, he was generous to a fault. He opened wide his portals to the distressed, bade them come in and be welcomed and rest with kindly attention, and made happy their stay. This was ever his Christ-like way. I would remind the stricken family that every Calvary has its Olivet, and while our homes are made lonely by this loss, the house of many mansions has another jewel added to its adornment.

A FRIEND.

CAMPBELL—DAVID P. CAMPBELL was born Aug. 20, 1855, and departed this life April 3, 1890, near Dublin, Miss. It was not my privilege to know the deceased; but he has left a good name behind him, which is better than many riches. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and died, we trust, believing in our risen Lord.

KATIE M. CAMPBELL, wife of Bro. Campbell, was born Jan. 2, 1859, and died Sept. 11, 1891. She was married March 6, 1876, and lived with her husband in happiness till the day of his death.

She was a friend to the afflicted, ministering to their wants, sitting by their bedside to comfort and console. Gentle, kind and sympathetic as she was, her deeds of charity will not soon be forgotten. She left two little children to be cared for by some gentle hand; but we know that God will care for these innocent and homeless orphans with tenderest compassion. May God's loving arms be stretched forth to these lonely children, and may that Christ protect them who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not!" May God's comforting grace abide with the relatives of our deceased sister!

E. S. LEWIS.

GRAY—On Sept. 3, in the forty-third year of her age, Mrs. DIANA GRAY, wife of John Gray, of Evergreen, was called from her post of usefulness in this "working-day world" to the state of rest and blessedness, in that upper sphere, that awaits the "pure in heart."

Her entire life has been marked by a cheerful, courageous effort to draw from all the changes and trials of circumstance and position the very best that could be evolved from them by a spirit of enterprise which hopefully employed all her resources, material, mental and moral. Her faithfulness and devotion to the weal of her family, under adverse circumstances, and for some years under the increasingly enfeebling influence of the destroyer, to which she finally succumbed, illustrated the divine mission of him who "came not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

In her last days she united with the Methodist Church; setting her dying seal to the value of the duty and the privilege of being enrolled among the professed followers of her Savior.

May the sympathizing Savior comfort her bereaved ones, and lead them to emulate her example!

Talk's cheap, but when it's backed up by a pledge of the hard cash of a financially responsible firm, or company, of world-wide reputation for fair and honorable dealing, it means business!

Now, there are scores of sarsaparillas and other blood-purifiers, all cracked up to be the best, purest, most peculiar and wonderful, but bear in mind (for your own sake), there's only one guaranteed blood-purifier and remedy for torpid liver and all diseases that come from bad blood.

That one—standing solitary and alone—sold on trial, is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

If it doesn't do good in skin, scalp and scrofulous diseases—and pulmonary consumption is only lung-scrofula—just let its makers know and get your money back.

Talk's cheap, but to back a poor medicine, or a common one, by selling it on trial, as "Golden Medical Discovery" is sold, would bankrupt the largest fortune.

Talk's cheap, but only "Discovery" is guaranteed.

There is nothing which succeeds like success; and the success of any publication which admits advertising is also the success of the advertisers.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

For Over Fifty Years

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Summer.

Summer, with its worries and sickness, is with us. Four-fifths of the sickness that wears out temper and health can be disposed of by using Creole Female Tonic.

From Seven Thousand Dollars to Twenty-One Thousand Eight Hundred and Sixty-Three Dollars.

Twenty-one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three dollars has just been paid by The Mutual Life Insurance Company on an original $7,000 insurance policy.

A result never equaled or even approached by any other company in the world. The fortunate assured was Mr. Charles Dellinger, of Mobile, Ala., who was forty-one years old when he became a member of the company.

RECAPITULATION.

1—Cash value of the dividends 100 per cent. of premiums.

2—Additions to policy 143 per cent. of premiums.

3—Insurance paid 312 per cent. of original amount.

4—Investment, 3 per cent. compound interest.

5—Insured 44 years, from age 41 to age 85.

6—No taxes, care or expense connected with the insurance.

Remember this company is purely mutual; all profits belong to the members. It is also the largest and most profitable company in the world. Mr. T. H. Bowles is the general agent, 120 Common street, New Orleans, La.

A New and Useful Invention,

in which every citizen of New Orleans is vitally interested, is now being introduced by the Coe Man'f'g Co., Limited, 101 Camp street—Coe's Automatic Rain Water Cut-off, patented April 21, 1891. This machine is very moderate in cost ($5.50 to $10 according to size and material). It is very simple and perfectly automatic and reliable. Requires no attention after it is once put on a cistern pipe, and will effectually prevent all Dust, Dirt, Refuse, Roaches, Rats, etc., from getting into the cistern at all times, thereby insuring pure, wholesome water. It will save, perhaps, ten times its cost in doctor's and drug bills in one year.

Notice.

We are in receipt of the new descriptive catalogue for 1891-92 of the Glen St. Mary Nurseries, G. L. Taber, proprietor, Glen St. Mary, Fla.

Mr. Taber has, for many years past, been intimately connected with the fruit-growing interests of the South, both in orchard and nursery, and, in his large experimental orchards, has proven the merits or demerits of a large number of both new and old varieties.

We do not hesitate to say that his comprehensive catalogue should be in the hands of every Southern fruit grower.

Don't waste precious time.—Use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup at once for your cough or cold.

Beware of frauds!—You want the genuine Salvation Oil for your headache. 25 cents.

The National Convention of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen opened in Galesburg, Ill., on Oct. 5.

Fashion's Edict.

"The time was," remarked the old physician, "when frail health was fashionable with ladies."

All that is changed now—Creole Female Tonic has been the means of restoring robust health to thousands of ladies that formerly were victims of that popular fad.

An attempt has been made to blow up the episcopal palace at Trieste, Austria.

Do not wait until you are attacked with Cholera Morbus, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Summer Complaint, or any relaxed condition of the Bowels, but have Maguire's Benne Plant constantly on hand to meet the emergency. Price 75 cents per bottle. Expressage paid if 3 bottles are ordered. J. & C. Maguire, St. Louis, Mo.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Southern Interstate Exposition at Raleigh, N. C., opened on Oct. 1.

At the burning of a tenement building in New York City, on Oct. 5, several persons were killed and many others seriously injured.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota has reversed the decision of the lower courts and filed a decision finding the dealing in grain futures illegal and void.

Grand festivals were held by the Germans in New York and St. Louis on Oct. 4, in commemoration of the landing of the first German immigrants on American soil from the sailing vessel Concord from Amsterdam, which reached Philadelphia on Oct. 6, 1683.

At a meeting in Alexandria, La., last week, the People's party was organized by representatives of labor unions and the dissenting members of the Farmers' Alliance. An address to the people of the State was adopted, and executive and campaign committees were appointed.

The Irish National League of America convened at Chicago on Oct. 1. The chairman said that when the "Irish people in Ireland" presented a strong and united front independent of English parties, then, and not till then, should they receive the moral and material support of their Irish brethren in America.

The first payments of bounty under the law giving a bounty of 2 cents a pound on sugar produced in the United States was made last week at the Treasury Department. They were both in favor of the Chino Valley Sugar Company, of Chino, Cal., on two claims for the production of 340,000 pounds of beet sugar, and amounted to $6,800.

The application for a sugar bounty goes from the internal revenue bureau to the fifth auditor to be examined, then to the first comptroller, then to the register, next to the secretary of the treasury for approval, thence to the treasurer of the United States, who will issue a draft, which will go to the internal revenue bureau and be forwarded to the sugar producer.

The Corn Palace at Sioux City Iowa, opened Oct. 1, and will close on the seventeenth. Besides exhibits from all over the country, one entire wing of the building is devoted to exhibits from the Southern States and from Central and South America. A large number of former residents of Illinois and Iowa, now citizens of Louisiana and Mississippi, have contributed to the success of the Southern exhibit.

FOREIGN.

A monument to Garibaldi was unveiled at Nice, Italy, on Oct. 4.

Mr. Gladstone made a speech, at New Castle, on Oct. 2, before an audience of 4,000 people, in which he reviewed the Salisbury government.

An unsuccessful attempt was made last week to blow up a railroad bridge at Rosenthal, over which a train having on board the Emperor of Austria was to pass.

General Boulanger, the idol of a political faction in France, and ex-Minister of War of that country, committed suicide in Belgium, his place of exile, last week.

The report of a Royal Commission, recently appointed by the British government to consider the subject, places the value of the British merchant marine and cargoes constantly afloat at £900,000,000 or $4,365,000,000.

Figaro and other papers urge the government to grant amnesty to the Boulangist exiles, now that their leader is dead. The revisionists have issued a manifesto declaring their intention to continue Boulanger's work.

A brisk exchange of telegrams between the European capitals has taken place, with a view of reinforcing the European squadrons in Chinese waters, and affording better protection to the European colonies on the banks of the Yang-Tse-Klang.

A company which has been prospecting on the right bank of the Rhine, near Badenweiler, a village of Baden, has discovered ore which, upon being assayed, has been found to contain 80 per cent. of lead and 16 per cent. of copper, the rest being silver.

Overzealous French pilgrims to Rome, on Oct. 3, manifested open disrespect on the tomb of King Victor Emanuel, who unified Italy, deprived the Pope of his temporal power and made Rome his capital. A row ensued between the citizens and pilgrims; but the guards by prompt action prevented violence.

At an immense meeting of the workingmen in Hyde Park, in London, on Oct. 4, the liberal federation was denounced for suppressing free speech, neglecting the workingmen and giving precedence to Ireland, and resolutions were adopted declaring that the liberal party is unworthy of confidence, and that a labor league should be formed in order to secure labor representatives in Parliament.

In the near future aggregate claims from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 will be presented to the new government of Chili by the English, German, Spanish and Italian governments for houses and property destroyed at Iqulque, when that town was bombarded, and at Valparaiso, when this city was sacked after the overthrow of Baimaceda; also for losses caused by detentions of shipping and for the use of private railroads during the past eight months.

By royal decree, communicated to the governor general of Cuba by the colonial minister at Madrid, the privileges granted to the United States by the last reciprocal commercial arrangement between the United States and Spain shall also be granted to all nations which, in their treaties with Spain, have the clause of most favored nations, as long as said treaties are in operation. After the first of July, 1892, only the United States will enjoy the privileges of the arrangement.

Woman's Duty.

She owes it to herself and to the entire human family to fight the inroads of disease. Creole Female Tonic eradicates disease and makes the weak woman strong.

Some merchants get the best they can; some get the meanest they can.

Your dealer in lamp-chimneys—what does he get for you?

There are common glass and tough glass, tough against heat. There are foggy and clear. There are rough and fine. There are carefully made and hap-hazard.

You can't be an expert in chimneys; but this you can do. Insist on Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass" whichever shape you require. They are right in all those ways; and they do not break from heat, not one in a hundred.

Be willing to pay a nickel more for them.

Second Ecumenical Methodist Conference.

BY REV. J. W. CORNELIUS.

The Second Ecumenical Conference opened at Metropolitan Church, Wednesday morning, Oct. 7. The actual number of delegates present was about 476, representing 29 branches of the great Methodist family throughout the world. While we may not affirm that these official representatives are the greatest men in their respective churches, it is safe to say that they are generally equal to the greatest. They include Bishops, editors, college presidents, pastors and laymen of all grades of distinction and professional, commercial and political life, and unitedly constitute what is probably the most important religious gathering ever assembled on this continent. Bishop Thomas Bowman, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, called the Conference to order at ten o'clock. With him on the platform were seated Rev. Wm. Arthur, the preacher of the morning; Dr. Stephenson, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference; Bishop Keener, M. E. Church, South; Dr. Sutherman, superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada; Bishop Hurst, President Bishop of the M. E. Church and chairman of the Business Committee; Bishop Wayman, of the African M. E. Church; Dr. Myers, of the Methodist Free Church, and others. Hymn 822, of the M. E. Hymnal, beginning "Jesus, the name high over all," was sung, and the audience led in prayer by Bishop Keener. Rev. S. Huston, of N. S., read a Bible lesson, and Rev. Wm. Arthur read with much effect and tenderness Hymn 955, of the M. E. selection, "Come, let us anew our journey pursue." Mr. Arthur then stated his physical inability to read the sermon which he had been appointed to prepare, and he had, therefore, requested Dr. Stephenson to render that service. Text: Isaiah viii, 18; subject: The Holy Seed; the Credentials of the Church. The discourse was, doubtless, one of the supreme efforts of Mr. Arthur's life, and the universal impression produced upon the vast assembly was profound and deeply spiritual. The presence of God amongst His people as their life and safety and power was a leading thought enforced by many arguments, appeals and illustrations. At the conclusion of the sermon the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered; Bishop Foster, of the M. E. Church, superintending the ceremony.

The afternoon session, the first day, was presided over by Bishop Keener, and the music was conducted by E. O. Excell, Esq., of Chicago. The venerable Wm. Nast, father of German Methodism in America and in Europe, Patriarch of eighty-four years, offered the opening prayer. Permanent officers were selected. Bishop John Hurst then delivered the first address of welcome. He referred to the genuine heartiness with which the citizens of Washington greeted these delegates from all parts of the world. He sketched the rise of Methodism in America, and traced its great progress in all the forty-eight States of this Republic as well as in Canada.

Every Methodist Episcopalian may well be proud of Bishop Hurst's address. It was scholarly, statesmanlike, fluent, versatile and vigorous. While addressing the French delegates, he spoke in the French language; while addressing the German delegation, he spoke in the German language, much to their edification, doubtless, and much to the amusement of the audience at large.

James H. Carlisle, LL.D., the layman of the M. E. Church, South; president of the Spartanburg College, South Carolina, delivered the second address of welcome, which was many times cheered to the echo. Rev. George Douglass, of Canada, also delivered an address of welcome. Although afflicted with a cancerous disease in the mouth, which impairs enunciation, and although almost totally blind and afflicted in the limbs, Mr. Douglass delivered one of the most inspiring and scholarly of all the addresses of the day.

The responses were made by Dr. Stephenson, of England; Dr. George Green, of the Primitives; and Rev. R. Abercrombie, of the Free Church. Dr. Stephenson's address was quite remarkable. He is a man of fine physique, rapid utterance, weighty and numerous ideas, and evidently is one of the leading Methodist preachers of the world. Mr. Green's talk was decidedly unique, courageous and attractive. Mr. Abercrombie made instructive contrasts between the Ecumenical Conference of ten years ago and this, being a member of both.

SECOND DAY.

The morning session of the second day was presided over by Dr. Stephenson, president of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference. After singing "All hail the power of Jesus' name!" Rev. James Crabtree, of Manchester, read a scriptural selection from John xvii, and Rev. Wm. Wilson, formerly missionary to Fiji, offered prayer. Bishop Hurst exhibited a chair made from two beams of the original City Road Chapel, which had been secured by Dr. Stephenson, and would be occupied by the presiding officers of this Conference. The ornamentation and upholstering of the chair cost $250, and it is the design to purchase it for the American University. A Bible also, which for 150 years was in the possession of the Epworth Church, during the pastorate of Rev. Samuel Wesley, father of John Wesley, and afterwards, was also exhibited.

THIRD DAY.

The following condensed report is from the Washington Post:

Topic: "The Christian Church: Its Essential Unity and Genuine Catholicity." This, boiled down, means the status of Methodism in various parts of the world. Of papers bearing on the status of the church in the Eastern Section, that by Rev. D. J. Waller, secretary of the British Wesleyan Conference, was notable. Dr. Waller cited figures to prove the phenomenal progress of the Methodist Church in England during the past ten years. In this time, although the population has increased over 11 per cent., the membership of the Wesleyan Church had increased over 21 per cent., and in other Methodist Churches there has been an increase of over 10 per cent. There are 2,000,000 scholars in the Sunday-schools, and the day-schools are the very best in the nation. All these forward steps, said Dr. Waller, had been accomplished in the face of the social, political and ecclesiastical forces with which Methodism has had to contend. It would be difficult to exaggerate the power of these forces. In Ireland the work had been prosecuted in the presence of a powerful and intolerant Romanism, a power with which, Dr. Waller predicted, the Americans would yet have to reckon. He concluded his paper with an eloquent review of the influence which Wesleyanism had exerted upon universal evangelical Christianity.

Bishop Fowler, of the M. E. Church, read a paper representing the status of Methodism in the Western Section, which was enthusiastically received. The following are extracts:

Already the great question of saving this world is reduced to questions of money. We have the Bible, the steam presses, the steamship, the open world, the theology, the biblical scholarship, the general intelligence, the personal experience, the consecrated men and women. All we lack is consecrated money.

Methodism crossed the brook into this century leaning on a solitary staff. She will cross over out of this century with more than two bands, besides flocks and herds and camels and asses.

The emphasis with which Bishop Fowler dwelt on the word "asses" can never be properly preserved. It needed a phonograph to embalm its fullness of meaning.

Two paragraphs that were applauded with especial vigor were as follows:

Once a few knights in steel and armed with spears and swords and battle-axes could ride down thousands of unarmed peasants. But some old chemist borrowed gunpowder from the Chinese, and then any finger that could pull a trigger could overthrow the mailed knight and his horse like sheep in a slaughter-pen. So once it was that kings and their courts monopolized all knowledge as well as all power. The only brain in the nation occupied the throne or the saddle. The people were nothing but bedding for horses or food for powder. But that Germun in Metz picked up his movable type and set up his printing-press like a new divinity. Kings slid down from divine right to be content with human rights. There rose above all thrones and above all despotism that sleepless, deathless, resistless power—public opinion. That is the power back of the bench, the pulpit, the ballots, and the bullets. The great problem of governing these millions of America is the simple question of forming public opinion. Methodism having nearly one-half of the people of this country studying in her Sunday-schools, listening to her pulpit, and reading her literature, has only to be worthy of her inheritance and true to her God to make this land the Land of Promise for the ignorant and oppressed, and this approaching century the golden age for the race.

We have need of ideas. We must reach out in all directions with the appliances necessary for varied success. We ought to capture and utilize every secret that brings success to any other church. Romanism, with no pretense to converting grace, does a large business by the power of her organization and of her architecture. The Protestant Episcopal Church achieves commendable success by her social forces. Congregationalism makes itself fairly useful by her emphasis upon education. Presbyterianism holds a front line by her family following and family training. The great Baptist Church pushes forward by her immense energy and definite ceremony, and by counting as good fish everything that comes into her deep sea net. The Salvation Army is rolling up a great army of workers by abandoning her pride and respectability to start with and by providing no ambulances and making no provision for drones. It is work or die. Methodism needs the courage to seize and utilize all these ideas from the cathedral to the rescue mission, from the university to the family, from the organ to the tombstone, from the great preacher to the weeping tramp. There must be no power too great for us to master and no instrument too difficult to handle for us to utilize.

Bishop Foster was followed by Bishop C. B. Galloway, of the M. E. Church, South. He devoted his remarks largely to the subject of the status of Methodism in this country. Speaking for the South, he said that it had a rich Methodist heritage. The first Methodist society was there organized and the first chapel built. The first Methodist missionary society was also organized there. The spirit of Methodism seemed to peculiarly fit the Southern temperament, as evidenced by its warm reception and rapid growth. The first native itinerant preacher came from under the Southern skies, and Jesse Lee went forth from the South to evangelize New England. Every sixth soul in the South was a Methodist. There Methodism had passed the apologetic period. The old period of persecution and ridicule had passed away. Methodism had graven itself deeply into society. All grades of wealth, all positions of political responsibility were open to it.

In the South, he said, the original creed was guarded, and theological adventurers found no favor there. After a trial of more than a century, the people were satisfied with Methodist itineranoy and superintendency. Theirs was pre-eminently a sent, and not a called, ministry. With them it would be an impeachment of honesty to be accused of seeking a special place, and no army had ever had fewer men to desert the flag or the field. There was little sympathy with those who believed in shirking responsibility for the men, and imposing a fancy franchise upon the women. (Applause.) There had, consequently, been a healthy growth in the Church, South; a satisfying growth in the cities, and a majestic growth in the rural districts. In the country was raised the purer, steadier citizenship, and he would not neglect in favor of the denizens of the cities the men who stood behind the plow.

Rev. Dr. William Briggs, of Toronto, represented, as he said, the Methodist Church without prefix or suffix. He described the enormous boundaries of the Dominion, paid a tribute to the energy of its people, and predicted that when the North Pole was discovered, a Canadian would be found upon it waving the Union Jack. In Canada the church needed no distinguishing appellation, such as Wesleyan, or Episcopal, or Bible, or anything else, for it was known by that grand old generic term—the Methodist Church. He described the growth of the church in Canada, saying that it was the largest in membership of any Protestant Church, and included one-third of the Protestant communicants. In Ontario one person in every four was a Methodist.

The temperance question was one that received great attention. As a church, the Methodists of Canada were the first and foremost in fighting the great evil of intemperance. In this new land, with its strength and vitality, Methodism seemed to be of larger enterprise and greater facility, and with greater capacity for success than in any land under the sun.

The third address was delivered by Bishop B. W. Arnett, of Wilberforce, Ohio, representing the African Methodist Episcopal Church. He was greeted with applause when he came upon the platform, and his witty sallies kept the delegates constantly applauding and laughing. He was as earnest, however, as he was clever.

The Bishop said that he spoke for the Western Section, with 120,000,000 population, and of these he represented 19,000,000 people. There was a dark side as well as a light side to every question. He recalled that in Wesley's chronicles it was shown that in 1758 Wesley baptized one white man and two colored men; that with Philip Embury and Barbara Heck was Betty, the colored servant. "We are equal in origin, equal in responsibility and in destiny," said the Bishop. "We are connected with the British and American Methodism—no matter where they found their source, and by the grace of God we are going to stay." (Applause.)

Continuing, the speaker recalled that the colored people had participated in every step of the growth of Methodism. To hear the gospel, they had sat up high in the South and hid behind the door up North, but they had the grace of God in their hearts all the time. Now there were 8,752 traveling preachers in the African Church. Then his Protestant Episcopal brothers had some, too. They married their sons to the other's daughters, and if there was a good thing in either church, they were sure to get it.

Altogether, there were more than half of the negroes in the United States influenced by the African Methodist pulpits. There were peculiar missions for the African Church. It had to show the negro not only how to wear the golden slippers, but to get and wear his shoes on Pennsylvania avenue. It gave him the spelling-book, that he might be educated, and helped him to earn and keep money, for by a fat pocket-book would he find the way to the Anglo-Saxon heart. (Laughter.) With the spelling-book, the prayer-book and the pocket-book Methodism could conquer the world.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. Randle, Homer, La., Oct. 2: "We have had our meeting at Homer, resulting in four accessions to the church and a revival of some of the church. Bros. May, Hubert and Herman Knickerbocker assisted me, doing good service."

R. G. Williams, Vernal, Miss., Oct. 1: "Just closed a protracted meeting at this place, held by Bro. L. R. Roberts, assisted by Bro. D. C. Rawls, of State Line, Miss., with two accessions to the church, some convorsions, and the whole church revived. Just such a meeting as we were looking for at old Vernal. To God be all the praise."

Rev. J. F. Robinson, P. C., Steen's Creek, Miss., Oct. 6: "Our protracted meetings, seven in all, have been held, five of them with fine results. The ingathering has not been as great as the two years past. Thirty-four received on profession of faith and three by certificate. At this church (Marvin) we had eight accessions, from nine to fifteen years of age. A more interesting and intelligent class of children it has never been my privilege to receive into the church. The churches have been quickened, and the work done seems to be permanent. We expect to report all collections in full from Marvin circuit at Conference. The interest of the dear old ADVOCATE is not lost sight of. May God continue to bless it and give it greater success!"

Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Brandon, Miss.: "Our last quarterly meeting for this year has been held. Our Conference collections were not up; but we hope to have them up in full by Conference. This is our third year here, and up to date we have taken fifty-seven persons into the church. Our weekly prayer meeting is well attended. We have an average attendance of sixty-five pupils at Sunday-school. Our congregations are good, morning and at night. Ever and anon we have a most delightful experience meeting immediately after eleven o'clock service. We have a communion service on the first Sunday of every month, and we are happy to say that we do not know of a single member of our church but who communes when present. We are endeavoring to get the ADVOCATE in every Methodist family. Our protracted meeting is to come off soon. Pray for us."

Rev. J. H. Evans, Williamsburg, Miss., Oct. 1: "I have finished my protracted meetings. I have held five, one being a union meeting, which we have just closed Tuesday, Sept. 29. It was at Eminence Church. We have let the Methodist Protestants organize in our church until they can build, and we held a meeting together, which commenced last Saturday and continued until Tuesday, which resulted in a gracious revival. Several bright conversions, and the lukewarm were stirred up to a double diligence of duty, the backslidden reclaimed, and church members built up in the most holy faith. Rev. Bros. Henry Moore and Ridgeway and Joseph Napier commenced the meeting on Saturday, and on Monday I got there, and we continued until Tuesday. I received three adults; baptized two of them; baptized four children. The Protestants received two into the church, and baptized three or four children."

Rev. W. A. Richardson, assistant preacher, Winnsboro circuit, Holly Grove, La.: "I have charge of three churches on this work, namely: Holly Grove, Oak Grove, and Big Creek. I held my meeting at Big Creek about a month ago, resulting in fourteen accessions to the church and a number of conversions. Bro. T. B. Reneau, the pastor in charge, helped me, and the church was greatly revived. I have just closed a meeting at this place (Bro. Hamil being my help), which resulted in two accessions and several conversions. This is my first trial in God's vineyard; but, blessed be his holy name! I believe he is going to crown my feeble efforts with success. I expect to join the Conference in December, and go into the work whole soul and body; and if I am returned to this work, I believe I will be able to build two churches, as I have already had several thousand feet of lumber and some money subscribed, payable this Winter. Brethren, pray for my success."

Rev. A. T. Buck, Plattsburg, North Mississippi Conference, Sept. 28: "Protracted meetings are over, and we are at home again, though 'worn and dusty.' We feel that the results of these meetings (four in number) will never be fully known till the mortal shall put on immortality, and when final accounts shall be rendered. At our first meeting the blessed Lord came into our midst and seemed to take up his abode with us, giving us 'power with God and with man,' and enabling us to 'go forth conquering and to conquer.' Churches all revived. Quite a number of family altars erected; ten at one church. Scores of sinners convicted of sin and born into God's kingdom. Thirty-six accessions to our church, making thirty-nine to date, with, we hope, more to follow. We would like to go into details, but our hearts are so full we fear we could never tell it. To God be the praise. We beg to extend thanks to Bros. Perkins, Long, Williams, Boone, and my brother, J. E. Buck, for their efficient service; and may the blessings of the divine Master ever attend them!"

Rev. R. M. Evans, Sallis, Miss.: "I am glad to report this charge in a growing condition. More than one hundred names have been added to its roll during the past few weeks, and multiplied scores have placed themselves upon the altar of duty and privilege. We had 58 accessions at Bethel, and a general sweep of grace throughout the church and community. Our Young Men's Christian Association at the same point received 22 promising young men as an additional result of the meeting. At Pleasant Hill we had 20 accessions, a great number revived, and two young ladies gave themselves wholly unto the Lord. They now conduct religious services at home, abroad—anywhere. At Clear Branch we had a real, rich work of grace which will not soon be forgotten. Bro. L. D. Worsham rendered us faithful services. We had 6 additions. Our meetings at Spring Dale and Spring Ridge were good, but not so extensive. We have already written up our tabernacle meeting at Sallis. Finally, we are pushing everything for all it is worth, and hope to be able to render a report at Conference that we will not be ashamed of at the judgment. To God be all the glory and praise now and forever. Amen and amen!"

Rev. J. C. Campbell, Covington, La., Oct. 5: "We have just closed the last meeting for this work; and while there has not been as great a revival all around as I would like to see, yet I think the church has been strengthened and its members built up in the faith. I think we have reasons to feel encouraged. Pray for us, that the strongholds of Satan may be rooted out. This is a hard field, spiritually, to work in; but, in the name of Him who sent me, I hope to accomplish great good. We had to assist in our meetings Revs. D. L. Mitchel, Nicolas Joyner, H. W. Wallace, J. W. Sandell, and H. S. Johns, all of whom did good preaching, and labored zealously for the salvation of souls. Dr. Hunnicutt and Rev. C. McDonald, our beloved presiding elder, passed through our town en route home from St. Tammany Camp Meeting. Dr. Hunnicutt was at work in behalf of the endowment fund for Centenary. Among other things that the Lord has done for us, he put it into the hearts of the people to make the pastor and his family feel good from a pounding with good things—baskets and bundles of fruits, jellies, preserves, canned goods, as well as a good supply of flour, coffee, sugar, etc. This is the third time we have been treated in this way since we came among this good people. May the Lord bless them and make them rich in spiritual things! Pray for us."

Rev. Hesiep R. Tucker, Houston, North Mississippi Conference, Oct. 5: "We have just closed a meeting of wonderful power at this place of two weeks' duration. The church was graciously revived, and Christians of all denominations became zealous and earnest in working for the Lord. Sinners were converted, and, in proportion to the number outside the church, the ingathering was good. We received a class of six promising young people into the Methodist Church, and as many joined the other churches. We were assisted the first week by Rev. J. W. Luler, who preached five earnest sermons, and accomplished good for the Master. Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur and Sunday-school agent, was with us throughout the meeting, and did fine work, and left much loved by our people. Bro. Bachman, while here, attended forty services, sold many good books, and secured a number of subscribers to our church papers. He has done a good work here, and our people appreciate it. We heartily commend him and the good work he is doing for the church. We have had a revival at each appointment in this charge. Had twenty-one accessions to the Methodist Church, the collections ordered by the Conference are in sight, and, altogether, the church is in good condition. The hymn book of our church is in favor with our people. We use it in our Sunday-schools and prayer meetings as well as in the public Sunday service."

A PICTURE OF THE CHRIST.

BY SIR EDWIN ARNOLD.

One
Of such commanding stature—beautiful—
Bearing such countenance as whoso gazed
Must love or fear. Wine-color shone his hair,
Glittering and waved, an aureole folded down,
Its long rays lighted locks, which fell and flowed,
Fair parted from the middle of his head,
After the manner of the Nazarites,
Of dignity surpassing, pure and pale
As lightning leaping sudden from the sky,
As the Greeks' marble, but flushed frequently
With the bright blood of manhood. Nose and mouth
Faultless for grace, and full and soft the beard,
Forked, of the hazel color of his hair,
The great eyes blue and radiant, mild as sky,
Even and clear his forehead and the face
Of spring-time after rain, yet terrible
When he rebuked. In admonition calm
In tender hours each word like music's soul
Heard past the sound! Not oftimes seen to smile,
More oft to weep; yet of a lofty cheer
Commonly—nay, of playful raillery,
And swift wit, softened with sweet gravity.
Straight-standing like a palm tree; hands and limbs
So moulded that the noblest copy of them
Among the sons of men fairest and first.

The Relation of the Superintendent of a Sunday-School to the Pastor in Charge.

(Read at the Sunday-school Convention held at Lauderdale, Miss., Sept. 24, 1891, by Rev. J. M. Pugh, and published by the request of the Convention.)

The subject assigned to me for discussion at this time is, "The Relation of the Superintendent of a Sunday-school to the Pastor in Charge." This relation has not been defined by the organic law of the church, neither can it be presented in explicit terms. Nor can it be limited by any form of expression; but is comprehended in the functions of his office, and the duties growing out of his position as pastor of the church in which the school is organized. This relation can be discovered only from the known functions and duties of the pastoral office. And before this relation can be discovered, some other points must be settled.

In discussing this subject, we must inquire what is a Sunday-school, and what relation the school sustains to the pastoral charge, before we can arrive at any correct conclusion in the premises. When the Discipline is not explicit on any point, inferences must be drawn from other portions, and from the general scope and meaning of the whole as comprehended in the economy of our system of church government.

The Sunday-school is an integral part of the church at that locality where it may be organized; if not, we find the pastor appointing and the Quarterly Conference sanctioning the appointment of an officer to perform work outside of the charge he has been appointed to serve. The Sunday-school, according to our economy, is composed of persons, both adults and small children, who may be organized, or collected together for the purpose of studying the Word of God, under the care and supervision of the church. The pastor of the charge becomes the pastor of the Sunday-school. Being a shepherd, he is called on, by virtue of his office, to watch over the entire flock, feeding the lambs "with the milk of the Word," as well as the grown sheep with more substantial food.

In the Sunday-school the doctrines and duties of Christianity are taught by teachers appointed by the pastor, he being the head of the faculty of instruction. And he is to see that the doctrines and duties taught therein are in harmony with our Articles of Religion and the teachings of the gospel as expounded by the church. Dr. Leftwich affirms, "That no officious board of managers, superintendent or association of teachers can displace the pastor from his authoritative position as the official head of his charge in the school which he has organized under the law of the church for the study of the Word of God, without striking at the very source of authority from which they derive their existence."

The pastor is clothed with official authority by the law of the church; and this authority is sanctioned and sustained by a divine call to the ministry, it being in harmony with his authority from the great Head of the church. In fact, this authority inheres in the great commission given by Christ to all his ministers—"Go preach my gospel to every creature."

The pastor has no right to surrender this function of his office, or absolutely to relegate its duties to another. He is recognized by the law of the church as the only one who is responsible, seeing he is required, by a written report, to give the condition of all the schools under his care to the Quarterly Conference, which report they must accept, to be placed on record. The pastor appoints the superintendent, directly or by nomination, to assist him in the Sunday-school work; but he alone is responsible to the church. The power to appoint necessarily implies the power to remove. Should the superintendent prove himself to be inefficient or should he teach anything contrary to the doctrines of the church, he has not only the authority to remove him and appoint another, but he should not hesitate to exercise it. But in all this great discretion and prudence should be exercised, lest results injurious to the best interests of the church and of the cause of Christ should follow. This should not be done with authoritative dictum, nor in the spirit of arrogance.

The superintendent can not remove the responsibility from the pastor by active duties in the school; and it is the pastor's duty to correct all irregularities in the management of the school, and to see that the instructions imparted to the pupils shall be in accordance with the true principles of Christianity as taught by the M. E. Church, South. At a certain college the professor of languages—as the class had to read the Greek Testament—was permitted to teach it at the Sunday-school. One of the class having discernment sufficient to apprehend that the professor was teaching the doctrines of Universalism, declined further to attend his class, and the imposition was discovered.

In case the superintendent be not satisfied with the action of the pastor, has he the right to appeal to the Quarterly Conference? He has no such right, as the pastor is not in any wise amenable to the Quarterly Conference; and that body can not try him nor entertain such an appeal, except where the pastor in charge is a local preacher, or on trial in the Annual Conference. The old English law maxim, that a man must be tried by his peers, obtains in such cases.

Should there not be perfect harmony of action between the pastor and the superintendent, or should they not harmonize in a general plan in conducting the school, confusion, and consequently a loss of spiritual life, must follow. The pastor must assert his prerogative growing out of his functions as pastor, or as one who has the care of souls. But it should be done with the utmost care and in the spirit of brotherly love. The superintendent should in every instance pursue the plan in conducting the school suggested by the pastor. If he is unwilling to do this, he should resign immediately and give place to one who could work in harmony with the pastor in charge.

Man's moral obligation is the ground upon which duty is based, and duty is moral obligation put into practical exercise. His relation to the church does not increase moral obligation; nor can being out of the church in any way diminish this obligation. "Being in the church adds social to moral obligation," but it can not change it, "for it is unalterably fixed, being based on the law of God." So the relation of the pastor to the church and the Sunday-school can not be changed, as it inheres in the moral obligation of his position by virtue of his divine call to the ministry.

The pastor should be at the Sunday-school as often as possible, and, I might say, every time, if he has but one school and his charge a station; not only to aid in the work and to see that it is properly carried on, but by his presence to encourage all who may be engaged in the school, and also to impress his moral character upon the school by such judicious assistance as the occasion may require. "Every pastor should be felt by his presence and his labors."

From this brief discussion of the subject, we come to the conclusion that the relation of the superintendent to the pastor is that of a deputy to his principal or as his representative.

In conclusion, permit me to say that the great end to be secured by the Sunday-school should be the conversion of its members. Neither should the teacher, superintendent nor the pastor lose sight of this great end, through instruction in biblical truth, and in impressing the heart with the necessity of the new birth.

In the so-called union schools how can this object be secured? For in such schools there may be teachers who deny the necessary work of the Holy Ghost in regeneration, or some who are ever suspicious lest the peculiar dogmas of their denomination may be antagonized. And thus the grandest end for which Sunday-schools should be organized is thwarted, and the children grow up without any definite idea of the plan of salvation. They become bewildered amid the multiplicity of conflicting opinions, are left with vague ideas of the Christian system, and drift away into the wilderness of skepticism and wickedness. I knew in one such school where a pupil asked the superintendent, who was teaching a class, "What is forgiveness?" and he answered, "It is quitting." Is it not surprising that one who, in other respects, is intelligent and learned, should be so ignorant about the most vital interests of our being. We are ready to ask, How can a pastor fulfil the functions of his office when a so-called union school is the only one organized within his charge?

As Methodists, we should ignore union schools and union churches. The one is a hybrid and the other an orphan. There may be circumstances or environments under which a union school might be tolerated; but, as a general rule, we must attend to our own children and see that they be trained through the motherhood of the church. Oh! that the entire church could be so impressed with this subject as to be constantly looking for and expecting the conversion of the children, even at a very early age! There are numerous instances of the conversion of children between the ages of three and ten years.

In this age of the world, when the light of Christianity sheds its benign influence in the homes of this favored land, and where so many advantages crowd the steps of the young, it should be the care of the church to bring them to Christ before they have time to "sow their wild oats," or the enemy time to sow the tares of evil in the virgin soil of their hearts. Let us beware lest souls committed to our care should be lost through our neglect and a failure on our part to meet the obligation imposed on us by the relation we hold to the great Head of the church.

The Lord's Prayer.—No. 3.

BY REV. J. B. WALKER, D. D.

Our Father who art in heaven. This is not ancestral worship, such as the Chinese practice, but the worship of him who is the Creator of our bodies and the "Father of our spirits." We are taught to call God our Father, because he is, in the highest and fullest sense, our Father; as the author of our being, and who cares for us; as a father who pitieth his children; and we pray to him as our Father in heaven because he is above all, and the Infinite Spirit, filling immensity, and both willing to hear and answer our prayers. We do not address or pray to God through any image or picture to concentrate our attention. There can be no material image of an infinite spirit, and no such representations can assist toward a conception of God, for the simple reason that these attempted representations are not and can not be representations of the Eternal Spirit, who has no body or parts. All prayer must, among other elements, contain trust and reverence. We come trusting, because he is our loving and gracious Father, and we come before him with reverential awe, because he is immaculately holy, "glorious in holiness, fearful in praises, doing wonders." God is omnipresent, from infinity to infinity; but it is said, "heaven" is his throne—"that the Lord hath prepared his throne in the heavens, and his kingdom ruleth over all." "The Lord is in his holy temple, the Lord's throne is in heaven: his eyes behold, his eyelids try the children of men. . . . The Lord looketh from heaven; he beholdeth all the sons of men." These inspired words teach us that he is a real, personal God, to whom, as Christians, we address our prayers. This divine teaching strikes directly at the semi-atheistic idea of the pantheist, who denies the personality of God, and insists that he is merged in nature. This form of statement is meant to be a definite direction as to the object of our prayers. Not every father is the father to whom we pray, but we are to pray to "our Father who is in heaven." "We have had fathers of our flesh, who corrected us, and we gave them reverence; shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of our spirits, and live?" There are two things required in every giver—the will to do, and the power to do what he wills. Both these are declared of God. He is our Father, and, therefore, wills to give us; and he is "our Father in heaven," and has the power to give all that we can (consistently with his will) ask or desire. The heavens declare the glory of God. They are the sublimest manifestations of God's illimitable power. "He hath prepared his throne in the midst of their vastness, magnificence and splendor, and so by his Almightiness ruleth over all." So, to say "our Father in heaven," is to say he is almighty. This form of expression—saying that God is in heaven, everywhere, among all the stellar orbs—teaches that he is a spirit, and, therefore, to be spiritually approached, worshipped in spirit and in truth. To call him our Father in heaven is to speak of him as the most exalted and glorious of all beings, and of our sonship as the most honorable position to which a finite creature can be exalted. To call God our Father in heaven is to say that we, his children, are for the present time absent and away from our "Father's house." Like Israel in the wilderness, we are not yet in the promised land; we are only on our way to our glorious home above. How cheering and sustaining is the teaching that this world, with all its sin-disordered conditions, is not to be our permanent home; its pressing wants and crushing woes shall have an end! We shall, by and by, and maybe soon, be housed in one of the "many mansions" that our saving Lord has gone to prepare for us. It is not, thank God! all of life to live in scenes of exhausting toil and heart-wearing anxieties. It is more than a chase for flowers, a smile to win them, and a tear to see them fade. It is not, thank God! all of death, with its coldness, its mortal throes, its sad farewells, its silence and darkness, to die. There is, the Father of mercies be praised! "a life above, unnumbered by the flight of years, and all that life is love." Every variety of beautiful imagery that earth's most desirable aspects and resources can furnish has been used by the pencil divine to portray the beauty, the glory and blessedness of our heavenly home—the tree of life, the river of life, the streets of gold, the jasper walls, gates of pearl, and songs of endless joy.

Is It a Mistake?

For a number of years I have been a subscriber to, and reader of, the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATES, as well as several others of our religious periodicals, and I have been astonished to see so many mistakes which our great men and best writers make by just picking up the pen and writing without thinking or investigation.

An instance of this occurs in our Sunday-School Magazine, for October, under the head: "Practical Application. By President J. H. Carlisle." "Jesus and the twelve had met for the last time. They were to celebrate the Passover Supper. All proper arrangements had been made."

Now, this was not the last meeting of Christ and his apostles; neither was it the Passover Supper. The true history of the case is this: Two days before the Passover, Jesus and the twelve took supper with Simon the leper in Bethany. There in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper, Jesus washed the disciples' feet, and there came a woman with the ointment, and poured it on his head. There Judas became indignant at the rebuke of the Savior, and the devil entered into him, and he went out and went to Jerusalem, and agreed with the chief priest to betray him, and from that hour he sought opportunity to betray him. Two days after this was the feast of the Passover, and Jesus sent Peter and John, and they prepared the Passover in an upper room, and in the evening he came with the twelve, and as they did eat, Jesus took bread and blessed and brake it, and gave to them, and said, "Take, eat; this is my body." And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them, and they all drank of it. (See John xiii, Mark xiv, and Luke xxii, in this order.)

There was no more connection between the Bethany supper and the Passover Supper than there was between my supper and yours last night.

At the Bethany supper Judas went out, but entered the Passover Supper with the rest, and partook of both the Passover and the sacrament, and left the room in company with Christ and the other disciples.

If I am wrong, I beg to be corrected.

A Matter Overlooked.

It has been said, "It is never late to do good." Our last Annual Conference made provision for the expenses of the Ecumenical Conference. I supposed that this was to include the expenses of the delegate going from our Conference. Dr. Harrison, book editor, informs us that that collection was ordered by the General Conference to pay expenses of delegates from abroad. This being the case, a very heavy burden falls upon Rev. E. H. Mounger, representing the Mississippi Conference. I take upon myself the responsibility of requesting the ministers in charge of works and kindly disposed members of our church in the bounds of the Conference not to allow a representation at the expense of our delegate.

At once collect and forward to me at Ellisville Depot, Jones county, Miss., at least, a dollar from each charge. Whatever amount is received in excess of amount of expense, I will devote to the fund for Conference claimants, special. I pledge two dollars for Ellisville.

Our Colporteur.

Rev. W. D. Dominick has spent about a month's time with us in this district: two visits of about two weeks each. He sold some two or three hundred dollars' worth of books, besides securing sub-agents to assist him in occupying the territory. The books left in the homes of the people are good books. These remain to be read, it may be, for years to come and be abiding blessings. He is in love with his work, and appears to be the man for the work. Besides, he preaches as he travels, and that, too, to the great delight of the hearers. He was with us at Sam Jones and Bluff Creek Camp Meetings, and also visited Gloster, Clinton, Jackson, Slaughter and Woodville. We will give him a cordial reception whenever he can visit us.

I Believe in God.

The secular newspaper of this age is a phenomenal wonder. If one should accept as real everything printed therein concerning churches, creeds and the trend of religious thought, his mind would be a howling wilderness overgrown with all manner of strange doctrine. About once every year some preacher who has more knowledge than faith, more critical ability than spiritual insight, proclaims his vagaries, creates a sensation, is tried for heresy by a Synod or Conference—then the fun begins. Straightway, in the ardent imagination of our special correspondent, creeds are being shattered, old ideas are passing away, and the church, in general, travailing in the mighty throes of a moral earthquake. Meanwhile the church bells ring on, and myriads congregate in magnificent city temple, in village chapel and forest sanctuary, to worship God and hear the old, old, orthodox gospel. The greatest preachers of our day; the men whose teachings are most potent for the present and the future good of humanity; the men most prominent and effective in the vast humanitarian movements; the men who unflinchingly meet and dare attempt to solve the weighty problems evolved by this nineteenth century's civilization, are not those who are chasing phantom theories over the wide fields of theological discussion, or perplexing the church with wild vagaries, but the earnest, loyal, fearless teachers of the faith once delivered to the saints. Strange it is—aye, passing strange—how many crimes are committed in the name of religious thought and liberty. The intellect, untrained in the mighty arena of religious discussion, where giants have wrestled; the heart, unregenerate and unrestrained by the masterful grace of the Spirit, rush heedlessly into the struggle, while fools applaud, and wise men wonder and pity. Iconoclasts they were called, those stern old militant Christians of the olden time, who were opposed to image worship, and delighted in breaking marble saints and angels. No doubt they were right in the main, but wrong in the means employed. In breaking idols, some poor soul may be struck by a fragment, and receive mortal hurt. Better for one to have a shadowy, indistinct faith than no faith at all. I would rather have a block of marble for a god than to be left stranded on life's fathomless, limitless sea, godless. But these modern marble smashers aim their fierce blows at the grand old statue of Truth. This is no sculptured faun or chiseled Venus expressing the artist's dream of fancied myths. Rather an image, which is modelled after the great Master's pattern, has been hewn from the quarry of man's need, and received the finishing touches from those accounted most noble in talent, true worth and sweetest charity through the long sweep of the ages past. No danger of hurling this symmetrical form at all; only some may be shaken from their true base by the storm and clamor, or wounded by the glancing weapons. Men talk about advanced thought and new theology; I wonder if they know anything of the vast wealth of thought expended in these fields, or how thoroughly these subjects they call new have been discussed in the history of the church. When I read of the way the early fathers thought and wrote, the acute disquisitions of the mediæval schoolmen, the polemical wars that shook Christian Europe during the Reformation, I seriously doubt if there is aught at all new in theology. The urgent, crying need of men's souls amid all this clamor is faith. We must develop the art of believing in God and his Word. Men have followed the torch of reason until they are lost in the wilds of folly, presumption and pride. I knew a man once who would always repeat the Apostles' Creed when called upon to lead in prayer. I commend the habit. Let us go back to the rudiments and say what we believe; then live like we meant it. The crowning glory of our blessed Master's teaching is, that he taught men to believe what they could not know. Ours is essentially a religion of faith. "Lord, help our unbelief." S. J. DAVIES.

Things That Ought to Be Changed.

In the ADVOCATE, of Sept. 24, the appointments of the presiding elders for seven districts out of the eight, for the fourth round of quarterly meetings in the North Mississippi Conference, show forty-two quarterly meetings to be held without any Sunday being included, and one to be held by an associate pastor in the district. This is a calamity, and ought to be remedied speedily. We think it reveals some facts which ought to be considered.

1. Those districts are too large for the presiding elders to give a Sunday service to the forty-three appointments, which they need, perhaps, as much as any other charges; furthermore, the forty-three charges will make two districts larger than any we have in our bounds. They should be made by all means. The time may have been when the presiding elder could accomplish that which was expected of him by having appointments in mid-week; but that time is past in this part. The people can go somewhere on Sunday to church, either ours or some other, and thereby excuse themselves from attending in the week. Again, it would be hard to find a pastor whose heart is not made glad when he sees that his quarterly meeting comes in mid-week. Comparative failure accompanies such announcement. The pastor keenly feels the need of his presiding elder two days in each quarter; one of them being on Sunday, that he may not merely go through the formula of the Conference, but that he may preach each day, administer the sacrament, hold love-feast, or see that it is done, thereby doing a work the pastor can not do in giving prestige and caste to Methodism. By all means the first and fourth quarters ought to include a Sabbath.

2. It reveals the reason why in many places the presiding elder is depreciated. He goes in for a day or a few hours, goes through the formula of the work with a half-dozen officials present. He has gone, not been seen, and the people scarcely knew he had been in their midst. Most of this from an overload of appointments which works the detriment of both presiding elder and pastor in charge and especially the work he serves. We can not do without the presiding elder, but we want him situated so that he can acquit himself as a fellow-worker with the pastor.

3. A large district is a temptation to violate the Sabbath. The presiding elder goes to the border of his work, stays ten or fifteen days from home. When he gets to those appointments on the railroad or near by, he excuses himself, goes home Sunday evening because he has been away so much at other times. We corn-field men might as well quit preaching on Sabbath observance if our chief pastors and presiding elders board trains on Sunday and go home, unless it is in case of sickness or death. Many other things might be said in favor of the needed change, but we desist.

A Vote of Thanks to Rev. W. C. Black, D. D.

It is now in order for every opponent of "intolerance and slander" to issue, through your excellent paper, a vote of thanks to Rev. W. C. Black, D. D., Jackson, Miss., for his timely, unanswerable and withering rebuke to the Issue, a so-called prohibition paper published in Nashville, Tenn., for its dastardly attack upon Bishop Galloway. In Mississippi this may well be regarded as a work of supererogation. But as the tirant, now made infamous, may be regarded by parties not fully posted, let the friends of justice and fair dealing, living on the soil on which he was cradled, speak out in unmistakable tones for this great and good man, so that the author of this slander may be consigned to the deepest disgrace. I am satisfied the Bishop has not the time to come down from his arduous work to notice this villainous attack. It, therefore, in order for the friends of truth and fairness to give the assassin a quietus which will meet the universal endorsement of Mississippians and good men everywhere.

BOOKS.

THE BUSINESS OF TRAVEL. A Fifty Years' Record of Progress. By W. Fred Rae. Thos. Cook & Son, New York.

This book is a history of the origin and progress of the "Tourist Business" from its inception by Thos. Cook, in 1841, to the present time. The story of any sort of growth is interesting. Here we have the history of the growth of the traveling business as conducted by one firm for the space of fifty years, and to say it is interesting is to say very little. This firm has made it possible for any man, or woman, or company, to travel pleasantly to any part of the world at the cheapest rates; and in doing this, the firm has done good service. This book tells how they have worked out that problem.

PERIODICALS.

—ST. NICHOLAS, for this month, is a delightful number. The reading matter is healthful and helpful and the pictures are bright and beautiful. Old or young people can hardly find anything more attractive than St. Nicholas. The Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—CASSELL'S FAMILY MAGAZINE is one of the favorites with the editor's family. The stories are good and the moral tone of the whole periodical excellent. Cassell Company, New York. Price, $1.50.

—THE MISSIONARY REPORTER is full of mission news from our various fields, and you must read it if you would keep up with our mission progress. I. G. John, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

—CHRISTIANITY IN EARNEST. September-October. A. J. Kynett, D. D., editor. This bi-monthly is devoted to the cause of church extension in the M. E. Church. Published at 1026 Arch St., Philadelphia. Price, $1.

THE LOTTERY.

The Pro-Lottery Press and Morality.

BY REV. J. A. PARKER.

There is much more involved in the great issue now before the people of Louisiana than the mere question of granting to or withholding from a set of gamblers a place in the organic law of our State. There is more involved in it than the vast consequences directly resulting from legalized vice. The means by which the pro-lottery papers of the State are trying to force the question on the people are of vastly wider range for evil than either the lottery, or the profligacy, idleness, embezzlement, and vitiation of the moral sentiment, which are sure to result directly from it.

No sane man can read these papers without having the conviction forced upon him that an effort is being made by them to destroy the moral sense of the people, in order to prepare their minds for the acceptance of a vice and its incorporation into the Constitution of the State. Without a single exception coming under my eye—and everywhere I go I find from one to five "lottery papers" lie-ing around; some, or few of which, have been ordered by those to whom they are sent—these papers sneer at piety, mock at conscience, and ridicule religious constancy. Cartoons which represent "Piety" as a part and parcel of the great Serpent of Vice—hypocrisy and fraud—are sent forth to impress the mind with falsehood for truth, that none but hypocrites, "frauds" and enthusiasts oppose the pet scheme which they encourage.

During the session of the Legislature of 1890, when a "preacher"—Rev. Mr. Warren, of Bienville parish—was casting the vote of his constituency contrary to their wish, and in the interest of the lottery, he was upheld and cheered on by the pro-lottery press of the State as a Democrat in whom was no guile. But when another "preacher"—Rev. Dr. Palmer, of New Orleans—(and Rev. Dr. Heller, also) made a speech against the lottery, he was, by the whole pro-lottery press of the State, denounced as a "fanatic," a "revolutionist" and a bypocrite, and the opinion everywhere expressed that preachers have no business in politics."

It is openly asserted by these papers that "gambling is not a sin." If not a sin, then why may not Christians gamble? And if Christians may gamble, then, of course, gambling is perfectly innocent, and why not legalize gambling as a source of revenue and innocent amusement?

Why this pernicious, fallacious logic but for the purpose of destroying the moral sense of the people in order that they may be prepared to do wrong? Since educate a people down to the point of inability to judge or appreciate the force of moral responsibility, and the vortex is reached.

Fealty to Jeffersonian principles is regularly insisted upon, and this is made to include his views on moral, as well as civil questions. The cardinal point in Jeffersonian politics is omitted, while the fact of his securing a permit to raffle off his property is carefully set forth as one of the chief political virtues of that great man. If Jefferson could he said to have had a hobby at all—and in some sense it was a hobby with him—that equal rights be extended to all, and special privileges to none, was that hobby. It was unmistakably Jeffersonian.

Why this caricature of Jeffersonian politics if not for the debauching of the moral sense of the country?

Why should the pro-lottery press of the State so unanimously denounce the Lafayette dicker" as something unheard of in politics, when everyone knows that there has not been a campaign in Louisiana for many long years in which there was not more than one man seeking to be governor of the State, and each one, by himself, and through his friends, "dickering" with every executive committee and every pariah meeting in the State, seeking "an alliance" with them by which to secure the office?

Can there be any other reason for this than a desire to create the impression that those who oppose the lottery are men without principle, either political or moral, and in this way destroy their influence?

Whether or not the pro-lottery press of the State so intend, it is most certainly a fact, that the tendency of the teaching of these papers is to the breaking down of the moral sense of our people, the lessening of general respect for religion, and inuring the mind to moral repudiation. Who so Jesuitical as to suppose there is no danger on this point?

If there was ever in the history of the world a time when Christian ethics, systematically taught, was in demand—imperatively demanded by the shadowing of the cause of morality—that time is now upon us. In the echoes of all these pro-lottery papers may be heard the ominous roar of not very distant eruptions, which will shake the very pillars of our morality from one side of the State to the other. The lottery is bad—bad in principle, bad in effect; but the teachings by which it is sought to prepare the public mind to endorse it are worse—immeasurably worse.

The ministry and the religious press of the State are called upon, not only to defeat the lottery, but to watch, catch and destroy the pernicious influence of pro-lottery newspapers and pro-lottery orators as well.

However much of impolicy there may be in it, considered from a political or financial point of view—however much talk about "schools, charities, levees," etc.—it is impossible to defend the lottery on any other than immoral grounds.

Extracts from Hon. M. J. Foster's Speech.

Fellow-citizens, when a people will fully and knowingly violate the laws of God, the laws of morality, the laws of good society and the fundamental laws of enlightened government, such a people must suffer the penalty of the violated law. When a people enter into an unholy alliance with crime and consort in an illicit union with vice, that people is striking at the very foundation of free republican government.

I charge that the lottery as a source of revenue for government is an economic crime. I charge that the practice of lottery dealing is a most destructive and pernicious vice to good society; and when a people seek to incorporate in the Constitution of their State, seek to imbed in the organic law of their land, a crime and a vice, that people is untrue to good government and to good society. No government can prosper unless its foundation is rooted in good morals; no government can prosper when it is based upon a sin and a vice. There may be a temporary, an apparent prosperity, but it is an artificial, an unnatural and an uncertain prosperity.

I say, fellow-citizens, that the proposition of the Louisiana Lottery Company is the most monstrous proposition that has ever been submitted to a free people. I say this, that lotteries have been legalized and statutory enactments have been passed authorizing the running of lotteries. It is bad enough to legalize by statute a lottery, but it is an unpardonable sin against society and good government to constitutionalize this vice. * * *

Fellow-citizens, how stands this question in other States? What is the verdict of the other States of this grand Union? What is the sentiment, the universal sentiment, from the borders of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico? What answer do the Rockies give back to the Alleghanies? All over this broad land of ours there is but one sentiment on the question of lotteries, and that is their universal condemnation. And why should my State, and why should your State, seek to place herself above the public sentiment of a people who stand your equals and your peers? Why should the people of Louisiana stand out unique and alone, making this beloved State of ours the headquarters for these rich, round and lusty gamblers? (Applause.) * * *

Does Louisiana need the money? I shall not go into details, but I shall make a few statements, which I challenge the lotteryites to contradict: I state that Louisiana's finances to-day are in a better condition than they have been in the last decade. I say that the interest upon our State debt is promptly paid. I say that her warrants, constitutional and legislative, are paid dollar for dollar. I say that her insane asylum is an institution of which she or any other State may be justly proud. I say, fellow-citizens—and I do not know how to meet argument other than by fact—that the last report made by the chairman of the committee sent there to investigate that asylum, the unanimous report of that committee shows that it is in a splendid condition, financially and otherwise. The normal school at Natchitoches needs not the lottery money. The Soldiers' Home here in New Orleans, lately established, needs not this money. Your Charity Hospital needs not this money. But then they say that the levees and the schools need it.

Now, fellow-citizens, I will ask you this plain question: Are not the levees of Louisiana to-day higher, firmer, broader and stronger than they have ever been? Will any lottery man or any lottery paper deny that proposition. Did not they withstand last year, with a few breaks, which no money in the world could have prevented, one of the highest waters that the Mississippi has ever known?

Your public schools are improving. The State is advancing. You have heard the report of your superintendent of public education, and I say that these children ought to be educated and can be educated with the honest money of an honest citizenship. (Applause).

Fellow-citizens, you have heard what Captain Jack has stated about Louisiana's resources, her ability and capacity to defray all her governmental expenses. I say sir, that she is as able as Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina or South Carolina to support her schools. She can do it and she will do it if she is just let alone. * * *

God has been kind to our State. He has given her the pine land of North Louisiana, the spreading prairies of the Opelousas and the alluvial bottoms. He has given her the soil that you but "tickle with the hoe and it will smile with a harvest," yielding grateful reward to honest labor; he has given her a brave, a courageous and an honorable people; he hangs over her fertile fields a sky as blue and bright as that which bends over sunny Italy. All we say to these people is to let the dear old State alone. Let her alone, fellow-citizens; let her breathe and live in the atmosphere of a pure morality; let her grow and expand under the honest administration of good laws and honest government; let her develop in the patriotic hands of her brave sons and her fair daughters. Strip, oh, fellow-citizens, strip her of the curse and the sin of this lottery, and, under the impulse of new activities, new enterprises and a nobler aspiration, she will bound forward upon the sea of prosperity, freighted with the bright hopes of a happy people and laden with a patriotic resolve to breast every storm and to brave every sea. (Applause.) Let her alone; let her carve out that destiny which honesty and honor blazes out for every State; let her alone, and oh, fellow-citizens of the Crescent City, a loyal citizenship and a splendid manhood will spring up in every city, village and town, aye, in its waste places, to assume and perform the high and sacred duties of statehood. (Applause.) Curse, oh, curse her not with the gold of this company. This rich, gleaming, yellow royal gold of the gambler will prove, like the fruit on the banks of the Dead Sea, glittering to the eye, but turning to ashes upon the lip. Oh, idolater of the golden calf! Oh, blind worshipper of the gambler's gold, let Louisiana alone; let her with her head erect, with an unsullied front, and with a firm step wheel into line and march along with her sister States toward progress, advancement and civilization. (Great applause.) * *

I desire, fellow-citizens, to call your attention to another feature of this lottery company, and that is its political feature.

I say that this company is bound to be in politics. I don't pretend to say that the stockholders desire to do so, but I say that from the very nature of the grant which they are requiring they are absolutely bound to be in politics, and they are not only bound to be in politics, but they are bound to dominate the politics of Louisiana for twenty-five years. (Applause.)

Now, how is that? You can not barter away the police power; you can enter into no such contract. This grant is a revocable grant, not irrevocable. The same power that gave can destroy; the same power that bestows this grant can take it away from them. In other words, the Legislature at any time can submit a constitutional amendment revoking the grant, or they can call a constitutional convention and that convention may annul the license. What does that mean then? Fellow-citizens, what then does that mean? It means as a matter of necessity on the part of this company, that they must dominate your Legislature for twenty-five years; for as certain as yon star shines out in the blue vault of heaven, so certain it is that the first time that a majority of the Legislature inimical to this company convenes they will destroy it if they can. (Applause.) So, therefore, as a necessity, they must be in your Legislature, and they must not only be there, but they must dominate that body.

Fellow-citizens, have you ever thought of the dangers of this vast moneyed power, handled by a lot of gamblers, and what it means? When I tell you that they must dominate your Legislature, let me in my humble way attempt to show you some of the consequences. One of the dearest rights—in fact, the most precious right of citizenship of these United States is to meet in convention for the purpose of framing the organic law of the people. Adopt this amendment and you will be debarred from meeting in convention for twenty-five years, because as a matter of self-preservation this company will not permit a constitutional convention to be called. Think of that! Think of that! You or your little ones, even the little boy standing there, when he arrives at majority, will have the mailed hand of this lottery upon him and upon all the people of this State, preventing them from meeting in convention, changing, modifying or altering the organic law of the land.

At the St. Tammany Camp Meeting the third Quarterly Conferences of the Covington and Talisheek circuits were held in conjunction, at which the following resolution was passed by a rising vote of both Conferences:

Resolved, That we do hereby protest against the adoption of the lottery amendment as being a virtual sale of the morality and independence of our State, and being detrimental to the spiritual, moral and pecuniary welfare of our citizens, and that the preachers in charge of these two circuits advise and preach upon this evil in their respective pulpits, and that all Christians do all in their power to suppress this great evil. Briefs.

The last interview of the editor pro tem with our much lamented brother, Rev. B. F. Alexander, was by chance, or by providence, which is, perhaps, the better word for a Christian. Coming to the ADVOCATE office, late in the evening, and in the week, both very unusual occurrences, we found Bro. Alexander alone, and in response to his hearty invitation (he was always hearty), "Come and sit down here and let us have a long talk," we sat and conversed upon the theme that had claimed his whole attention for nearly half a century, and that was always nearest his heart, until the shadows of dusk began to fall. He wanted to get all the news about Conference work and men, especially the young men for whom he felt the warmest affection, readily falling in with favorable opinions of one or two who had been criticised which the writer had to express. As to the appointments, while seemingly anxious to talk of others, he asserted that he had no care or hope as to himself except to be useful. He would take the best appointment or the poorest in the Conference. This must have been less than one month preceding his death, and he was looking to be in excellent health. In response to an inquiry as to his journey, he said that he was going to the Tensas country on secular business; but, recalling it now, there was much in that interview to impress one that, at least, one of the parties to it had his face set toward Zion. What fervor in the handclasp as we turned to leave, and the benediction, "God bless you!" thrilled us then, and will long prove a subject of fond recollection.

The London Methodist Recorder makes this urgent plea for good preaching:

Methodist congregations want good preaching. Some congregations are pining and wasting away for the lack of good preaching. And the joy and misery and mystery of the thing is that there are very, very few men in the ministry who, in their several ways, might not be good preachers. A revival in the study, on their knees, among their books, pen in hand, pews empty or full before their minds, will bring to pass the seeming impossibility. A preacher may be feeble, watery, commonplace, twangy, unnatural, perfunctory, a twaddling dribbler out of ten times repeated nothingness. Let that man go down to the feet of God, and there think it all out—think of men, women, boys, girls drifting hopelessly onward to an awful eternity. Let that man—no one knowing what he is doing—cry out, "O God, help me! Show me thy truth! Fill me with thy love!" And then let him get up like a man and buckle to, and read and think and get out into the inspiring library of human lives until he is filled, possessed, shaken, fired with the subject God shall give him. He may talk on Sunday atrocious English, and may not be able to muster a single clever sentence. But he will preach, and will preach a downright good sermon, at least, if the goodness of a sermon is to be measured by the good it does. A sword is good if it pierces, cuts and does not double up when it touches a hard skull.

The ADVOCATE is supplied with news from the Ecumenical by contract with a resident correspondent, so that the tired editor will have a rest both de facto and de jure.

Editorial Correspondence.

The Second Ecumenical Conference of Methodism was opened in the Metropolitan Methodist Church, in Washington City, Oct. 7. There were five hundred delegates, representing twenty-eight different Methodist bodies, and gathered from all parts of the world. There were men from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Germany, Australia, New Zealand, New South Wales, China, Canada, United States, Mexico, West Indies, Bermuda Islands, Nova Scotia. Besides this, the churches represented by these men have their missions in India, Japan, Africa, Italy, Scandinavia, South Sea Islands, and several other quarters of the globe. So that we may well believe that it was truly a cosmopolitan assembly, and we may truly say that such a gathering of the followers of Jesus Christ never came together before. It looked as if the Lord's last command had been literally carried out, and the gospel had been preached in all nations. These five hundred representatives of Methodism, standing for many millions of Methodist adherents, were a grand exhibition of the power of a pure gospel preached in earnestness. They represented a moral and spiritual force which is simply incalculable, but which has been felt around the world.

Bishop Bowman, the senior Bishop of the M. E. Church, presided at the opening session. The proceedings began by this large body of ministers and laymen singing the grand old hymn, "Jesus, the name high over all," and "Old Coronation" never sounded grander and was never more uplifting in its influence than on that occasion. Bishop Keener, our senior Bishop, offered a most devout, spiritual, comprehensive prayer, which was responded to with fervent Amens. The venerable William Arthur, of the Wesleyan Church, read with solemn impressiveness the hymn, "Come, let us anew our journey pursue," which was sung as only Methodist preachers can sing one of Charles Wesley's hymns. After a neat apology for not delivering his sermon himself, Mr. Arthur introduced Dr. Stephenson, the president of the Wesleyan Conference, who read the sermon for him. The text was Isaiah viii, 18: "Behold, I and the children whom the Lord hath given me are for signs and wonders in Israel from the Lord of hosts, which dwelleth in Mount Zion." The sermon was read in a very effective manner, and occupied one hour and a half. It abounded in noble thoughts, striking images, tender sentiments and beautiful language, and was worthy of the great occasion. After the sermon, Bishop Foster, of the M. E. Church, assisted by several eminent men, administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. This was a most solemn service, and this communion of saints with one another and with their Lord was one long to be remembered.

The evening session was occupied with speeches of welcome by Bishop Hurst, of the M. E. Church; Dr. Carlisle, of the Church, South, and Dr. George Douglas, of the Canadian Church, and these were responded to by Dr. Stephenson, president of the Wesleyan Conference; Mr. George Green, of the Primitive Methodists, and Rev. R. Abercrombie, of the United Methodist Free Church. These speeches were all appropriate and well-timed, and the whole service passed off in an exceedingly pleasant and fraternal manner. Thus passed the first day of the Second Ecumenical Conference.

It is expected of stewards that a man be found faithful. And if he performs that good degree, he will be called up higher. Stephen and Philip from serving tables became the mightiest evangels of the church.

Wings.

The problem of flying bothers the savants. How to navigate the air is the pons asinorum of modern science. How easy it would be to get up into the atmosphere and soar off to the moon if we only had a recipe for flying! The New Englander, by the name of Green, would never have flopped and cumbered the plain, if he had thought of some volant and vibrant appendage for overcoming the non-resistance of dead atmospheres before he attempted to ride on the "wings of the wind." Why shouldn't a man's avoirdupois take on aeration and soar as well as the grey substance denominated intellect; that is to say, if wings were provided; and what is to hinder wings? Why should we tolerate the miserable substitute of ballooning when to swim the atmospheres with the stroke of an athlete is every man's privilege? Why not fly to Boston for breakfast, and, with the swoop of an eagle descending to the prey, alight on the North Pole for our noonday repast? Why! why!

Until spectacled and trim-whiskered science can answer us this self-evidential and most obtrusive school-boy proposition, we will take no theology at its hands, nor suffer any painful exploiting on hands and feet through the dim corridors of pre-Azoic and post-Cineric ages to disturb our faith in the great Well Known. The sapiency of the man who pants to fly and can not, is not to be trusted. As a sciolist he is a huge and painful failure. We never hear of Darwin's "Descent of Man" without being reminded of Green, the explorer's resonant rebound to the New England barnyard. Homer always made his slain heroes hit the ground hard, and that helped to make his verse sublime. Milton says of the outcast angels, with tragic terror in his very phrasing, "Nine days they fell!" It was, indeed, a tremendous descent for the winged multitude; but what thinkest, oh gainsayer! will be the fate of those pedantic cloud-climbers who are abundantly more than nine days' journey from the truth, without a feather between them and the horizon of matter-of-fact? There is food for scientific speculation in that question, as well as room for a pen of drama equal to the "Blind old bard of Scio's rocky Isle,"

or, mightier still, "The great blind seer of Britain."

"Oh, for wings!" we have oft soliloquized 'mid the peopled solitude of the graduating platform of one of our ultra-fashionable female seminaries. While vainly struggling with the mingled gush and phantasmagoria of the sweet-girl graduating essays, we could not repress the thought that all this was heavenly, and if to voice and robe and faculty of expatiation a few pairs of silken wings could have been added, that nothing would have been wanting to their happiness or ours.

O Art, wherein triumphest thou over thy ambitious twin-sister who sways the sceptre, Science, but that thou wearest a thinner veil of artificiality! But of both may we not inquire, in the interest of parodied man, why was the ground made to support so much of superficiality, and why was man made out of the ground instead of the water or the atmospheres.

Another absurdity that always suggests wings to us is the lisping pensive pulpiteer who is so abominably nice that he says Hades for Hell, and Lucifer instead of Devil, and whose strain of musty compliment to his self-conceited and semi-literary audience from year's end to year's end is so rank that it "smells to heaven."

And yet another is the brother, priest, or layman who breakfasts, dines and sups in Elysia while his feet are soiled with common dust or stuck fast in the mud of some sty of Epicurus. For the sake of getting his soul and body once more into neighborhood, if not juxtaposition, let Monsieur Pinaud, et al, hurry up with their aero-plane millinery and torsion power, and let all his friends wish him bon voyage into the skyey deep.

What a commentary upon some things we see here below was the unpretention and lowlihood of that most humanly divine and most divinely human son of Mary, Son of man. He who could touch lepers and be touched by harlots, who could receive sinners and be received by them; who withal could weep brine and startle from a pin wound, was a surprise and a scoffing to another age and to some parts of the world in this; but he lives and reigns and will still be rebuking Pharisaism to the end of time.

Perpetual Motion.

The itinerancy in bas-relief might be expressed as a system of wheels, the mutual impact of whose peripheries not only excite themselves to motion, but set the universe of things and persons about them in ceaseless whirl and counter-whirl. The movement may be concentric or eccentric; inward upon the heart of motion or outward upon the extremities of progress; but it is constant and powerful. Upon the plan of a center that is everywhere, and a circumference that is nowhere, and of spheres and multi-spheres that move by interaction, and are quite independent of any frictional force for locomotion, the great system of things that we call eternity was builded; and why not the moral scheme that has been set to solve its problem? The constellations go round in orbicular flight; each orb or sphere matching its neighbor, not in repose, which would be impossible, but in responsive motion; and so do the worlds, and the races, and the animal and vegetable harmonies, and the centuries and the seasons; and if the greatest movement of modern times had not done so also, it would have been manifestly out of joint with the divine order, and worthy of repudiation. It was a gracious providence, and not an effort of genius, however commanding, that decreed for the fair soul of the Oxford revival a body so congenial and so thoroughly adapted to its own and the world's need. Started rolling down the ages with motion, however gentle, it could never stop. Because it was round and self-adjustible, without cogs or bands, it would revolve and gain velocity by flight. The veriest Saul among the prophets might examine its record of record breaking, its spirituelle, or its machinery of frictionless surfaces, and chiefly the latter, and prophesy immortality for it. It has been called by factious rivals the great iron wheel, because of its supposed fatality in contact with the necks and limbs of its adherents, but nothing could be less truthful. It is pliant as air to that diamond element in Christian character which is resembled to the Exemplar, and becomes a destructive force only when pride, envy, ambition and covetousness hurl themselves before its advance like the worshipers of the Ganges. When we hear its enemies declaring against its feature of inexorableness, we think of eternity, and couple with that thought the reflection that it has sufficient virtue, at least, to attract the carping spite of those given to invective; and, when by captious insiders, we irresistibly turn our gaze from the magnanimous and uncomplaining parent to view the premature birth with a feeling something less than complacency. Men and angels, too, have rebelled against God and heaven, and why not against the most divine of earthly systems for saving the fallen? That it is hard for mortals to keep up with spheric motion is a statement that will not need repetition or proof, and while straggling is forbidden, it is not prohibited and but rarely punished. Still the picket line will go on into the darkness of heathen lands to pioneer with humble and frequent ray the oncoming constellations of truth.

Methodism will never want for men, because it is itself both a discoverer and a torch-bearer. It has declared war upon the powers of darkness, and the riches of its poverty abounds unto the glory of its conquests. The Spirit of the Almighty is in its rings and wheels, and it can never be eclipsed by its own light, or cease to enlighten the world, obeying that voice both of power and wisdom: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

In Memoriam.

Our hearts were indeed saddened to hear of Bro. B. F. Alexander's death. As presiding elder of the Shreveport district, he taught us to love him sincerely. A more faithful man to every call of duty while in that office would be difficult to find. He regarded his position as a sacred trust, and never faltered when the interests of the church he so much loved bade him go forward. To those who knew him well his very quaintness was a virtue. He took an especial interest in the younger ministers under his supervision and gave them wise counsel. There are many of them who will never forget his fatherly care. Now that he is gone, the lessons he taught are among our most precious treasures. May these serve the purpose he intended!

He was a pure man. If the outward conduct is an index of the heart within, he, indeed, was one of the elect "who shall see God." He was brave, true, and loyal. These are not idle expletives of mine, but fully express what all who knew him will say.

Blessings on his memory! May the richest, tenderest grace of God our Father be with his wife, daughter and son in this dark hour. I am assured that his beloved church in Louisiana will honor his memory with a suitable memoir. I bring this offering because I loved him.

S. J. DAVIES.

The Negro Question.

This, from the New Zealand Methodist, sounds like a note of war:

If the visit of our delegates to the Ecumenical Conference results in no other good, it will be a huge satisfaction to many in this distant colony to learn definitely the real condition of the negro population in the Southern States of America, and the attitude of the M. E. Church toward the whole question. The Rev. W. Morley has expressed his intention of visiting these States, and he is a man capable of forming as statesman-like an idea of the true position of affairs in as short a given time as any man we know. We may confidently expect, on his return, information upon which we may base some definite action as New Zealand Churches; if, as we believe, our negro brethren in Christ are still subjected to the most wicked and cruel treatment at the hands of many of the whites, who have only race hatred to plead as an excuse for their oppression.

The city council of Chicago has passed an ordinance incorporating a company to lay pipes underground to Waukesha Springs, to bring its medicinal waters to that busy city. Waukesha is eighty miles away, but the company engages to deliver not less than two millions of gallons a day. Chicago must be ahead of everything, or nothing.

"Heterophemy," a word invented by Richard Grant White, is saying one thing and meaning another. Candidates take to it, and call each other "heterophemists."

The first number of the Ocala Demand has been received at this office.

During the week this office had an appreciated call from Rev. Robert Harry, of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. J. L. Pierce is holding protracted services in the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, of which he is pastor.

Dr. B. Carradine's address is 2716 Dayton street, St. Louis, Mo. He gives a cheering account of his opening at First Church.

Rev. Wm. Wimberly, assisted by Rev. A. D. McVoy, Jr., is holding an interesting series of meetings at the Louisiana Avenue Church.

Bro. S. B. McCutcheon, of Shreveport, lay delegate to the Ecumenical from Louisiana, gave the ADVOCATE office a pleasant call on Monday last.

Brn. Johns, our pastor at Algiers, informs us that there will be a memorial service in that church of Rev. B. F. Alexander some time in November. Bro Alexander was pastor there in 1857, when the present church was built.

In giving news of the great Ecumenical Council of Methodists, at Washington City, the New Delta is away behind—say in the proportion of a paragraph to two columns—the Times-Democrat and the Picayune. Why is this thus?

The State University, under the continued presidency of Col. J. W. Nicholson, opened on Monday with the booming of cannon on the college lawn. The attendance is said to be larger than during any previous year, and arrivals continue.

The Ruston Progressive Age says, "It is currently reported that Louisiana State Lottery money purchased the outfit with which to print the Ocala Demand, to be edited by L. A. Traylor." And adds: "The fact that the paper is to be edited by Traylor guarantees its failure."

Dr. Inman W. Cooper publishes a register of his church at Hazlehurst, Miss., which shows it to consist of three hundred names, and to possess a splendid organization. Beyond statistics, the chief item of interest is a building committee for a new church, composed of forty persons.

Just as the ADVOCATE goes to press, we receive the sad news of the death of Dr. W. H. Potter, one of the Missionary Secretaries of the Church, South. He was one of our strongest men, and will be a great loss to the cause which he advocated so ably, and to the church. He died at Austell, Ga., Oct. 11.

The Buffalo Advocate has expressed itself as to the man for the presiding eldership. Here he is:

A man of broad views, deeply religious, thoroughly Methodistic in habit as well as in polity and doctrine, having a well-balanced mind, being above petty prejudices, a man who continues to study, one who has the power of generating enthusiasm among his preachers and people, full of faith and power, and daring to do great things for God.

Bro. Sawyer returned Saturday from Grand Prairie, sixty miles down the river, where he had been helping Bro. Scurlock in a meeting. He preached four days and nights, and left the altar crowded with mourners and the interest deepening and widening. About twenty had joined the church, and the indications were that a number more would unite with our church at that point. A large number have professed conversion. Bro. Scurlock has things well under way for the erection of a beautiful church, according to one of the church extension plans. When built it will be the first Southern Methodist Church from the Moreau Street Church to the Gulf of Mexico.

Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens' Craps Street parishioners found out by clandestine means that Oct. 8 was the twenty-fifth anniversary of his marriage with the elect lady who is the model mistress of his home, and this is what they did: With great enthusiasm they raided the manse, and among other things informed the young couple that the time was up, and that it would be quite useless for them, either now or hereafter, to simulate juvenility, or attempt to cover up the tracks of the calendar; at the same time bringing to view a beautiful and costly French clock. The gift is of oxidized silver of lovely ornamentation, and warranted to keep time for a quarter of a century or less. The marauders also brought with them ice cream, cakes and coffee, and made a night of it, leaving at about one A. M., or until they saw the bride and groom safely round the quarter-pace.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed, and Mr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipts of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

Christmas Offering for Missions.

Several of the Annual Conferences which have held their sessions this year have agreed to call on their congregations and Sunday-schools for a Christmas offering for missions. This offering is to be distinct from the regular collections, and to be used in meeting the obligations of the board. These obligations were occasioned by the efforts of the board to answer the call for re-enforcements coming from our mission fields. Strong re-enforcements were sent. God is blessing their labors, and it remains for the church to indorse the advance movements of those who have these important interests in charge. At no time have our missions been so prosperous as now. On every side new fields are being opened for occupation by our church. Men and women are needed in China, Mexico, Japan, and our missions nearer at home. In all these things we hear the voice of our Lord calling his church to "Go forward." We can not answer these calls until this burden is removed from our hoard. Will every Conference join in this call for a Christmas offering for missions? On that day, while we commemorate the coming "unto us of a Prince and Savior" by gifts to those we love, have we no gift for our Lord and for the cause for which his blood was shed? It may require an act of self-denial; but let us remember what Christ has given for us and a perishing world, and make our gratitude the measure of our gifts.

Will each pastor bring this matter, without delay, before his congregation and Sunday-school, that they may prepare for the Christmas offering? Will every superintendent, officer and teacher in our Sunday-schools, and all the workers in our Epworth Leagues, unite in this effort to extend our Redeemer's kingdom among all people?

We are sure the children of the church will respond if opportunity is offered.

Most earnestly we invoke the co-operation of all our church papers.

Respectfully, I. G. JOHN,
H. C. MORRISON,
W. H. POTTER.

Church Extension—Paine Loan Fund.

The notes and subscriptions to the Paine Loan Fund are nearly all due, and many of them are unpaid. This failure is largely attributable to the severe stringency of the times. The money is much needed to pay appropriations which were made to churches in the expectation that by this time it would be in hand. Those ought to have the money, and we appeal to the friends who have made these subscriptions to send in the amounts promised to us at once. Send directly to Rev. David Morton, secretary, 705 West Chestnut St., Louisville, Ky.

JAS. C. MORRIS, Ass't Sec.

Boils and Pimples and other affections arising from impure blood may appear at this season, when the blood is heated. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes the cause of these troubles by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and at the same time it gives strength to the whole system.

From the Holston Conference.

At the session of the Holston Conference, during the discussion of appropriations to the Payne and Lane Colored Institute, Bishop Galloway said: "There is no gospel in canonizing a man who will preach to darkies in Africa and ostracizing him when he preaches to them in America. To the young preachers, I say whenever you can preach to the negroes, do so. I have a reputation in my own country of which I am proud, and that is that I am a 'nigger preacher.' A colored brother once said to me: 'You don't preach like a white man. You preaches like a nigger. (Laughter.) I wish we had the religion even to go into their Sunday-schools and teach them. It's a mistake to think the colored people don't want a Southern preacher to preach to them. They are glad to have us. When a Southern preacher thinks it reflects upon his dignity to preach to the negroes, he had better ask himself whether he is called of God to preach or to keep silent."

The Conference adopted the committee report on temperance after striking out that portion referring to prohibition. The Board of Education stirred up a hornet's nest by reporting on the advisability of building more academies and delegating to trustees of Emery and Henry College the right to select presidents, and prescribe a course of study for their academies. Two-fifths of the Conference claiming this was a discrimination against Hiwassee College, kept the Conference-room hot with debate, threatening a fifty-year war in the Conference, until the more conservative members succeeded in having the report remanded to the committee, and amended by delegating the power referred to presidents of all Conference colleges. The report of the committee was adopted.

Sunday-School Convention.

The Sunday-school Convention for the northern half of the Meridian district was held at Lauderdale, on Sept. 24 and 25.

By the appointment of the presiding elder, Rev. John W. Chambers, of Enterprise, was made chairman. Marion circuit; East End, Meridian, and Meridian circuit did not seem to take any interest in this work. The brethren might have been as much benefited as were those who did attend.

The following subjects were discussed: "The Relation of the Superintendent to the Preacher in Charge," "The Qualification of Teachers," "The Best Method of Conducting a Sunday-school," "Object of Sunday-school Teaching," "How Old Ought a Child to Be before We May Look for Its Conversion?" "The Epworth League," "The Use of Our Hymn Book in the Sunday-school." The papers read on these subjects were excellent. The discussions were spirited and profitable. By request, Bro. Pugh will offer for publication his paper on the "Relation of the Superintendent to the Preacher in Charge." At times the whole convention felt the presence of the Holy Spirit.

President Anderson, of E. M. College, gave us a practical example as to "How to Teach a Bible Class." President Moore, of Binnsville, taught the "Intermediate Lesson." One old teacher said, after she had heard and participated in these two exercises, "How can I teach?"

Rev. T. L. Mellen preached to the parents on Thursday night. Rev. N. B. Harmon preached to the children at eleven o'clock, Friday. Results: A happy crowd of parents and children, with four additions to the church. Friday night Dr. C. G. Andrews preached to a full house on "The Voice of God."

So much good was accomplished by this convention that it was the unanimous opinion of all present that we must have a larger and longer convention next year. Everyone left with praises on their lips, determined to do a better work for God.

The Review of Reviews.

The Review of Reviews (New York: 13 Astor Place) is a superb publication and improves with age. Leading articles of the October number are, "A World Congress of Methodism," and "Mr. Stead on Hugh Price Hughes." The former is profusely illustrated, giving excellent portraits of the celebrities of Methodism in both the Old and New World, including all the Bishops of both branches of the American Church.

Amusing mistakes which, perhaps, might be as readily pardoned to the Knickerbocker as to the Britisher is the unsmiling physiognomy of Bishop Fitzgerald paraded above the name and title of his Los Angeles neighbor, Bishop Haygood, while Bishop Haygood's countenance looks regretfully down upon the Irish hull which describes him as the Bishop of Northern California. Yet, again, Bishop Key looks stern as Bishop Wilson, while the Baltimorean's countenance is plainly resenting liberties that somebody is taking with it. There is an excellent likeness, we opine, of Dr. Buckley, and also of Hugh Price Hughes. The article on the latter by Mr. Stead is con amore, and does honor even to the distinguished subject. Other features of this number is a stately symposium on James Russell Lowell, who seems to have acquired literary immortality by his death, and a splendid resume of "The Progress of the World," and "Current History in Caricature." The Review of Reviews is $2 a year, and twenty cents per copy at news stands.

The poets sing, in dainty rhymes,
Of summer days and sunny climes,
Of beauteous maidens, passing fair,
With whirling eyes and waving hair,
Till, near the end, you're apt to see—
'Tis but an "ad" for P. F. P.;

that is, Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the infallible and guaranteed remedy for all kinds of female weakness, which cures the ailments of feeble, "run-down" and debilitated women, and restores them to youthfulness and beauty once more. The price of this royal remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, is but $1.00 a bottle, and money refunded in every case if it doesn't give satisfaction. See guarantee on bottle-wrapper.

The Quarterly Review.

That scholarly and trenchant publication, The Quarterly Review of the M. E. Church, South, has been received, and the following is the table of contents: A Backwoods' Methodist Preacher, Chauncey Hobart, by W. H. Milburn; Life in the Shadow of Sin and Want, by Thomas Pate; Patrick Henry, by George W. Miles, Jr.; The Negro and Domestic Service in the South, by Mary V. Woodward; Government of the M. E. Church, South, by J. D. Barbee; The Two Sons of Oil, by Charles B. Carlisle; Murphy's Genesis, and the Documentary Hypothesis, by J. S. Bryan; The Lost Tribes of Israel, by J. M. Boland; The Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, by W. M. Leftwich; Foreign Influence in China, by A. P. Parker; Jesus and the Jews and Pilate, by H.; and last, but not least, The Editor's Table.

In this number Dr. Harrison, the editor, announces the preparation of a commentary on the Holy Scriptures. He declares that he was called to this work before entering the itinerancy, and that for more than forty years of patient toil he has been collecting the material requisite to the success of the undertaking. The fame of the learned Doctor's literary plunder, gathered from many ages and countries, and containing "treasuries of things both new and old," has gone out far in advance of this announcement, while, from all we can learn, his piety, scholarship and critical faculty are of the most approved kind, and worthy any finite enterprise. Doubtless, his commentary "of five or six volumes octavo, of eight or nine hundred pages each," will prove a valuable contribution both to the learning of the age and the orthodox literature of the church. The present number of the great quarterly is excellent. Price, $2.50 per annum.

This has often been spoken of as an age of shams. Certainly in nothing is there more deception than in some of the so-called hair restorers. They dry up the hair and aid, rather than overcome baldness. There is ample testimony that not a few of them are actually injurious.

The greatest thing in favor of the Louisiana Creole Hair Restorer is that it has the public confidence, having established a just claim in thousands of cases where it has been used, extending over a long period of years. Its gentle, stimulating properties invigorate the roots of the hair, and lubricate and strengthen the fibres. All the chemical constituents necessary to nourish the hair are found in this most admirable of preparations.

Under its influence the denuded scalp acquires again its powers; the loosened filaments take their place again, and the hair begins to grow, and rapidly assumes a glossy and vigorous appearance.

It is used all through the South where the beauty of the hair of the women is so familiar. No preparation offered surpasses it as a dressing. Mansfield Drug Co., Memphis, Tenn.

HOME LIFE.

THE REAL MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Who was it taught my wife to bake
A loaf of bread or fancy cake,
And appetizing dishes make?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when my wife was ill,
Bestowed upon her care and skill,
And saved to me a nurse's bill?
My mother-in-law.

Who then my little ones prepared
Each morn for school, who for them cared,
And all their little sorrows shared?
My mother-in-law.

Who was it, when their prayers were said,
So snugly tucked them into bed,
And, till they slept, beside them stayed?
My mother-in-law.

Who of my clothing then took care,
Who overlooked my underwear,
And kept each garment in repair?
My mother-in-law.

Who oft to me her aid has lent
To buy the coal and pay the rent?
Who'd gladly see me President?
My mother-in-law.

A loving grandmother is she,
A generous friend she's been to me,
Forever honored let her be,
My mother-in-law.

The Subtle Scepticism of To-Day.

At a Conference of the Evangelical Alliance in England, not long since, Dr. E. E. Jenkins, of the Wesleyan Church, spoke on the above subject as follows:

"Every age will generate its particular form of anti-Christ. But in no age did the incarnation of anti-Christ so nearly resemble an angel of light as in the discussions, the literature, and the movements of the present day. We have to contend with an infidelity which avows its unbelief from the pulpits and platforms of the church, which, with singular dexterity, dispenses with the logical formula of controversy, and instead of disputing them parodies most artfully the struggles, the aspirations, and the victories of faith, impressing upon them the verisimilitude of story and song. The public will not read treatises, they are scared by the very sound of theology; but they will read a novel, or an article in a popular journal; and the Satanic angel of light enters our homes, joins the family circle, and aims to corrupt the sacred simplicity of our sons and daughters.

"It is almost impossible for the popular eye to discriminate through the mask of a charming literature the ghastly presence of anti-Christ and atheism. The one stumbling-block in the way of the acceptance of Christ's divinity is the miracle as such. Let the resurrection of Jesus be proved, and the reception of all fallible revelation follows. The difficulty of reason in accepting a miracle confronts us to-day; not presenting the coarser form of an objective resistance, but approaching us with insinuations of agreement and sympathy, affecting to make us sharers in a triumph which science had rendered inevitable. It is not likely that any change in spirit and posture will blind us to these subtle encroachments of infidelity. If we accept the self-revelations of Jesus as sane and sincere, the acknowledgment of his divinity becomes inevitable; if we deny his supernatural union with God, with that denial comes, by an implication equally irresistible, a charge of imposition against the Lord Jesus himself, and of a conspiracy to deceive against the apostles and founders of the church: in other words, those renowned masters and judges of morality violate, under the most solemn and responsible motives of genuineness, the veriest rudiments of good faith. May the Spirit of Jesus irradiate the church with new aspects of the personal majesty of the Son of God! As the divinity of Christ is the authority of the gospel, so the atonement of Christ is the remedial provision of the gospel. The deity and atonement of Christ are inseparable revelations. In the atonement of the Word made flesh the divine love assumes a form which, above all other methods of address, awakens most readily the popular sympathy. The sacrificial feature of our redemption is not a part of the gospel; it is itself the gospel. The men who confronted its first introduction were thinkers in this particular region of thought as profound and enlightened as its modern adversaries. But whet the apostles affirmed concerning it we, with the history of eighteen centuries behind us, can corroborate: it is the power of God and the wisdom of God. A gospel for all men must, in the principles of its operations, provide for the condition of most men, which is poverty both of knowledge and of material resource; with the labor, the weakness, and the many hardships of an inferior position. Among other wonders that accompanied and established the mission of Jesus is the crowning marvel: 'The poor have the gospel preached unto them' (Matt. xi, 5). There is no other gospel for the rich that I know of, or for the learned either.

"The nature and extent of the Christian enterprises, the spiritual activities, now pervading the land are very extraordinary. There are no depths of social need which the church is not laboring to explore, no problem or social reform which she is not attempting to master; she has an ever-increasing army of workers, men and women fighting a noble fight against ignorance, vice, and brutal violence, against the tyranny of those whose greed presses the heart and the hope out of labor, against the seductions that decoy youth and childhood into paths of dissipation and ruin, against every form of unholy conspiracy and unjust suffering. No power attracts the poor, and the wicked, and the abandoned, like the influence of the Christian worker; no agencies have effected reforms so rapid and complete as the manifold labors of Christian organizations. What is it that animates these bands of men and women that go about doing good? It is not the example of a dead moralist, but the love and presence of a risen Christ."

THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.—Unless your religion changes you, makes you honest in business, pious behind counters, temperate at dinner tables, loyal to your country, affectionate to your family, neighborly in your community, conscientious at the ballot-box, patient in affliction, humble, cheerful and hopeful everywhere and always; unless it links you in brotherhood with the poorest of God's children; unless it leads you on errands of mercy to hovels and hospitals and prisons, as well as to cushioned pews and sacramental boards; unless you live Christ on week days as well as worship him on sabbath days, then we had better take a look into our religious life and see if it will stand the judgment of the Lord Jesus.—Southern Churchman.

Pleasure and Happiness.

BY J. W. HARMON, D. D.

Pleasure or happiness necessarily carries with it a special correspondence to the character and tastes of those to whom it is received as pleasure. Pleasure in its relation to this brief existence proves to be unsatisfying, because death hangs black, crapey folds over it, and throws out its signals of distress.

By invitation I crossed the threshold of a luxuriantly furnished homestead. Noble men were there; lovely women and beauteous maidens were dressed in silks and creamy white; while the music, the dance and the mirth seemed the embodiment of pleasure and happiness. The rarest flowers pervaded the air with a subtle aroma, and no thought of unhappiness, no shadow of disaster seemed near. Happiness in its highest worldly conception was enthroned crowned with flowers and filled all their hearts. A few months later, and another invitation called me to that delightful residence; but what a change! All faces were shadowed with grief; all hearts beat like muffled drums; all speech was uttered with bated breath; folds of crape, fit representative of the gloom that oppressed all hearts, was visible all around me. Sorrow, with its keen, cutting edge, had cut so deep into human lives that tears were flowing. Alas! pleasure and happiness had folded their wings and fled away. The pale horse and his rider had dashed into that home and trampled out the life of the mother and wife, and a sorrow, without hope, had left mourners to bewail their loss.

Must these ghastly thoughts, born of death, forever trouble men's minds and give no bright hope to the future? I studied mental philosophy, but rose up dissatisfied. I studied medical philosophy, but gathered nothing satisfactory. I ranged over whole fields of science and literature, I essayed to dig down to the bedrock of human hopes and expectations, and I found nothing that met the demands of the soul. Weary of soul and foot-sore, I came across a profound philosopher one day, only thirty-three years of age, who tore off the crape, dispelled the gloom and solved the problem of life and death, with the sublimest thoughts ever conceived by man; and though a Nazarite, and born in the city of Bethlehem, yet, by a divine right born of suffering and death, he led me first to his empty tomb, and then to the sonree of all happiness, and I stood charmed with the visions of glory he spread out before me. I shall never forget that meeting with the Nazarene.

Figures That Talk.

Statistics of the "Beer Industry," as furnished by the government, will arrest the attention of the thoughtful. First, as to the total quantity manufactured during 1890, 27,561,941 barrels, net increase of 2,442,091 barrels over 1889. This is about half a barrel annually for every man, woman, and child in the land. There are human beings who probably require a barrel a week to satisfy their refined thirst.

New York, with a population of 5,911,853, requires 8,910,674 barrels, which is nearly a barrel and a half per capita. New Jersey, with a population of 1,444,933, consumes 1,586,266 barrels. Kansas stands next to New Jersey in population, having 1,427,096. Kansas took exactly 2,110 barrels. New Hampshire, Maine, and Vermont form one internal revenue district, and have a combined population of 1,328,213. They consumed last year 370,856 barrels of beer. The single State of Wisconsin, population 1,315,497, consumes 2,313,201 barrels. Minnesota, with a population of 1,301,826 in all, got along reasonably well with 356,116 barrels. The Southern States took very little of the increase, South Carolina showing an actual decrease.

There is no subject before the American political world approaching in importance to the problem how to suppress the liquor traffic.

The most enthusiastic Prohibitionist falls of an adequate conception of the imminensity of the evil to be dealt with and the consequent necessity of prompt and efficient action. The vast majority of our people are in a state of apathy concerning this subject, scarcely less astounding than dangerous. When we say that the direct waste caused in this country by the saloon is not less than $1,000,000,000 annually, we have only approached the confines of the subject. When we add that the indirect waste resulting from the loss of productive labor, and the cost of that large portion of the machinery of justice necessitated by the existence of the saloon, are not less than another $1,000,000,000 yearly, we have only entered upon the subject. When we have said that a ghastly procession of 2,000 men and women march weekly into drunkards' graves, if not unwept, yet unhonored and unsung, we have only intimated how tremendous the evil is.

Yet multiplied millions of our fellow-countrymen deem their whole duty done when they advocate and practice total abstinence, utterly ignoring the patent political aspects of the question.—Demorest's Family Magazine.

Reaching Non-Church-Goers.

The Watchman makes two points on this subject that church-goers may ponder with profit:

"One is for all the Christians in a community to attend church faithfully themselves. The sight of a large proportion of the members of a church, say even nine-tenths, loyally acknowledging the claims of religion upon their time, their effort, their attendance, by being regularly in their places on Sunday and at the mid-week prayer meeting, would produce more moral effect upon the average American community than any number of sermons on church-going that any ministers in the land could preach. If there is anything that impresses the world, it is downright earnestness and constancy in Christian people. It is about useless to invite a non-church-goer to become an attendant at divine worship, if the one inviting him really cares so little about church-going that on the prayer-meeting evening he is at a lodge or a club or making a social call, or if Sunday finds his place in church unnecessarily vacant. A revival of religion generally begins in an increased interest in divine things on the part of Christians; an increase of church-going on the part of the community at large usually accompanies greater devotion to the House of God on the part of Christians.

"Another method that seldom fails is for Christians to show and feel more interest in the spiritual condition of the non-church-goer than in getting him simply to attend church. Church-going is as often the result of religious interest as it is the cause of that interest. The public services of religion are a means of grace, but personal spiritual conversation with the impenitent is also a means of grace. We are not at liberty to rest satisfied with inviting the religiously indifferent to attend church in the hope that they may find good there. A loving presentation of the claims of Christ, in which nothing is said about church-going, may do more to awaken that thirst for God which brings a man to the House of God, than any invitation to attend 'our church.' There is a spiritual reality in a personal appeal to a man to become a Christian that somehow is lacking in the most courteously extended invitation to attend 'our church.'"

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.

BABY HAS GONE TO SCHOOL.

The baby has gone to school; ah me!
What will the mother do,
With never a call to button or pin,
Or tie a little shoe?
How can she keep herself busy all day
With the little "hindering thing" away?

Another basket to fill with lunch,
Another "good-by" to say,
And the mother stands at the door to see
Her baby march away,
And turns with a sigh that is half relief
And half a something akin to grief.

She thinks of a possible future morn,
When the children one by one
Will go from their home out into the world
To battle with life alone,
And not even the baby be left to cheer
The desolate home of that future year.

She picks up garments here and there,
Thrown down in careless haste,
And tries to think how it would seem
If nothing were displaced;
If the hours were always as still as this,
How could she bear the loneliness?

A Boy's Thoughts about Sunday-School.

Johnnie Crum says he is "going on to nine years old," and being asked by his teacher to write a "piece" on the benefits of Sunday-schools gave his views as follows:

Benneyfit 1. Sunday Sckools is a grate benneyfit to childrens fathers and mothers. It gives em peece and happyness. Every Sunday morning my Pa and Ma gets up late coz Pa is always tired Sundays. After breakfast Pa always says, come hussel round children and go to Sunday Sckool, for Pa is tired and wants a little peece and rest Sunday. Then Pa goes and lays down on the sofy and smokes and reads papers all the forenoon. Ma she sees to gettin dinner, for Pa says he must have a good dinner on Sundays anyway. Ma has to take care of the baby too, for the hired gal is a cathlick and says she won't stay home from Church fer nobody, and Ma bein a Protestan has to mind her.

Benneyfit 2. Sunday Sckools save childrens Pas and Mas from going to church. One day the minister was up to our house and he told Pa and Ma they ort to go to church. And Pa says, O, I always send all my children to Sunday Sckool, and guess that will have to do. And so Ma and Pa don't go to Church, but Ma says she would like to.

Benneyfit 3. Sunday Sckools save childrens payrents a good deal of money. When the minister told Pa he ort to help pay the church expenses, Pa said, O I give my children a nickle a peece every Sunday to take to Sunday Sckool. But the minister said, yes, but the children get it all back again in Cards and Books and Picknicks and Krismas trees. And Pa said well it is all I can afford.

Benneyfit 4. Sunday Sckools saves the big boys and girls from going to church. When the boys get big enuff to smoke and to not mind their Pas, then they stop going to Sunday Sckools. Only they go to church some times when the girls go along, and then they all set in back seats and chew gum. My Pa told Jim my big brother that he ort to go to church reglar. But Jim said there ain't no need of my going more'n there is of your going. I have as much rite to stay at home as you have. But Pa said he was tired of Sundays. Pa keeps a store, but every day he says times is so hard he don't sell much and don't have much to do.

Benneyfit 5. Sunday Sckools do a great deal of good to children. If it warnt for them they wouldn't know nothing. For their Payrents hain't got no time to teech em. Children learn songs and verses and things. If they go reglar and don't miss they get big pay fer learning to be good. But when I am a little bigger I am going to do as Pa does and stay at home Sundays, and smoke and read the papers and have some of Mas big dinners. Ma gets awfully tired to all the time, and would like to have a little rest. But then Ma is a woman, and Pa says it is her duty to be tired. I'm glad I ain't a woman.

Benneyfit 6. There is a great many more benneyfits to Sunday Sckools but I don't know any more.—Young Churchman.

MR. EDITOR: I want to be the second boy to subscribe one dollar to the Children's Scholarship in Millsaps College. I expect to be educated there myself, and would like to help some poor boy who is not able to help himself. Mother has a Sunday-school class of boys about my age, and they have all promised to make one dollar to give on this scholarship. I think it would be a great thing if all the boys and girls would help in this enterprise. It would be much better than spending their money for candy and such things. We ought to be proud to have our names on the list of subscribers to this scholarship. Col. Taylor commenced work on the college yesterday.

Yours truly, ETHELBERT H. GALLOWAY.

MR. EDITOR: I want to answer the question about the boy's basket of nuts. I think the answer is forty-nine; but there seems to be a little discrepancy about there being one over each time, because when he counted by fives, there would be one less, or four over.

Your little friend, ERNIS DAVIS.
Arnold, Oct. 5.

"I'M RATHER DO IT."—Passing along the street the other day I saw a little boy carrying a basket which seemed to tax his strength to his utmost capacity. Indeed, at times it looked by his jerks and extra efforts as if its weight would bear him down beneath it. I observed to him:

"My boy, that basket is rather heavy for you to carry, is it not?"

"Yes, sir," he replied. "But I'd rather carry it than that my mother should have to do it."

Brave boy! He had the right idea of life, although his clothes and general appearance would not lead any one to suspect it. How many so-called accomplished young ladies, playing the piano or doing fancy-work while their mother is busy with the cares of the household, might learn a lesson from such a boy! Daughters, think how you can help to make your mother's life and labors lighter and less a burden.—Selected.

"What makes you fret so, is any sing matter wid you, Daisy?"

Daisy: "Yes; I am so worried."

Ben: "What wor'lee you."

Daisy: "Your noise worries me; I am sick and can't bear it."

Ben: "Well, Daisy, you jus' ask God—he will help you."

Cold Waves.

The phrase "cold wave" was invented by the Signal Service to be applied to decided falls in temperature occurring successively in sections of the country over which approaching cold air currents are expected to move. It does not represent any particular intensity of cold, but rather a decided fall within a limited time. The cause of the cold wave must be obvious to readers of this paper from the frequent well defined storms, technically described by the simple word "low" (because in the centre of storms the barometer is lowest), shown on the weather chart. Storms imply an indraught of air toward the storm's centre or vortex, this indraught extending as far as the storm's influence reaches. It is generally known without the aid of a weather-map that warmer weather precedes a storm and colder weather follows it. On the map this is always illustrated by the northward curve of the temperature lines in front and the southward curve of these lines in rear of the storm. Bearing in mind that the storm is an immense whirl, drawing the moist, warm air from southern seas and warmer lands up into its front portion, and the dry, cold air from northern latitudes, reinforced by a descent of the colder air of the upper regions of the atmosphere, down into its rear portion, the ensue of temperature changes attending the passage of a storm is not difficult to understand. When, therefore, a storm appears in the Far West or Northwest, we naturally look for rising temperature until the storm centre has passed to the eastward of our meridian. The fact that a cold wave will follow it may already be apparent on the map by the reports from the Western British Possessions, or even our own extreme Northwestern States. Cold waves can come only out of the front of an area of high barometer. They are necessarily associated with clearing weather and increasing pressure from a storm. Their passage south and eastward is coincident with the movement of high barometers. It will have been noted by those interested in the weather changes that the paths of cold waves are different. Some press eastward across the lakes to New England; others southward from Manitoba to Texas; and still others come surging down the Missouri Valley across the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys toward the South Atlantic States. With the view of giving cold wave warnings from the Weather Bureau more value and prominence, General Greely has determined to lessen the number of such warnings and confine them to the more pronounced cases. He has issued a general order to forecasting officials setting forth his instructions for their guidance. In future warnings of cold waves are to be issued from the Signal Office at Washington when it expects that they will be so sudden and sharp as to interfere materially with the comfort of the community or cause damage. A cold wave is now defined to be a fall in temperature, over an extensive area of twenty degrees in twenty-four or twenty-eight degrees in forty-eight hours, and to the freezing point or below. Warnings of cold waves will be issued when it is expected that the area affected will exceed 100,000 square miles in extent, and in well defined cases for a lesser area. Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Indiana are included in the district in which the fall of temperature must be eighteen degrees or more and to thirty-four degrees or below to justify a cold-wave warning.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

How to Preserve Health.

One of the best ways to keep in good health, says the Monthly Bulletin, is not to think or worry too much about it. If you feel strong and well, don't imagine that some insidious disease may be secretly attacking your constitution. Many people are like the inexperienced traveler, who anxiously inquired about the symptoms of sea sickness, and how he should know when he had it. One generally knows when he is sick, and frequently many supposably alarming symptoms prove, upon investigation, to be either perfectly natural occurrences or of very slight importance.

Eat and drink what you desire, as long as it agrees with you. Your stomach knows pretty well what it can digest. Plain, simple food is desirable, as a general thing, but the luxuries of the table, in moderation, will do no harm.

Alcoholic beverages are not fit for habitual use. They are true medicines, and should only be used like any other medicines—under the advice of a physician. As a regular beverage they can do no good, but will almost certainly do harm.

Take all the sleep you can get, but remember that the necessary amount varies greatly for different persons. Some must sleep at least nine hours, while others thrive under six. Only don't rob yourself of what you really need. The "midnight oil" is a terribly expensive illuminant to burn either for purposes of labor or study.

Always treat a common cold with great respect. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred it will get well any way, but the hundredth cold, if neglected, may lead to bronchitis, pneumonia, or consumption. It is best to take no such chances.

If you are sick enough to need any medicine at all, beyond the simple remedies familiar to all, you are sick enough to need the attendance of a physician.

By all means take as much exercise as you can, and be in the open air as much as possible. Outdoor life is the natural condition of mankind, and the more one can have of it, the better. The practice must not be carried to extremes, however. There are many days when one is much better off in a warm, comfortable, well-ventilated house than trying to take outdoor exercise in a mid-winter storm, or under a July sun, and no one ever strengthened his constitution by sleeping with his bed-room window open with the outside temperature at zero, or allowing the snow to drift in upon his pillow.

Fresh air, sunlight, good and sufficient food, pure water, outdoor exercise, temperance in all things, and a cheerful disposition, are the chief remedies in nature's dispensatory, and are worth more than all the drugs and medicines of the shops. Dr. Holmes has truly said that if nine-tenths of all the medicines, patent, proprietary and otherwise, in the world were poured into the ocean, it would be all the better for mankind and all the worse for the fishes; and the best physician can do little without good nursing, and thus aid nature in throwing off disease.

Said a mother to her little girl, who evidently objected to seeing another child petted: "Why, Sadie, I believe you're jealous." "No, mama," she replied, "I'm not jealous, but I don't feel comf'able."
